TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Doesn't Want Colonies.

New York, Feb. 23.—"In case of emergency, Great Britain would not spend $5 to hold Canada and Australia as her colonies," said Dean I. W. Russell of the University Law School, in a speech before the People's Institute.

"As a matter of fact, England has found the United States a much more profitable friend of hers as a separate nation than as a vassal, and she might not be unwilling to lose the Dominion and the Antipodes on the same ground."

Looking For Bomb Makers.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 23.—B. Klein Singh, an educated Hindu in the service of the Imperial Government at Simla, recently visited Vancouver and adjacent cities for the purpose of investigating the alleged manufacture of bombs by East Indians for use in the revolutionary movement in India.

He proceeded from here to Seattle and thence to San Francisco. He is now in Honolulu.

Was Holland Going West?

Winnipeg, Feb. 23.—It is believed that Chris. M. Holland, alias David Newhall, arrested in Philadelphia on a charge of forgery on an extensive scale, was about to visit Winnipeg. Two letters await a Geo. F. Newhall at the Royal Alexandria, one from Philadelphia, evidently written in a feminine hand marked "To be called for," and the other from the War Department at Washington.

Pullman Rates Too High.

Kingstonians are asked to pay 75 cents to Toronto, and 90 cents to Montreal. It is considered unfair and the Board of Trade will seek to have the old rate of 50 cents a seat restored.

Insurance Men's Views.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—Messrs. J. K. Macdonald of the Confederation Life and Thomas Bradshaw of the Imperial Life, who presented the views of the life insurance companies last session, in regard to the proposed amendments in the Dominion Insurance Act, are in the city to-day in connection with the same subject.

Tornado In Kansas.

Wichita, Kans., Feb. 23.—The Missouri Pacific depot and four buildings at Reece, Kans., a village 40 miles east of Wichita, were destroyed by a wind storm yesterday. No one was killed and no one was seriously injured.

The property loss in the district northwest of Reece will be heavy.

Earthquake In Spain.

Alicante, Spain, Feb. 23.—Severe earthquakes, which came while the people were assembled at mass in the village church on Sunday, caused a panic among the congregation, who rushed to the doors, throwing down and trampling under foot a score or more of women and children. The furniture in the house was overturned and crockery and window panes broken.

At Crevillente, a town of 10,000 inhabitants, situated about 18 miles from Alicante, houses rocked and swayed at an alarming angle, and the people ran to the countryside in dire terror. They are now camping out in the open fields.

Troops Fight Strikers.

Hong Kong, Feb. 23.—Laborers engaged in constructing the Canton-Hankan Railway began rioting yesterday because the wages of some of the men who had been absent from work were withheld. Troops were called out to suppress the disorder, and in a clash which ensued 25 laborers were injured. Three soldiers are missing.

Kills His Four Children.

Mondovi, Wis., Feb. 23.—Hans E. Hanson, a farmer living near Strun, cut the throats of his four children, a boy and three girls, whose age range from five to fifteen years, yesterday with a butcher knife.

He followed this crime by stabbing several horses and cows, firing the barn and house and then cut his own throat.

Vancouver as Wheat Port.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 23.—F. W. Peters of the C.P.R. is here to arrange terminals for the handling of the wheat. He says two million bushels have already been ordered to be shipped this way, some of it having arrived. He adds that practically all Alberta wheat must come this way, specially to relieve eastern pressure.

C.P.R. Pacific Service.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 23.—C. E. E. Ussher of the C.P.R. made the announcement yesterday that during the coming summer there will be three daily trains each way on the C.P.R., but only two of them will be transcontinental. The third will be a direct connection between Vancouver and St. Paul, via Moosejaw.

New Zealand's Unemployed.

Auckland, Feb. 23.—Speaking to a demonstration of unemployed, who urged the stopping of assisted immigration into New Zealand, Premier Ward pointed out that the Government never assisted others than agriculturalists and domestic servants and that the country could carry twenty millions of people.

10,000 Cholera Cases.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 23.—The cholera, which has now been epidemic here for 160 days, yesterday reached the 10,000 mark.

There has been 3,928 deaths from this disease in St. Petersburg, the highest number of new cases in one day being 44 and the lowest nine.

Consecration March 25.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The new bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Toronto, Ven. Archdeacon Sweeny, will be consecrated in his new position on March 25 next.

This is the decision of the Bishop of Ottawa, senior bishop, whose duty is to decide this.

Six Crushed to Death.

How Waters Have Receded.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 23.—Workmen employed in digging a 15-foot cutting through a hill in Hastings Townsite on Rupert road, south of the Great Northern tracks, came across a layer of soft stone which was entirely composed of the petrified remains of sea worms and clam shells.

This discovery goes to show that Hastings townsite, which is now at a fair elevation, must at one time have been buried under the sea.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"Where from?" demanded the old clerk, the paper rattling in his thin fingers.

"I don't know. I'm from Chicago avenue," said the boy, with proper impudence. He took one look at Droom's face as the man handed the slip back to him and then hurried downstairs, far less impudent at heart than he had been.

Droom recognized the handwriting on the envelope as James Bansemer's. It was the first time his employer had communicated with him in this manner. He tore open the envelope and anxiously read the brief missive.

"I've got to go to the office," he said, surprise still lingering in his face. "It's important business—a consultation with—er—with an important eastern client."

"Gee! It's tough to turn out this kind of a night. I'm going your way, Mr. Droom. Come on. I'll take the car down with you."

"I—I won't be ready for some time yet."

"Oh, well, I'll say good night then."

Eddie Deever departed, chuckling to himself as he made his way to the U—— building, determined to learn what he could of this unusual summons.

But Droom was too crafty. Bansemer's letter had asked him to come to Rector's restaurant and not to the U—— building. The command was imperative.

CHAPTER XII.

FOLLOWING close upon Mrs. Cable's visit to his office in the afternoon, Bansemer presented himself at her home in the evening, urbane, courtly, but characteristically aggressive. Her action in bearding him in his den was not surprising, even though it might have been considered unusual. He had been well aware for some time that she was sorely uneasy and that it was only a question of time when she would make the expected advances. Since the announcement of Jane's engagement Bansemer had been punctiliously considerate. And yet underneath his faultless exterior Mrs. Cable felt that she could recognize the deadly poise of other intentions. She lived in fear that they would spring upon her as if from the dark and that she would be powerless to combat them. Something stronger than words or even intuition told her that James Bansemer was not to be turned aside by sentiment.

Driven at last to the point where she felt that she must know his intentions, she boldly ventured into his consultation room, a trembling but determined creature whose flesh quivered with chill despite the furs that foiled the wintry winds. Elias Droom passed her on into the private room, with a polite grin that set her teeth on edge.

She left the building fifteen minutes later, nursing a wild but forlorn hope that James Bansemer meant no evil after all. Without hesitation she told him plainly that she came to learn the precise nature of his attitude toward herself and the girl. Bansemer's resentment appeared too real to have been simulated. He was almost harsh in his response to the inference. In the end, however, he was a little less than tender in his efforts to convince her that she had cruelly misjudged him. She went away with a chill in her heart dislodged but not dissolved. When he asked if she and Mr. Cable would be at home that night for a game of cards she felt obliged to urge him to come. It was not until she was in the carriage below that she remembered that David Cable was to attend a big banquet at the Auditorium that night and that Jane would be at the theater with friends.

Bansemer smiled serenely as he escorted her to the door. "We will not permit anything to happen which might bring misery to the two beings so dear to us," he assured her at parting.

Shortly after 8 he entered the Cable home. He had gone to Chicago avenue beforehand to send a telegram east. From the corner of Clark street he walked across town toward the lake, facing the bitter gale with poor grace. In Washington place he passed two men going from their cab into the Union club. He did not look at him, nor did he see that they turned and stared after him as he buffeted his way across Dearborn avenue. One of the men was Bobby Rigby, the other Denis Harbert of New York.

"It's the same Bansemer," said Harbert as they entered the club. "I'd know him in a million."

At the Cables' a servant on opening the door announced that Mr. Cable was not at home.

"Say Mr. Bansemer, if you please."

He removed his coat and was standing comfortably in front of the blazing logs in the library when she came down.

"I thought the night was too dreadful for any one to venture out unless"— she was saying as she gave him her hand.

"A night indoors and alone is a thousandfold more dreadful than one outdoors in quest of good company," interrupted Bansemer. He drew up chairs in front of the fireplace and stood by waiting for her to be seated.

"I had forgotten that Mr. Cable was to attend a banquet at the Auditorium," she explained nervously, confident, however, that he felt she had not forgotten.

"To be sure," he said. "This is the night of the banquet. I was not invited."

"I tried to telephone to ask you to come tomorrow night. The storm has played havoc with the wires. It is impossible to get connection with any one." A servant appeared in the doorway.

"You are wanted at the telephone, Mrs. Cable. Shall I say you will come?"

Flushing to the roots of her hair, the mistress of the house excused herself and left the room. Bansemer leaned back in his chair and smiled. She returned a few minutes later with a fluttering apology.

"What a terrible night it must be for those poor linemen," she said. "I remember what it meant to be a railroad lineman in the west years ago. The blizzards out there are a great deal more severe than those we have here, Mr. Bansemer. Just think of the poor fellows who are repairing the lines tonight. Doesn't it seem heartless?"

"It does, indeed. And yet I dare say you've been scolding them bitterly all evening. One seldom thinks it worth while to be merciful when the telephone refuses to obey. It's only a true philanthropist who can forgive the telephone. However, I am grateful to the blizzard and happy. Fair weather would have deprived me of pleasure."

"I am sorry Mr. Cable is not at home," she said quickly.

"I doubt if I shall miss him greatly," said he.

"He expects to leave early. He isn't well," she hastened to say. "Don't you want to smoke?"

"A cigarette if you don't mind. By the way, where is my future daughter-in-law? Surely I may see her tonight."

"I do remember it now. He left the apartment quite early. Then I have Fernmore to thank for—we are alone." He leaned forward in his chair and flicked the cigarette ashes into the fire, his black eyes looking into hers with unmistakable intentness.

"You assured me today that you would be fair," she said, with strange calmness, meeting his gaze unflinchingly.

"I am fair. What more can you ask?" with a light laugh.

"Why did you say today that I had nothing to fear from you?" she demanded.

"You have nothing to fear. Why should you fear me? For twenty years your face has not been out of my memory. Why should I seek to hurt you, then? Why should I not rejoice in the tie that binds our interests—our lives, for that matter? Come, I ask if I am not fair?"

Her face became pale, her heart cold. She understood. The mask was off. He veiled his threat in the simplest words possible. The purpose looked through with greedy disdain for grace.

"I can offer no more than I offered today," she said.

"Do you suppose I would accept money in payment for my son's peace of mind?" declared Bansemer, with finely assumed scorn. "You offered me $10,000. You will never know how that hurt me, coming from you. Money? What is money to me in an affair like this? I care more for one tender touch of your fingers than all the money in the world! You and you alone can mold every impulse in me. For half my life I have been hated. No one has given me a grain of love. I must have it. For years you have not been out of my mind—I have not been out of yours."

"Stop!" she cried angrily. "You have no right to say such things to me. You have been in my mind all these years, but, oh, how I have hated you!"

GIVE THE CHILDREN PLENTY OF FRUIT

It Helps to Keep Them Well.

In a growing, active child the cells of which the body is composed are being worn out—and replaced — very rapidly. This dead tissue must be gotten rid of somehow, and the danger is that the eliminating organs—the Bowels, Kidneys and Skin—may not do their work well enough. Then the blood becomes poisoned and the child does not thrive.

Nothing has such an invigorating effect on these organs as ripe fruit juices. Apple juice increases the action of the kidneys; other fruit juices stimulate the liver to secrete more bile, and bile produces easy and regular movements of the bowels; others stir up the glands of the skin to throw off more waste matter.

The difficulty is that to get these effects a great deal of fruit must be eaten, and the excess of pulp and woody matter may upset the digestion. The better way is to give the children "Fruit-a-tives", which are tablets made of concentrated fruit juices with valuable tonics added.

"Fruit-a-tives" have the combined effect of the different fruit juices, helping all the eliminating organs to work properly, curing Constipation, toning up the system, and keeping the children plump and rosy. 25c. for a trial box. 50c. for regular size—6 boxes for $2.50. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TOLD ABOUT MYSTERIES OF DEEP SEA

Last evening before the Charlotte street Methodist Epworth League, Mr. G. A. Cornish, B.A., of the Normal school gave a most interesting and instructive address on the "Mysteries of the Deep Sea."

It was a novel subject, and because so little is known of the real conditions of deep sea life the address was unique.

Mr. Cornish dealt with his topic in a manner that left no doubt but that he had spent much time in years past in striving to obtain at first hand knowledge of the great ocean. His own observations added spice to the talk as all like to hear a story from the lips of the participant.

Commenting on the fact that we who live in the day have knowledge of the daylight animals and birds, must remember the fact that there is a night variety of probably just as large a family. And as we know of the land animals and their purposes, characteristics, there is the great family in the sea of which we have but fragmentary knowledge.

A common error was the statement that parts of the ocean were bottomless. This is not so as the ocean has been measured in thousands of places and bottom always found, sometimes as far as 6 to 7 miles though. The enormous pressure of the ocean is noteworthy. Mr. Cornish illustrated this by a personal experience. A bottle has been prepared by his party of investigators with the object of obtaining a sample of ocean water at a depth of several hundred fathoms. The cork was to remain in position until the proper depth was reached, when by a device it could be removed, the water allowed to enter and the cork return to its position. The bottle was lowered, but on its return was found to be crushed to atoms. The enormous pressure from without had broken it. To obtain water thus, iron bottles of several inches thickness were necessary.

Samples of the sea bottom had been obtained in numberless places. All analyzed practically the same. A thousand miles from land to land, dust blown by wind was known. However, that finest of dust, the ashes of volcanic origin were often thrown to great heights where the upper swift moving currents carried them to great distances. These settled on ocean, and as ages have passed formed quite a layer on the sea bottom. Meteoric matter the dust of so-called "shooting stars" also formed a considerable proportion of the bottom. Then in certain parts of the ocean the countless shells of tiny animals, the microscopic life of the upper waters, became the main portion on the bottom of the ocean in the nature of chalk.

Light penetrates the ocean but a few hundred feet. The depths of the ocean are black as darkest night. While there is no vegetation at these great depths, there are countless varieties of animal life. And the fish here have eyes, large, well developed ones. Why? They possessed a light of their own or could produce a phosphoresence by movement on the water.

Among many interesting animals of the sea the Squid was described. This fish, a first cousin to the devil-fish, was of prime importance to the cod industry. It is the bait. Its peculiar shape with its arms and sucker bands declared its relationship to the ferocious animal of the larger devil-fish. Mr. Cornish described the habits of this fish its seasons, and the methods employed in capturing it. This led to some incidents in the habits of the fishermen of our Nova Scotia shores which were most entertaining.

One of the very peculiar of the ocean animals was the "All-mouth," as commonly called. A very large mouth indeed that enabled it to engulf a goose swinging on the surface. The body seemed covered with what appears to be a mass of weeds. The first rests on bottom, its body thus easily mistaken, and drawing forward its wonderful long narrow back fin with its silvered point so that it comes just over its mouth it awaits the curious little fish who wants to investigate the cause of the light. He is indeed a curious fisherman.

On conclusion of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was passed on motion of Mr. Herbert Collier and seconded by Mr. Cox.

REUBEN AND HIS SWEETHEART

Big Rural Comedy at the Grand Next Saturday

The play, Reuben and His Sweetheart, is a big fun show with a touch of nature and pathos running through it. The scenery was made and painted especially for the production and adds much to the naturalness. Si and Mariah are two very prominent Down East characters that will remind you of the good old days way back home; Bill Taylor, a hero in rags, is one of those hard luck characters that is full of adventures and tends much to the comedy. Reuben and His Sweetheart are both comedy parts, and keeps the fun going continuously. Frank Blandon and wife are the centre of attraction, and with Tom Cunningham bring the wicked to justice, and with the sheriff on hand save further trouble and the fortune is given to the rightful owner. Specialties are introduced, and the orchestra enthuses all music lovers. As Mr. Perry of Jerry from Kerry, is well-known, they will be greeted with a good house.

Rod and Gun For March

Fish and Game Protection work throughout Canada forms a prominent topic in the March issue of Rod and Gun and Motor Sports in Canada, published by W J Taylor, Woodstock, Ont. In addition to a sketch of the meetings of the North American Fish and Game Protective Association, the organizations of three provinces also receive attention while in Ontario it likewise comes in for special treatment. Although so much space is given to this important work of aiding the conservation of Canada's natural resources, sportsmen will not be disappointed in the usual fare provided for them. The Hon. Chas. Scott tells in graphic language of a successful moose hunt in New Brunswick, while the Finest Hunt of the Wolf River Hunt Club is one no sportsman will read unmoved. An incident of the wolf hunt now in progress in northern Ontario should not be overlooked, while Dr. Hornaday's Ideals of Sportsmanship will recommend themselves to all. These ideals will be cherished, aimed at and worked up to and cannot fail to have a marked effect on the future of sport throughout the northern portion of the continent. A description of British Columbia's new game preserve, with many other articles, including a particularly good one of Fur Trading with Indians in the Far North, departments replete with information and a special account of the Hamilton trap shooting tournament make up a number appealing to every lover of the great out-doors and one full of vivid interest to them all.

CHARITY CONCERT ST. PETER'S HALL

Interesting Lecture by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore

The lecture by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, parish priest of Ennismore and the concert in aid of charity held in St. Peter's hall last evening were very successful. Rev. Father Galvin presided.

The piano duett by the Misses Dorris was very acceptably rendered.

Mr. King, the well known baritone and Mr. George Lynch were in fine form.

The dialogue of Mr. Maclaren and partner was provocative of much laughter and amusement.

The feature of the evening was the lecture by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick upon "Liberalism in Religion." The theory that it did not matter what form of religion a man professed so long as he led "a good life," was condemned. No where in the Bible was there any evidence of such latitudes's being allowed by Christ, who had given specific commands to His apostles and in so many words empowered them to teach and to remit sins in His name. He had no wish to offend non-Catholics and what he said he meant in no sense to apply other than as a reasonable and proper statement of the true case of religion and Christ's church. St. Paul took the Galatians very sharply to task for a slight variation in Christ's teachings. How then would he have viewed the variations of today? The Catholic church alone had the power committed to it of teaching Christianity and it could not in one jot or tittle depart from the commands of Christ in respect to that teaching. Therefore liberalism in religion was a disobedience of the express commands of Christ.

A resolution of thanks proposed by Rev. Father McColl and seconded by Mr. John O'Brien was tendered the eloquent lecturer.

The proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The plan for the Toronto Symphony Orchestra will be open for subscribers only on Wednesday morning and on Thursday morning for the general public. The plan is at the Grand Opera House Office

MISS BENNET GAVE ADDRESS

Interesting Talk on Art at Knox Church Last Night

Being Literary Evening, Miss A. Bennett gave an address on two great painters. Illustrations were used in explaining the centuries in which art was at its highest and lowest point. It was shown that paintings took the place of literature and talking, before and after Christ. Pictures of the drawings of these two men were handed round to those present to examine. The lecture was very interesting, indeed.

Mr. Patten, the president, thanked Miss Bennett, on behalf of the Society for the evening they had enjoyed, and hoped that they would be favored with another similar lecture.

Next Monday, March 1st, is devotional night, when Miss M. D. McCalla will give an address on "The Life Lessons from the Book of Genesis"—Com.

The primitive operations employed in China and Japan are in marked contrast with the cleanly machine method of preparing tea in Ceylon. The purity and cleanliness of "Salada" is absolute. Its delicious flavor will please you.

THE INTHON BIBLE CLASS

Sunday afternoon brought out no less than eighty-five. The best former record for the year was seventy-three. May the class keep up the good work and see many more record Sundays.

The standing of the three sides in the contest is 166 for the Reds, 138 for the Whites and 151 for the Blues. It behooves the Whites and Blues to get a move on and not let the Reds hold their present standing.

"Dig in." fellows, and show the Reds.

The class were glad to see Mr. P. M. McCarrell back again and pleased to note that he did not look much the worse in having to nurse a sprained ankle for three weeks.

The Inthons will be very sorry to learn that Mr Geo Deprose's sister who was reported sick, on Sunday, has been taken away from this earth.

Rev E. A. Pearson was the teacher, as usual and the lesson was of much benefit to all.

Mr. E G. Clarke is doing well with the Sunday evening prayer circle.

Don't forget it fellows; give him all the help you can every Sunday evening between 6.30 and 7 o'clock in the primary parlor.—Com.

MISSIONARY WORK IN THE MACKENZIE RIVER DISTRICT

An Address of Interest at All Saints' Men's Banquet--Given by Bishop Reeve--An Interesting and Successful Occasion.

The annual banquet given by the Men's Association of All Saints' has a two-fold purpose. It serves to bring the men of the congregation together under the most favorable auspices and the speakers of the evening are given the opportunity to point out the necessity of the men of the congregation are given the opportunity to put their shoulders to the wheel and taking an actual and effective part in the work for the spiritual and material welfare of the church. The second annual banquet was held last night in the basement of the church and a profitable and thoroughly enjoyable time was spent. Rev. H. R. Trumpour, the pastor, occupied the chair and His Lordship Bishop Reeve, of Mackenzie River, was the principal speaker. Mr. W. H. Hoyle, K.C., Toronto, was to have addressed the meeting, but for some reason he was apparently unable to put in an appearance. The topic Mr. Hoyle was to have dealt with, "The Laymen's Missionary Movement" is one of vital importance in connection with the missionary department of the church and the chairman expressed regret that Mr Hoyle, who is competent to deal with the subject in a lucid and practical way, was not in attendance. Expressions of regret was also made that Rev. Dr. Langfeldt could not be present on account of his absence from the city, and Rev. Canon Davidson was also unable to attend owing to sickness in the family.

Bishop Reeve's address was one of considerable length, and was given after those assembled had done full justice to the most excellent spread arranged by the ladies of the congregation. The bishop has much magnetism as a speaker and had his hearers very much interested throughout his discourse, which told of the missionary work in the Mackenzie River territory and the speaker's deft [illegible] of humor kept the gathering in splendid spirits.

Mr. Trumpour in making the chairman's address solicited the earnest support of the men of the church in all its undertakings, and spoke of the great necessity of all leading clean, straightforward, Christian lives.

He called upon several others who made brief speeches preliminary to the bishop's address. Mr. Davis, one of the delegates from All Saints' to the election of the bishop in Toronto, gave an interesting account of the procedure in connection with the election. The other speakers were Messrs. J. J. Howden, Rev. Mr. Keith, Ald. Buller, R. E. Layfield and Jas. Edgar.

Mr. Keith told of the great advantage of the churches of the city working together for the common good of the cause of religion. He spoke strongly in favor of the erection of the new All Saints' church, and as a representative of a sister church, extended his congratulations on the excellent progress the congregation of All Saints' had made and was making.

BISHOP REEVE.

His Lordship was given an ovation upon arising to speak. The bishop said he was sure it had given him very great pleasure to come to Peterborough to speak at the anniversary services on Sunday and to address the men assembled at the banquet. He heartily endorsed the speakers who had urged the men of the church to rally around their

The head liner at the Brock street rink last night was the hockey match between the Gay Cats and the Fresh Air Club. A large crowd watched the game and the various stunts which the players went through caused a whole lot of amusement. Manager Miller has been coaching his team on all the tricks of the Big Leagues and to say they made goid would be drawing it mild. The defence could hardly be improved upon and the way they broke up their opponents combination and individual work was a revelation to themselves. The forwards all played good hockey and had their checks going at all stages of the game. The half time score was 3-0 with the Gay Cats on the big end of the score.

In the second half the Fresh Air Club started in to get a couple of counters and were not long in putting two past Clancy, who was a little off color in this period and it was at this stage of the game that circus stunts were everywhere in evidence. The Fresh Air Club persisted in getting too close to the Gay Cats nets and the result was they were sent back along the rail route or enjoyed a free ride on the backs of their heavier Bohemian opponents but Dicky made the score 3-3 just a few minutes before the bell sounded for the finish.

MR. R. M. WADDELL PLAYING ON THE WINNING RINKS

Glasgow, Feb 13 — The Canadian curling team have now enjoyed their first game "in the open." in Scotland. They had to go away north to Inverness before they got natural ice, but if the weather keeps as it is this week-end they will have opportunities farther south before long. With the conclusion of the test matches and the winning of the Strathcona trophy by the Dominion players, the most important of the curling may be said to be past, but there are still a number of interesting matches on the programme of the tour. It was hardly expected that there would be any natural ice whatever available for play and when the team arranged their visits to Inverness and Aberdeen, yesterday and today they were looking forward not so much to curling, as to meeting the curlers of the north, who could not arrange to send players to compete with them on the artificial ice at Glasgow. They were, however, agreeably disappointed, as will be shown later.

The match with the Lanarkshire Province at Glasgow on Wednesday resulted in a score of 184 for the Canadians and 137 for the Scots.

The following are the results of the games in which Mr R M Waddell of Peterborough played;

SPORTING TALK

Haileybury and Cobalt play the first of two games for the championship of the Temiskaming League tonight in Haileybury. The lineups are not given and a surprise package will likely be handed out to the spectators when the teams come out on the ice. The second game will be played on Friday night at Cobalt, and as goals count on the round, both teams will no doubt exert themselves to the limit.

The Toronto Baseball team will play a semi professional team composed of the best in the city on Good Friday at Rosedale grounds.

In case Longboat does not keep his engagement with Shrubb, billed to take place at Buffalo, Thursday night, Dorando the Italian runner, will endeavor to make the Englishman go his prettiest.

Dougherty, of the Galt professionals, is putting up a grand game for that club, who are a big factor in the league race these days. In the last game with Brantford, he was upt over the boards by Capt. McDonald, but the game little Norwood boy came right back and played better than ever.

CONROY'S TEAM THE WINNER

Defeated Geale's Seven Yester day Afternoon at Brock St.

Two teams from the Collegiate, played an interesting game of hockey at the Brock street rink last evening from 5 to 6. Conroy's team put it over Geale's team by the score of 4-1, but the losers played with six men. The half time score was 3-0, and Referee Barrett had an easy time.

The line-up was;

GEALE'S

Goal—Denison.
Point—Anderson.
Cover—Geale.
Rover—Hartstone.
Centre—Halpany.
Right—Richardson.
Left—Rankin.

CONROY'S

INDIANS GET GRAY'S SCALPS

Still Keep Winning in the P.B.C. Tournament Fixtures

The Indians continue to show form in their games in the PBC. tournament taking two from the Greys last night, who succeeded in putting it over their opponents decisively in the second game.

The summary.

IROQUOIS
Sutherland	145	123	187	455
Adams	153	126	145	424
Martin	171	171	180	522
	469	420	512	1401

GRAYS
McFadden	134	163	145	442
Perry	193	180	168	541
Clancy	115	182	132	429
	442	525	445	1412

Mr H. Martin, ever on the lookout for good bowlers was lucky last night in signing Mr Sutherland. This was his first game on the PBC. alleys and he was only getting into form when they finished their third game but nevertheless he will make a wonderful change in the Iroquois line-up in the near future.

PORT HOPE HERE ON WEDNESDAY

Will Play Y. M. C. A. in Intermediate Basketball Fixture

The first game in the intermediate series of the new basketball league will be played on Wednesday, 25th, at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium between Peterborough and Port Hope.

Port Hope is said to have a clever five, and the game should attract a big attendance. Play will commence at 8.15. The locals' line-up will be;

Defence—Dobbin. Lees.
Centre—Wallace.
Forwards—Martin. Kirns.

WERE BEATEN BY THE KEENE TEAM

Leo Derocher's picked team met defeat at the hands of the Keene seven in that village last night. The score was 9-1 but hardly indicates the play as the local boys put up a fine exhibition although the size of the rink and the poor light was a big handicap to them. The sleigh in which the boys made the journey, upset on the way down and some of the hockeyists received a good ducking. A number of supporters accompanied the team and all report a good time.

WILL PLAY AT BROCK STREET

Two Games in Church League on Thursday Night

There will be two games in the Church League at Brock street rink on Thursday night. St. Andrew's and Park street will meet between eight and nine and Knox and George street sevens will do battle between nine and ten o'clock. These games have a important bearing on the championship of the league, and will be keenly contested.

The Church League Cup is on exhibition in the window of McWilliams' hat and fur store, George street.

There will be an admission fee of ten cents for ladies and fifteen cents for gentlemen for both games on Thursday night.

FRANK GOTCH IN TORONTO FOR A WEEK

Toronto Star;

"Good morning, Frank."

Frank certainly looks a dancy athlete, healthy, active, and alert, just the kind of a man all kinds of championships look easy to.

"Now, don't ask me about 'Hack,'" said Gotch to the Star. "I am just tired of saying he didn't want any kind of a match. Understand, too, I am not the only wrestler he refuses to fix up with. Why, Zybsco and Padoubny are just as anxious, but there is nothing doing. I am more interested in my work here just now. It is pretty hard work, this $50 for 15 minutes stunt I am doing, for one never knows who may be around town, and everybody should understand that I cannot get away with all my opponents. Look, for instance, here last week, when Shad Link was at the theatre. My old opponent, Yankee Rogers, went on with him, and of course, took his money. I have beaten this big Yankee boy three times in straight matches; once in Buffalo, it was a hard struggle, too, and, of course, had he stopped over for me, there would have been some tall hustling, but I guess at that, if I got my toe-hold on good, I could fix him all right, all right.

"Oh, wait one minute, Mr. Star! Tell all your local boys that I am not here to break their toes or limbs; I am here to wrestle, and wrestle I will, according to the rules."

ACKERMAN'S WON FROM THE C. G. E.

In Mercantile League Last Night --The Standing of the Teams

Ackermen's and the C.G.E. played a game in the Mercantile League last night at Brock street rink from 10 to 11, and the harness makers won out easily by 10 to 1. The score at half time was 2—1, but the electrical men faded away in the second half and Ackerman's scored 8 goals while their opponents failed to tally any counters. The game was not rough, considering the soft state of the ice. Ackerman's line-up was, Garside, goal; Coughlin, point; Robertson, cover point; Godfrey, centre; Harper, rover; Goselin, right wing; Elliott, left wing.

	L.	W.	To P.
Ackermans	1	2	1
C. G .E.	1	1	2
Quakers	2	0	2
G. T. R.	3	0	1
Auburns	2	0	2

There are quite a number of games included in the to play column, but these will not likely be pulled off unless it affects the teams concerned in the championship race.

HOCKEY

COBALT'S TEAM

Ottawa, Feb 22 —Thos C. Hare, manager of the Cobalt hockey team is in the city and he is trying to arrange with a couple of the Ottawa teams to go up and play for the Silver City septette tomorrow night in the first of the home and home games with Haileybury for the championship The men he has lines out for are Kerr and Lake. The former will likely go up for the two games, as he cannot figure in the Cup games here, but Lake will not go, officers of the local club say. Kerr has been offered several hundred dollars to figure in the two games, and Lake was also offered a big figure. The Cobalt team has secured Art Ross and Smaill, of the Wanderers, for the two games, these men getting $800 each to figure in both matches. Jack Ryan, of Ottawa and a couple of other players will be dropped by the Cobalt team.

Haileybury will also strengthen up, and will have three or four men from ECHL. teams in line. Tommy Smith has arrived and is making good. Harry Smith, the star centre man of the Haileybury team will not likely play as he met with an injury recently and is not in trim to stand a hard game.

Messrs. Chauncey Kirby and Desse Brown will be asked to handle the two games, the first of which takes place tomorrow night in Haileybury and the second in Cobalt on Friday, goals to count in the series.

Mr. Grant Rice, of Elk Lake, who is in the city says that thousands of dollars has already gone up on tomorrow's game.

STRATHS PRACTICE

The members of the Strathcona hockey team are requested to turn out to practice at Brock street rink tonight in preparation for their game with Lakefield tomorrow night in that village.

	Won	Lost	To play
St Andrew's	4	1	1
Knox church	3	1	2
George street	0	2	4
Park street	0	3	3

On Thursday night next St. Andrew's and Park street play and also Knox and George street both in the Brock street rink.

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH

J. H. Taylor, 54 Bond St., Toronto, Breathed Hyomei and Cured a Long-Standing Case of Chronic Catarrh That Defied All Other Remedies. Also Toronto and New York Specialists.

Without taking a drop of medicine into the stomach, J H Taylor, 54 Bond street, Toronto, tells how the distressing troubles of catarrh were overcome by simply inhaling Hyomei air. It's the history of tens of thousands similar cases on record, proving that Hyomei can be depended upon to cure Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Croup. It has no equal for any distress of the breathing organs;

Mr. Taylor says: "Some years ago while on a hunting trip in Northern Canada, I contracted a severe cold that settled in my head and finally affected my throat. It rapidly developed into catarrh and caused a miserable throat weakness. My head would become clogged during the night and there was a catarrhal dropping from the nose into the throat. Many days I had been unable to breathe other than through my mouth and the constant hawking and spitting was almost unbearable. I had been treated by the best throat specialists here and in New York, but nothing benefitted my condition. I obtained Hyomei and soon found relief, the throat dropping ceased and my head began to clear. I continued with Hyomei for six weeks and after that time I was well in every detail. There has been no return of the trouble since, and I feel grateful in speaking well of Hyomei, as it cured me when all else failed."

A complete Hyomei outfit costs $1 and Wm. Madill, druggist, will refund your money if it fails to cure.

J E Caldwell may run again in Carleton as the Liberal candidate.

McVEY BEATS JOE JEANNETTE

Paris, Feb 20—Sam McVey of California was awarded the decision of points over Joe Jeannette of New York at the end of a twenty round fight at the Cirque de Paris Saturday night. The winner received $3000 and the loser $2000. Neither of the fighters were seriously injured and both finished without showing any signs of exhaustion. McVey got the decision on points. This seemed to satisfy the audience, who had been warned by the sporting newspapers for several days that when two negroes fight it is not likely that one will knock the other out.

Jeannette's science and quickness seemed to be superior to that of McVey but his blows lacked force. McVey had the power but lacked the ability to profit by it.

Jeannette reached McVey's eye in the seventh round, swelling it considerably, while in the eighteenth McVey had Jeanette distinctly groggy. Joe saved himself by continual hugging at which the spectators hooted and yelled, "That is wrestling, not boxing."

Clinches were the main feature of the last two rounds. Another meeting between these two will draw a big crowd because of the renewed interest aroused by the mill.

Thomas Jackson, of Trenton, had an arm torn off in a portable sawmill and died of his injuries.

THE J. C. TURNBULL COMPANY

His Lordship referred to the great Marathon race between Shrubb and Longboat and said he could not help but admire the athletes for their persistence in training and the self-denial necessitated in preparing for that wonderful race. But after all, while athletic events gave physical strength and healthy mindedness our greatest efforts and denial should be in the cause of the great work for the furtherance of the religion of Christ.

Bishop Reeve greatly interested his auditors by an account of missionary work in Mackenzie river district. He spoke of the privations and disadvantages of pioneer missionary work in the field in which he has for so many years been a leader and worker. The speaker's account of his experiences in the west were bright and entertaining, and many incidents he related were of a very humorous nature. The word pictures of the bishop telling of his travels with his dogs, his visits to the Indian camps, and his relations with the redskins were descriptive and entertaining. It was a hard matter to secure food of a sustaining character in the Northwest where there were no railways or quick and satisfactory means of transportation. Fish, rabbits and reindeer formed practically all the rations and the bishop and his family had had to go for weeks without what might be called a square meal.

The listeners were deeply interested in what the speaker had to say and his recital was indeed as interesting as a page from a book of adventures. Mission work in the frost-bound regions of the northern west in one of great labor, and there are many privations and hardships in connection with it. The speaker said the work of Christianizing the Indians was one of great difficulty as the work of mastering their language was very difficult. And then each tribe had a different dialect which made the labor one of additional difficulty.

His Lordship sang a snatch of an Indian hymn in dialect of the tribe, his auditors showing much interest in the chanting of the simple Indian melody.

In conclusion the bishop referred to the country where he was engaged in his ecclesiastical work telling of the vegetation, the climatic conditions, the minerals of Mackenzie river and the wild animals which roamed in those cold regions. Wolves and bears were found there, but, fortunately, unlike Russia, the wolves did not roam in savage packs and instances of them attacking travellers were isolated.

The speaker in referring to the lack of medical aid, when he was stationed at Fort Simpson, caused a laugh among the audience by saying the people died a natural death—that was work without medical aid.

Great advances, however, had been made in civilization and Christianising of the Indians since the days when Bishop Reeve had first commenced his labors in the west, when they were practically cannibals and lived in their savage and unrestrained way.

A hearty vote of thanks to His Lordship was carried amid great applause. A vote of thanks was also given to the ladies for their appreciated efforts in connection with preparing and serving the supper. The evening was brought to a close by the singing of "God Save the King."

Bourassa and the Conservatives of Jacques Cartier county have formed an alliance.

M. C. Smith, a rancher near Pincher Creek, fell from a train near Fernie and was killed.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

A MORE SATISFACTORY LIST OF CONTESTANTS COULD NOT BE ARRANGED

No More New Names Will be Accepted and the Battle Royal Will be Fought by Those Who Are Now Entered.

One New Nomination in the City—Very Heavy Vote Yester—No Change in the Leadership in Either List—Contest Closes March 22—Club Offer Ends on March 8th.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

The ones who win this contest will be the ones who not only believe in their friends but who are self-believers.

Every person who has carved his name upon the tablets of time was a self-believer. Self-confidence is the mightiest ally of achievement—all enduring triumphs are monuments to the self-believer's will.

It propped them when incredulity tried to trip their determination and kept alive the fire of energy when doubters and bluffers tried to drench their enthusiasm. The winners will not be alone in this great struggle. Anything really worth having in this world is always contested for, and the harder the battle the greater the honor to win. If a contender is so weak as to quail before the fire of competition they deserve to lose the harvest of their ambitions. Get in the thick of the fray and keep going. Expect to stumble and fumble and fall down but get up again and forget the bruises. Anything that is worth having is worth fighting for. Everything—anything is possible to the fighter.

The price of conquest is tenacity. Struggle develops. It makes a type of people which rolling down hill can never create.

If you are in this contest do your utmost to win. Show your friends you are worthy of their support.

TO-DAY'S VOTING.

Heavy voting in all sections today. Herb McMillan comes in on the last available day. The greatest gain was made by R. E. Strickland, of Lakefield, and he secures second place in the men's list in the country. Miss Lila Finlay increased her score sufficiently to move into second position in her list. P. G. Towns who entered the contest Saturday, also improved his score an even 4,000. Miss Birdie Dawson has reached the 30,000 mark, and is a strong second in the ladies' list in the city.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number scheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

To His Lordship Mr. Justice Clute,

May it please Your Lordship—

This being the first time you have presided at a court in Peterborough, we wish to congratulate you upon your elevation to the bench and to express our gratification because the bar of Canada continues to furnish men learned in the law who carry on the best traditions of the British Judiciary.

We are pleased that this county is so free of crime that we have had no case to consider, and even although the Police Magistrate dealt with a number of criminal cases, the fact that no case of a criminal character has come before this court is a matter upon which the county is to be congratulated.

We visited St Joseph's Hospital and were greatly pleased with the excellent equipment and management of that institution. An addition has been erected at this hospital and it is admirably adapted for caring for the sick.

We also visited the Nicholls hospital and found everything in that hospital in excellent condition and giving evidence of the best provision for caring for the patients. This city is to be congratulated upon having two such institutions as these hospitals.

At the Children's Shelter there were six children at the time of our visit, aged from sixteen months to ten years. Everything about the shelter was very clean and comfortable and seemed well adapted for the good work the society is doing.

At the Protestant Home there were twenty inmates, five male and fifteen female and they all seemed happy and well provided for.

At the gaol, which we also visited, we found everything clean and in good order, and every evidence of proper care and attention. While here we saw that, as Your Lordship had mentioned to us, there were twelve persons imprisoned as vagrants, some of whom appeared to be old and helpless and to have not committed crime. Although the city has two excellent institutions in the Protestant Home and the House of Providence, that some further provision for the aged is necessary is shown by the fact that these persons are in the gaol. It is to be regretted that the county and city cannot make an arrangement for the care of the poor of both municipalities in one House of Refuge, but as the city has several times made proposals in that direction and the county council cannot see its way to join in such an arrangement, we think it is the duty of the city to no longer delay in making adequate provision for the care of the poor and aged that it should look after, and we would urge that steps in this direction be taken at once.

We did not think it necessary to visit the County House of Refuge, as it is several miles from the city and was recently visited by a Grand Jury.

Respectfully submitted.

MEMBERS OF CHARITY BOARD GAVE OUT SOME GOOD ADVICE

Meeting Last Night Was of More Than Usual Interest—Unemployed Men in Attendance.

There was an interesting time at the meeting of the Charity Board last night. The meeting was held in the Council Chamber and about thirty men who are now out of employment, were in attendance. An invitation had been extended by Relief Officer Miller. Those who came were given some good advice.

His Worship, Mayor Rush was the first to speak and he was followed by Messrs R. C. Braund, Geo. Cochrane, Malcolm McIntyre, Kent and Fowler and Rev. Father McColl. They all gave about the same line of talk to the unfortunates, who were told that while the city was perfectly willing to assist anyone who needed help, the means were limited and the citizens could not afford and would not try to support men and their families all winter when these men either refused to work or spent more time looking for charity than they did for employment. Allowances were made for new arrivals who were probably not acquainted with Canadian winters or were ignorant of the labor market during that season. Allowance was also made for those who had met with misfortune. But for those who had been here for some time there was no excuse. There is no reason why men who work all spring, summer and fall cannot lay away a little money to tide them over the slack season. The great trouble with some laboring men was that no matter how much money they received they spent it as fast as they got it and never had anything left. This kind of thing had to stop. The city owes no man a living and anyone who cannot or will not support himself and family will have to suffer the consequences. Some good sound advice was given to the men to save their earnings next summer as it would be difficult for them to get charity in the winter.

STORIES OF THE MEN.

Three of the men made replies to the board, and each told a hard luck story. One was a Canadian, who had been here for 20 years, and had never asked for charity before. But he had had trouble and he thought that Canadians should receive charity as well as Englishmen.

Another fellow had been here two years and not knowing the conditions the first year he went along spending his money as fast as he made it, and and last winter got into debt to such an extent that it took all summer to get squared away, and now he is out of work and has nothing.

The third man told of his having had all kinds of sickness in the family which took all his money.

This satisfied the members of the Board who sent the men home with the good advice still ringing in their ears.

COLLEGIATE DEBATERS WON FROM THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Interesting Entertainment at the Collegiate Assembly Hall Last Evening—Debate on "Resolved That a Lawyer is Not Justified in Defending a Prisoner of Whose Guilt He is Assured".

The students of the Collegiate Institute and the teachers in training at the Normal School provided an interesting entertainment last night in the form of a debate held in the Assembly Hall of the former institution. The subject was "Resolved that a lawyer is not justified in defending a prisoner of whose guilt he is assured" and while the judges decided in favor of the Institute representatives, the two speakers from the Normal School presented an argument which left a rather difficult task to arrive at a decision. The large representative gathering was a compliment to the students who have reason to congratulate themselves upon the entire success of this affair. The teachers and students alike from both seats of learning were present almost to the individual and with their friends and others interested in their success taxed the accommodation of the spacious hall almost to its capacity.

The Literary portion of the programme was enlivened by a piano solo by Miss Genevieve Sanderson, a vocal solo by Master Murray Carlyle, a very pleasing recitation by Miss Katie Leary and a selection by the Collegiate orchestra. This last number received a well deserved encore. The orchestra is composed of the following players: Violins, Misses K. Wallis and V. Palmer; Messrs Vincent McCabe and Roy Rankin; banjo, Mr M. Dobbin; mandolins, Messrs Adams and J. Brightman; pianiste, Miss Katie Leary. This musical departure on the part of the students received many compliments, the hope being expressed that the orchestra will enjoy future success, a hope which bids fair to be fully realized judging from present efforts and indications.

THE DEBATE

Mr. Arthur Roseboro president of the Philomathean Society of the Collegiate, fulfilled the duties of chairman in a most acceptable manner. He welcomed the assembly and hoped that the students would have future affairs as largely attended and that the interest in the welfare of the young people would become a matter which the whole city would share. He then introduced the debaters as follows,—

Negative, Normal School — Mr Patterson and Miss S Fair.

With all due respect to the ability of the latter debaters it was generally considered that the Collegiate Institute had the better representatives Mr O'Brien with a little more spirit should make one of the best speakers the Collegiate has developed in recent years. He is fluent and resourceful and his ideas are expressed in fine language. He strongly entrenched his side in a position which with Miss Stenson's aid was made secure. The latter young lady was thoroughly conversant with her subject, difficult and weighty as it was.

For the negative side Mr. Patterson as leader, was very good, and with more experience should make a capable debater. Miss Fair, in close capable debater. Miss Fair, in closing the argument for the Normal School's contention was cool and collected, offering not a few good points which counted. She was responsible for the main strength of the negative argument.

The judges, were Rev. E. A. Pearson, Mr John Crane and Mr W G. Morrow. The former announced the verdict in favor of the Collegiate Institute or affirmative side. A future debate between the two schools will be awaited with interest and a return "engagement" should prove highly entertaining.

SAYS WE ARE ALWAYS GOLD-BRICKED REGARDING TREATIES

Statement of Major Currie at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Have Canada's interests been sacrificed to the United States in the making of treaties? The boundary treaty of 1908, Major Currie (North Simcoe) claims, gives a part of islands in boundary waters declared by the Ashburton treaty to be in Canada to our neighbor, and, according to the major, it looks like a trick perpetrated by Uncle Sam's negotiations.

On the motion to go into supply yesterday afternoon Major Currie brought up the question. In previous negotiations Canada had lost the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri and Michigan, and when the recent boundary treaty was negotiated he had made up his mind that we would be gold-bricked. As a matter of fact, we had been. He found that in the recent boundary treaty we had suffered the loss of more territory to the state of Minnesota through the diversion of the line to interest the islands on the boundary. This territory was Hunter Island, in the Pigeon River.

The Ashburton treaty gave Hunter Island to Canada. The two drafts of the 1908 treaty declared that the boundary line "should not intersect islands lying along its course." In the treaty as signed and published as a sessional paper the word "not" is dropped out, so that Hunter Island and other islands in boundary waters will be divided, and one-half given to the United States.

"The less we had to do with the United States in treaty-making the better, because we invariably got the worst of it," remarked Major Currie, who also criticized the Japanese treaty, saying it had been entered into hurriedly, to the sacrifice of Canadian interests. He was as anxious as anyone to preserve peace and he hoped there would not be trouble. England was under the shadow of a great war and we, as loyal Canadians, must seek to preserve peace."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier complained that Major Currie had not given notice of his intention to bring up the subject. It was six months since the treaty had been before him, but he would refresh his memory and give an answer on another occasion. As to the Japanese treaty, the criticism was not warranted by the facts. This treaty had been lived up to, and no one regretted that it had been entered into, as it had preserved the trade between the two countries, and the Japanese Government had faithfully carried out its agreement as to the restriction of emigration to this country.

The waterways treaty, Sir Wilfrid observed, was fair and reasonable, giving equal justice to both countries.

MAY SHARE IN A BIG FORTUNE

St. Catharines Citizen May Receive Handsome Sum.

St. Catharines, Feb. 24.—Romance in the life of a millionaire touches the life of a resident in this city in a peculiar way.

When the will of Samuel Roebuck, a wealthy manufacturer of Brooklyn, N.Y., was read last Thursday his wife and children were astonished to find that he had left a bulk of the estate to children of a daughter of whom they had never heard, Elizabeth Bird of Northampton, England. Enquiry in that city revealed the fact that Mrs. Elizabeth Bird is the keeper of a small grocery, and that she is about 60 years old, and declares that Roebuck deserted her mother when the daughter was about 10 years old.

To a son of Mrs. Bird, now living in this city, his mother sent a number of the Christmas cards that Roebuck had sent her of recent years, and the son hopes to share in the inheritance from a grandfather, of whom till now he knew next to nothing.

DEPUTATION FROM INDIAN VILLAGE

Accompanied County Council to Ottawa—Want Bridge Across "The Narrows"

Chief Joseph William, ex-Chief Joseph Irons and Mr Dan Whetung, jr, formed a deputation which accompanied the county council to Ottawa. On behalf of the Chemong Indian Reserve they will ask the Government to give an appropriation for the building of the proposed and long sought for bridge across Gannon's Narrows between the Indian village and Ennismore. The stretch that would be spanned by the bridge is 700 feet.

TRAINMEN FOUND GUILTY FOR THE HARRISON WRECK

Guelph, Feb. 24.—After being out for nearly four hours the jury trying Conductor Fleming, Engineer Kennedy and Fireman Lane, the Stratford trainmen, here yesterday on charges of manslaughter in connection with the fatal wreck near Harriston on Jan. 14, brought in a verdict of guilty of criminal negligence against the three men. The jury in returning their verdict added a strong recommendation for mercy. Mr. Justice Riddell, in remanding the men for sentence until a week from Saturday, promised that he would give the recommendation due consideration.

The verdict was brought in at 1.45 a.m. this morning, a great crowd waiting into the morning hours to hear the disposal of the case. At 1.30 a.m. the jury came in, and stated that they had agreed on a verdict in one case, but were in doubt concerning the other. His lordship again charged them strongly, and sent them back to the jury room. The evidence in the case was concluded at 6 o'clock. Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., occupied fifty minutes in summing up the case for the defence, and Mr. Nicol Jeffrey, crown counsel, took the same time to make his address. His lordship in an address of an hour's length charged very strongly against the prisoners, reminding the jury of the necessity of safeguarding public life and property, and pointing out the clear neglect of duty on the part of the prisoners as shown by the evidence.

The three trainmen gave evidence during the day, their stories being the same as brought out at the inquest and preliminary hearing. Sentence will be imposed on Saturday week. Meantime they are released on the same bail as before.

AMEND THE MUNICIPAL ACT STATEMENT OF THE PREMIER

Toronto, Feb. 24.—In the Legislature yesterday, the program outlined by Premier Whitney last week, of diligent application to business, was carefully followed. Quite a large instalment of routine was cleared off, including second readings for five of the new revision statutes, and the advance through the committee stage of thirteen others. The bill to provide prompt punishment for personation at election was under consideration. After deciding that the measure would apply to all towns over 5,000 inhabitants it was left for further consideration.

Sir James Whitney, in moving the second reading of the bill to amend the Municipal Act, stated that the object of the bill was to enable municipal councils to hold elections on questions on which they desired to have the mandate of the people at any time during the year. At present these are held in conjunction with the general municipal elections, and the delay was often inconvenient and embarrassing, as was the case in connection with the Cataract power contract in Hamilton.

The bill changing the fiscal year was also advanced a stage.

Hon. Frank Cochrane introduced a bill to amend the Forest Reserve Act, providing for the town site of Gowganda. As the site is in a forest reserve, special legislation is required to enable the Government to grant title to purchases of lots.

A. E. Fripp will introduce a bill to amend the Assessment Act.

TWO-THIRDS OF WORK IS GIVEN TO CANADIAN GENERAL

Yesterday in Toronto the allotment was given out of the work and plant in connection with the equipment of twelve stations on the electric power lines of the Government, between Niagara Falls and Toronto and St. Thomas. Two-thirds of the work will be executed by the Canadian General Electric Company, at their Peterborough works, and one-third by the Westinghouse Company at Hamilton.

The current developed by the generators at Niagara Falls and of 10,000 volts is stepped up to 11,000 volts for transmission along the main lines. At the several stations it is again stepped down to the voltage at which the municipality or users require it. The apparatus for this purpose is what the Canadian General Electric Company will supply, consisting of transformers, switchboards, controlling apparatus, etc.

The Mail and Empire has the following:

This installation will provide for the supply of power to the following municipalities:

Niagara Falls, Dundas, Hamilton, Toronto, Weston, Brampton, Acton, Milton, Brantford, Paris, St Mary's, Woodstock, Ingersoll, Norwich, Preston, Guelph, Hespeler, Galt, Berlin, Waterloo, Elmira, New Hamburg, Baden, Stratford, Tillsonburg, London and St. Thomas.

In the new equipment is included a modern protective system, the first ever introduced on this continent. In case of any accident to the cables carrying the power such as a break or defective insulation the current is automatically cut off, thus affording complete safety to the public, and any workmen along the lines of transmission. It will be remembered that the enemies of the Government line endeavored to make capital on the ground that the transmission wires would be dangerous to life, and several farmers opposed the right of way through their farms on these representatives. The equipment also provides a spare transformer for each station and even with these additions the cost of the equipment will fall some $350,000 below the estimated cost.

Mr McGuigan's tender for building the transmission line is $1,270,000 so that it will be found that the commission has been well within the mark in all its estimates.

WILKINS STICKS TO STORY IS POSITIVE IN STATEMENTS

Evidence Strong Against Malone.

Crown Attorney Has Drawn Net About Malone---What the Evidence Disclosed.

Simcoe, Feb. 24.—The crown got near to the end of its witnesses by adjournment at 6.30 last night in the case of King v. Malone, following the long examination of former Night Watchman Wilkins, who was the victim of the shooting.

The cross-examination of the principal witness yesterday against the accused was a hard-fought one, but Wilkins persistently kept to his story, as told at the preliminary hearing.

The chief evidence was the statement that Wilkins had loaned Malone his electric flashlight on the day preceding the shooting, telling him it needed a new battery. Wilkins says Malone showed it to him fixed while in the park.

Drs. Bennetto and Bowlby were also called and testified to the dangerous condition of Wilkins' wounds.

Wallace Walsh and John Davis swore to seeing Malone at 12.10, or 46 minutes before the shooting.

Wilkins was brought from the jail, where he is serving a five months' term for theft, to give evidence. He had one eye shot out, and other bullet wounds in the body, he says, by Malone.

On the night of June 16, while on patrol with Malone, the latter had suddenly said he was going to have some fun, and a few minutes later had set fire to Madden Bros.' store. Then Malone told him to turn in the fire alarm and 'phone to Malone's house for him. Several others fires were set and "discoveered" in a similar way.

In October they found the door of Sovereen's store unfastened. Malone went to the till, but found only a few coppers. He then went to the back of the store and took from the hook a fur-lined coat and a fur coat and from a box a fur stole.

"This will do for my wife," he said. "Don't you want one for your wife?"

"I said, 'No, sir, my wife wouldn't wear it.'"

He then made me try on a fur coat. It didn't fit me very well, so he tried it on. 'This is about my style," he said. He then put the two coats and the stole out on some boxes in the lane and shut the back door and left by the front door. He forced Wilkins to take one coat.

In setting fire to Agar's barn, he said he was getting even for a charge of $5 for making out our affidavit in a case in which Malone was after a reward. Malone had used his jimmy to pry his way into Schuyler's store, where groceries were stolen and the place set on fire.

THE KING'S GIFT TO THE SULTAN

Sends Turkey's Ruler a Charger on Which to go to Church.

Some weeks ago the Sultan was asked by high officials to proceed sometimes to the mosque on horseback instead of in his carriage, in order that his subjects might have a better chance of seeing him. The Sultan replied with a smile.

"Yes, if a bay horse can be found with three white spots on his feet, one on each hind foot and one on a fore foot, a white spot between the eyes and a tail reaching to the ground."

This was reported to King Edward, who telegraphed throughout the United Kingdom enquiring if such a horse were procurable. A beautiful animal answering the description was found in the stud of Lord Ribblesdale and was secured by the King.

HONEYMOON TO BE SPENT AT GALT

Morristown, N.Y., Feb. 24.—Miss Sylvia Green, daughter of Mrs. Hetty Green of New York, one of the wealthiest women in America, was married at noon yesterday to Matthew Astor Wilks. Mr. Wilks, who is about 65 years old, is the great-grandson of John Jacob Astor. Mrs. Green, and her daughter have been living in a modest apartment in Hoboken, but yesterday morning came to this city with a wedding party of about 50 persons in a special car.

Arriving somewhat in advance of the hour of the wedding, the party went to a Morristown inn and remained there until shortly before noon, when the party proceeded to St. Peter's Episcopal Church, where the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Philemon Sturges, the rector. Miss Green wore a simple brown traveling dress, while Mrs. Green wore her customary black satin.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilks will start on a wedding trip, and it is understood will visit Galt, Ontario.

It is said that not until Sunday last did the daughter gain her mother's consent to the marriage, although Mr. Wilk's courtship had been in progress for some ten years. It is said Mrs. Green's objections to Mr. Wilks was his age—he is 65.

When Mrs. Green dies her daughter, who is her only heir, will have an income of about $5,000 a day. Mr. Wilks is worth about $2,000,000.

STREET WATERING ALREADY ON DECK

Came in for Some Discussion at Last Night's Council Meeting

The question of street watering came up at last night's meeting of the city council when Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, moved that the city solicitor be instructed to prepare a bylaw to provide for the street watering for 1909.

One of the aldermen asked if the streets to be watered were specified in the bylaw and when informed that such was the case an objection was raised. Several of the aldermen had suggestions to make as to what streets should be watered and in order to have the matter gone into the motion was withdrawn.

The list of streets to be visited by the watering carts will be revised before the city solicitor prepares the bylaw.

SMALL FLOOD AT THE CORNER

Number of Men With Aid of Fire Engine Were Busy at Hunter and Aylmer

A number of men with the aid of the fire engine, were engaged this morning in thawing out the pipes to allow the large quantity of water to drain away which had gathered at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets. Property in the vicinity was flooded and citizens using the north side of Hunter street were compelled to walk the plank.

EVERYBODY MUST BE VACCINATED

Kingston, Feb. 24.—There is trouble ahead for citizens who do not get vaccinated. Owing to the fact that there are four new cases of smallpox the Board of Health yesterday decided to make vaccination compulsory, and sanitary officers will be asked to see that the bylaw is carried out. Offenders will be summoned to the Police Court.

Some time ago action was taken to make it compulsory, but it never was pressed, because the disease was soon stamped out. Now that the Isolation Hospital has reopened the board have taken these steps as a safeguard.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

New York State may adopt a bill patterned on Canada's regulations preventing the sale of low grade seeds.

King Edward held his first levee of the season at St. James' Palace at noon yesterday, which was well attended.

The Lindsay Daily Free Press, which began publication last May, has given up. There are two others in the field.

Nelson Dessler, who shot and killed Police Captain Hassett early on Sunday, died at 7.20 o'clock yesterday from wounds in his fight with the police.

Rear-Admiral Goodrich of the U. S. navy believes that battleships twice the size of the largest now building will be launched in the not far distant future.

There is a move on foot to have Canada's next Governor-General sworn in at Ottawa instead of at Halifax or Quebec, which, with one exception, has been the custom in the past.

The Maple Leaf Hotel at Lumsden, Sask., was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss is $15,000, with $8,000 insurance. The town recently passed a local option measure.

Charles August Tiroux, second vice-president and local manager of the Banque d'Hochelaga, Montreal, dropped dead yesterday morning on the way to his office. He was about 50 years of age.

'PHONE PROFITS IN MANITOBA

Winnipeg, Feb. 24.—Hon. Robert Rogers laid on the table of the Legislature the statement of the Telephone Department for the first eleven and a half months of Government operation, it showed that there was a surplus of $380,001. The receipts were $722,612.67, and the expenditures were $342,611.57.

During the period mentioned from Jan. 15 to Dec. 31 the work of telephone construction and addition of new subscribers has resulted in the increase of 1,4[illegible] miles of long-distance lines, 418 miles of new long-distance poles, the opening of 20 new exchanges and offices and a net increase of 2,158 telephone subscribers' stations, the whole increasing the annual revenue by $[illegible].

PLANS FOR LIBRARY TO BE RECEIVED UP TO MARCH 10

The public library question came up for a little consideration at last night's meeting of the city council.

A letter was received from Chas. P. Bann asking for a little more time to prepare the plans for the proposed library.

Ald. Bradburn moved that the matter be left over for two weeks until March 10th.

This was seconded by Ald. Morgan and carried.

Ald. Duncan asked if plans from other parties would be received.

Ald. Bradburn said that plans from anybody would be received provided there was no cost to the city.

NO DEUTATION

A communication was received from Warden Scott asking the city to join the deputation from the county which went to Ottawa to press the claim for a bridge for the Chemong Indians.

Owing to the lateness of the time at which the request came in it was decided to take no action.

MOORE PRECEPTORY AND ROYAL ARCH MASONS

Hold an At Home in the Masonic Hall—It Was a Delightful Function.

Last evening at the Masonic Hall the members of Moore Preceptory, Knights Templar and of Corinthian Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, together with the Past Masters and Masters of the local blue lodges were entertained. The hosts of the evening had made careful and ample preparation and the affair was a thoroughly delightful one.

The handsome rooms were comfortably seated and the gathering were favored with a programme of music, songs and recitations. To the programme Mr. Kenneth Shook contributed two songs, Miss Davies a vocal solo, Dr. Parks a violin selection, and Mr. David Moore recitations. These selections were admirably given and greatly enjoyed.

W. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner, filled the chair, and in his opening remarks briefly referred to the Masonic Order, its principles and influences, all of which made for a better moral and social life. The Craft has among it few members who may so thoroughly and clearly expound its principles as W. Bro. Kenner.

On conclusion of the programme the dining room was thrown open and refreshments partaken of, Bro. Thos. Hooper being caterer. The refreshments were served by a corps of the brethren who saw that all were provided for.

A few minutes served to remove the tables and chairs, and afterwards to the music of Mr. Devey's orchestra dancing was the order of an hour. About twelve o'clock the gathering dispersed highly pleased with the evening and with pleasant words of recognition of the kindness of the hosts of the evening.

THINK CHARGES ARE TOO HIGH

Finance Committee Will Wait Upon the Water Commissioners

The city will make an attempt to secure a reduction in the charges for hydrants against the city from the waterworks department. It is felt that they are too high. At last night's meeting of the Council Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the Finance Committee interview the Water Commissioners to see if the city cannot secure a reduction.

Mr. Hassard Will Speak

On Monday night a big banquet will be held, when Mr. Harrard, secretary of Peterborough Y. M. C. A., will speak. All members who are going to work in the campaign are invited.—Lindsay Post.

"BEGINNINGS IN MEDICINE" SUBJECT OF AN ADDRESS

Delivered by Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch Before the Historical Society Last Evening—Advances Made in Medicine and Surgery.

"Beginnings in Medicine" was the subject of a very clever and instructive paper by Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch read before the Historical Society last evening. The meeting was held in the Physics' Laboratory of the Collegiate Institute.

THE LECTURE.

Dr. McCulloch's paper is as follows:—

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen.

When requested by a member of your committee to present a paper before this society, I was at some loss for a subject—not because my repertoire was so extensive, but rather on account of the paucity of my information with regard to the local setting of the community, regarding the history of which, I was under the impression this society existed especially for. However, I was assured I had free scope in my choice of subject, and considering that you would expect something of a medical nature from one who has chosen medicine for his profession, and that there is a certain degree or romance connected with the origin of all movements towards the improvement of medical knowledge, I have attempted to give a short outline of some of the early discoveries of many facts which are now regarded as matters of household information, but which at the outset had to be proven, and, in the process, had to combat the ingrown prejudices of centuries of superstition, ignorance and mysticism.

The experiment of bringing up a child in total ignorance of religion and ethics until he has arrived at an age of reason has been carried out and the longings after some higher power and some guide of conduct noted. It would be probably more interesting to bring up a child to the age of reason without any knowledge of science, and see how his mind, matured as it would be, would regard the various natural objects. We have our knowledge of natural phenomena not from our own finding out of the same, but because they are the discoveries of our predecessors and we have been told them. We can smile at the ancients in their explanations of natural phenomena, because such phenomena and their explanations have become engrained in us and are part of our being. But to any of us from our own observations and deductions the earth would still be flat and the stars would be only hundred candle power lamps at only a short distance. Let us then think charitably of our early scientists, truly struggling after the light, and give due credit to those pioneers, who, having certain traditions handed down to them, hewed out a path for themselves, established theories which, though often wrong, yet to their minds better suited the explanation of the observations they had made.

THE EARLIEST RECORDS.

Our earliest record of the practice of the healing art is probably contained in Scripture, where we are told that Joseph commanded his servants and physicians to embalm him, in 1700 B. C. This process of embalming probably gave them some anatomical knowledge. The Egyptians originally exposed their sick in public, so that if any persons passing by had suffered from the same symptoms they might give advice for the benefit of the sufferers. Later all thus cured were required to go to the temple, inscribe their symptoms and what had helped them. These records were carefully kept and studied by the priests, who endeavoured to found upon the mass of facts thus collected an exclusive practice of medicine. In this was was formed their sacred book or medical code from whose directions they were not supposed to deviate.

The Hebraic system of medicine is outlined in the Book of Leviticus, where the rules concerning public

ASIATIC IMMIGRATION

If anyone thinks that because Sir Wilfrid's respect (!) for provincial rights impels him to repeatedly disallow B.C.'s immigration laws therefore the whole affair is a dead issue let him give up that idea without delay. The following letter to the Vancouver World from "A British Workman," speaks for itself. The humbug practised upon a confiding people by Sir Wilfrid in this as in other matters is worthy of being investigated. It would pay the people of this country to be less confiding in their allegiance and less like a lot of stupid geese that are easily misled by a political fox. What does the new "Department of Foreign Affairs" at Ottawa mean? What does the flag incident at Montreal mean, where the Union Jack was not good enough for all Canadians, but had to give place to an equal display of the tri-color OR BE PULLED DOWN! In ten years Canada will have extinguished her whole Anglo-Saxon or Keltic-Saxon character.

It will be drowned out in the west and driven out in the east. In the meantime let us read what "British-er' says;

Editor World,—I see by the papers there has been another expert meandering up and down the Pacific coast for the express purpose of finding out all about the hard feeling that exists here against the Japs. This time he hails from New York, and judging from his letter, I should say he has also picked up the usual amount of information from the same source, for he says if you were to ask almost any workingman on the Pacific coast why he disliked the Japs he would be puzzled to tell you why. Now, Mr. Editor, if that is not an insult to the workingman's intelligence I would like to know what would be. I wonder how many working men he interviewed while on the coast. I would like to meet this gentleman and give him my reasons for not liking Dr. Folk. I would give him them through this letter, but I know you would not publish them.

Sir, do we not all know only too well that the Asiatics are brought in here to down the working man! What kind of a feeling does he think creeps over a British workman when he reads things like these the late commission brought to light? What kind of a feeling does he think creeps over a man when he goes around the next day after being laid off and finds an Asiatic in his place? In conclusion, I assure this gentleman we know right well.

Thanking you in anticipation for a little space in your valuable paper.

BRITISH WORKMAN,
Vancouver, Feb. 17, 1909.

THE ORGANIZATION OF WATER

Although widely known in Europe, the purification of water by ozone has made little headway in this country, on account of the cost of operation. This obstacle has now been largely removed by improvements in the machinery. Mr. S. H. Hart tells in the Electrical Review, Chicago, January 2, of a small plant installed in the town of Lindsay, Ontario, where 1,500,000 gallons a day are purified at an initial cost of $7,000, with the expenditure of not more than ten horse-power. The ozone, as is customary in all processes of this kind, is produced by the action of a high-tension electric discharge on the oxygen of the air, but the air is handled and compressed to deprive it partially of its moisture entirely by the action of the flowing water itself. The compression takes place in an underground chamber into which the air is forced by the aspiring action of the rushing current, and it is then sent through the ozonizers under pressure and forced into the water to do its work of oxidising impurities and killing harmful germs. Says Mr. Hart;

"This development is of especial interest to small electric power plants, since it offers a new field for development and consumption of power in small units in many of the large cities in conjunction with the waterworks system. Practically no waterworks is too small to install such a plant, and while the current consumption is small, it is, as a general thing, absolutely continuous and would naturally be obtained from the lighting service of the town in preference to the installation of an individual plant for this purpose. Its development in this country, however, is only in its inception, but the general use of ozone for a number of purifying purposes has received a tremendous impetus by virtue of this development and practical application."

The process is described in more detail in another article as follows;

"In the apparatus shown in the illustration, direct or alternating current, usually of 110 volts, is taken from the ordinary electric light circuit and by a transformer is stept up to about 8,000 volts. This high voltage produces in the ozonizer, a box containing alternate plates of aluminum and micanite, a silent electric discharge, converting the ordinary atmospheric air drawn through the ozonizer into ozone.

"The water to be treated flows, under its own pressure, from the city mains through the pipe to its highest point, and in descending the water draws the ozone, by means of an inspirator, from the ozonizer, the water and ozone thoroughly commingling. This action is constant during the progress of the water in its downward descent into the glass steriliser where the ozone ascends in millions of minute bubbles, coming into intimate contact with every particle of the water and completely destroys all the disease-producing bacteria contained in the water. The ozonized water then finds an outlet at the top of the steriliser and may be conducted into any suitable storage-receptacle for future use.

"The reason for this destruction of the bacteria by the ozone is very simple. Chemical analysis of the bodies of bacteria show they they are made up of about 84 per cent. of water 16 per cent. of solids. Of these solids more than half is made up of carbon. The strong affinity of oxygen for carbon is well known. Ozone, being a concentrated form of oxygen, has an even greater affinity for carbon; and the moment a bacillus comes in contact with a bubble of ozonized air the carbon of its body combines with oxygen and the bacillus is consumed as completely as if it had touched a flame. Indeed, the process is analogous to that of combustion. Just as though burnt up, nothing remains of the bodies of the bacteria but carbonic-acid gas which partially rises to the surface of the water and passes off into the air, and is partially taken up by the water. This gives to it its brightness and pleasant taste."—Literary Digest.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is a disposition prevailing nowadays to carp at education as if it caused a falling-off in the birth rate. Journals harping on this subject probably prefer quantity to quality. It is a mistake.

In the very able review of medical science given by Dr. Malcolm McCullock in his recent lecture it looks as if we are finding conditions and remedies by scientific inquiry which there nature suggested long years ago.

Bulgarian increased from 221 to 2,529.

Chinese from 97 to 1884.

Greek from 79 to 1,053.

Japanese from 3,244 to 7,601.

Russian, other than Hebrew, from 3,609 to 6,281.

Syrians from 337 to 732.

Hindus from 2,329 to 2,623.

Bukowinian from 1,429 to 2,145.

There was also an increase of Turks and Arabians.

The above nationalities account for 22,071 of the increase.

The increase in immigration of these nationalities last mentioned, from the Galicians down, is 118 per cent., while the increase of the total immigration is only 18 per cent.

To the imperialist this information must prove a shock. To the moralist it must prove even more. If immigration means prosperity regardless of who the immigrants may be then the sooner we shelve that sort of prosperity the better. But does it?

Speaking at a dinner in London recently, Sir Robert Hart, the veteran Inspector-General of the Chinese customs, said the longest banquet he ever sat at was one in Pekin which lasted for 17 consecutive hours. There were 125 courses, and he tasted them all. Mr. Ward, an American envoy to China, who tried to secure that interview with Emperor Hieng-Fu in 1859 tells how he was entertained at a dinner that lasted from noon one day until six o'clock on the evening of the day following. The total number of courses is not given but Ward mentions that he had to give in after partaking of 138 different dishes, "whereupon his hosts wondered greatly" — presumably at his abstemiousness.

Probably however, the Eskimo banquets last longer than any others, and the quantity of food swallowed is also proportionately greater. Ross records that seven of his party of natives, once ate continuously for 33 hours, during which time they consumed 200 pounds of seal meat. Europeans exposed to the same climatic conditions act in much the same way. Capt. Scott, of the Discovery, on his return from his long sledge journey over the inland ice of the Antarctic Continent did nothing but eat and sleep for the space of three days and nights and even then he was still hungry.

Commander Perry and his party returned famished from their futile dash for the pole in 1906, slaughtered a herd of seven musk oxen on Hazen Island off the extreme north of Greenland. For two days and nights thereafter they crouched inside their snow huts, eating continuously and when they had finished the pile of bones outside was "as high as a tall man's chin."

OBITUARY

MRS HUGHES GRAHAM

Another respected resident of Emily township was called by death early Friday morning in the person of Mrs. Hughes Graham. Mrs. Graham was born in the township of Ops 68 years ago and by her kind hospitality she won for herself a large circle of true friends. She leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing husband and one son, Charles, residing at home. The deceased was a sister of Mrs. Chas. Fee and Mr John Blackwell of this township.

The funeral was held on Sunday, February 21st and was largely attended. Service at the house was conducted by Rev G. McKenzie, pastor of Bethel circuit, after which the remains were taken to Lindsay cemetery where they were interred.

THE MIGHTY POWER OF MI-O-NA.

Miona, that extraordinary and perfect stomach tonic, will relieve dyspepsia in twenty-four hours.

It will cure and is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to the readers of the Review to cure the most pitiful cases of dyspepsia, if taken according to directions.

Mi-ona tablets not only cure dyspepsia but all stomach disturbances, such as vomiting of pregnancy, sea or car sickness and the stomach sickness after excessive indulgence.

Mi-ona cures by strengthening and invigorating the flabby stomach walls and after a course of Mi-ona treatment, constipation, if there is any will entirely disappear.

Mrs S. Keast, of Clarksburg, Ont. says: "A bad stomach trouble that had bothered me for years, baffled and puzzled skilled physicians, was nicely relieved by my using Mi-ona. My trouble was on account of food not digesting but fermenting in my stomach, forming a gas that gave me untold suffering, and pain and also made me weak, nervous, irritable and unable to rest. Since using Mi-ona I can go to bed at night and sleep and wake up in the morning refreshed. I cannot speak too highly of Mi-ona."

Mi-ona is a most economical treatment, a large box of tablets only costs 50 cents at Wm Madill's, Peterborough, and the dyspeptic, nervous or otherwise, who does not give them a trial is losing an opportunity to regain health."

LATEST NEWS FROM BETHEL

Special to the Review.

Bethel, Feb 23.— Messrs. Walter Moncrief and Patrick McAuliffe are busily engaged sawing wood for the farmers of this vicinity.

Mr. Charles Mills has just completed his season's work, threshing. He reports having threshed for almost six months.

Mr. William Irwin is preparing to move to Mr David Mitchell's farm on the third concession of Emily which he has leased.

Mr. W. J. Irwin has sold his fine span of bay colts.

Mr. Robert Boate was in Lindsay on Monday on business.

Mr. Robert Deyell is making his annual rounds with his circular saw.

The sale of the stock and implements of Mr Wilbert McColl, was largely attended. Speedy purchases were made by those present at lucrative prices.

The Misses Annie Doube and Elba have returned home after making their annual visit to friends in Peterborough.

Mr. F. McGee has given the contract for his new barn to Mr. J. Wright of Fowlers' Corners.

DANDRUFF CURED IN TWO WEEKS OR MONEY BACK

If you have dandruff, take advantage of this offer and kill the little dandruff germs that will surely steal your hair from you if allowed to continue to persistently burrow into the hair roots.

Parisian Sage is also guaranteed to stop falling hair and itching of the scalp.

Parisian Sage is an exhilarating and pleasant hair dressing; it is not sticky or greasy, and it makes the hair soft, beautiful and luxuriant.

Price is fifty cents a bottle from W. Madill, druggist, Peterborough or by express, all charges prepaid, by the Giroux Mfg Co. Fort Erie, Ont.

Didn't Work Third Degree.

Newark, N.J., Feb. 24.—Chief of Police Michael Corbitt denies the accuracy of the report published on Feb. 4, stating that Mrs. Mary J. Wilhelm had been subjected by the police to what is known as the "third degree." An investigation shows that the so-called "third degree" was not made use of. Her request to view the body of her murdered husband was complied with, the visit to the undertaker's being made at night to avoid publicity.

WILKINS STICKS TO STORY

The night of the shooting he had met the chief by appointment at 1 a.m. at Lynnwood Park, where, after a few words, Malone suddenly opened fire. Wilkins had fallen and lay there for a time, fearing that the chief was still standing over him with the revolver. He knew the motive for the shooting.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kelly, Wilkins, asked why he did not complain about other habits of Malone, as well as his drinking habits, said the drink habit was responsible for the other bad habits. Mr. Kelly suggested that it was not until the goods were found at Wilkins' that the thought occurred to place the whole matter on the shoulders of the chief, whose job Wilkins might now covet.

The reports in the record book as to the causes of the fire, "unknown," "probably set on fire," etc., had been supplied by Malone.

"I was entirely under Chief Malone and did entirely what he told me to do. I was afraid of the man, because he told me to keep my mouth shut, and that if I let anybody pump me my life would not be worth a candle. He said more; he told me that any man who crossed his path his life would be worth little, that he would shoot him down like a dog."

Justice Mulock: "It might be that you are mistaken in the identity of the man who shot you?"

Wilkins: "There is no shadow of a doubt in this case. I am positive, and I am speaking the truth."

Last night's session produced the most important evidence of the trial, with the exception of that of the star witness and complainant, Wilkins.

Stanley Wilson, Ottby Matthews and Margaret Nicholls, three young people who were going home from a party, each swore they saw the prisoner, Malone, about the streets within half an hour of the time of the shooting. The first named lad said that he might have been mistaken, but the other two were quite certain that the man they saw was the then chief of police. Warren Potts heard the shooting and saw a man with a long overcoat on, but he declined to swear to the identification of the man.

Alex. McQueen, jr., and Lewis Barber, who arrested Malone, told how they seized him and took his weapon from him. There was an old useless revolver and a modern 32 long, with every chamber loaded and the trigger cocked.

Mr. Cameron, who has made a study of odors from discharged revolvers and other weapons, said that Malone's revolver had been discharged within 24 hours before he got it, notwithstanding that the weapon was fully loaded when it was seized.

Mrs. Effie Berrie, who keeps a store near the police station, heard a footstep she thought was Malone's going up the stairway of the police station about 2 o'clock the morning of the shooting.

County Constable Collamore found six empty cartridges of the size used in Malone's revolver scattered about the police station shortly after the shooting affray.

SAY WE ARE ALWAYS GOLD

The Prime Minister was unable yesterday afternoon to inform Mr. Borden when the budget speech would be delivered.

The House went into committee of Mr. Aylesworth's bill to prevent the payment or acceptance of illicit commissions. Mr. Aylesworth said he had considered the objections to the bill. He agreed that the general provisions of the criminal code should apply and he had no objection to Mr. Crothers suggesting that two magistrates should sit at the summary trial of an offender under this statute. This was an additional guarantee of a fair trial.

The public accounts committee got down to work in the morning and lifted the veil of a big dredging contract in Quebec.

Valiquette, engineer of the Public Works Department at Quebec, testified that Dussault & Lemieux received a contract for dredging in Quebec harbor at 75 cents per cubic yard in places and 32 cents for filling. The Government supplied one dredge and got a rebate of 20 cents per cubic yard; but the contractors also had three dredges at work.

Mr. Northrup said the contractors reaped 55 cents per cubic yard for doing nothing, but the Liberal "blockers" objected to this line of examination, and a lively discussion arose, in which several of the new Conservative members objected vigorously to the witness being interrupted.

It is expected that Hon. Mr. Fielding will bring down in the Commons in a few days the insurance bill as revised according to suggestions made by the committee of the House which had the original draft of the bill under consideration last session.

While the chief features of the bill have been retained in the redrafted measure in respect to the provisions for securing more readable and detailed reports by insurance companies to the Government as to details of investments of funds, it is understood that there has been some modification of the provisions specifying the class of securities in which these funds may be invested.

Can't Issue Express Franks.

Washington, Feb. 24.—That the interstate commerce law prohibiting the issuance of passes to employes on the railroads is applicable to the granting of express franks was held yesterday by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the American Express Co. against the U. S. The case originated in Chicago.

Don't buy Silver Butter-Spreaders. We have a set of six for you. They are Wm. Rogers & Sons' AA triple plate.
If you could buy this set in a jewelry store it would cost you $3.50.
But this is the lily pattern, made exclusively for us. You can buy nothing like it.
Simply do this: Send us the metal top from a jar of Armour's Extract of Beef, or the paper certificate under the top, with 10c for packing and mailing, and we'll send you one of the Spreaders.
Send 6 tops or certificates and 10c with each and get the full set of six.

Thus, for a little time, we give you back more than you pay for the Extract. We want you to know the many uses of a good Extract of Beef.
Try it in adding flavor to soups, gravies and meat dishes.
Get Armour's, for that is concentrated to four times the strength of others.
Other extracts of beef costing a trifle less go but one-fourth as far. The directions on Armour's are: "Use one-fourth as much."

BEGINNINGS IN MEDICINE

the flames casting the books of Galen and others less noted with the words "So will ye burn in Gehenna." He is sometimes described as a reformer, but his real character was that of an audacious and sensational quack, whose influence had very little effect. He happened to live at the time when various discoveries and revolutions of thought had given an impetus to a revival of anatomical research. An anatomical school was started in Paris and these Sylvius lectured in 1533. He was a famous miser and anatomist. One of his brightest pupils, Vesalius, may be given the credit of being the originator of modern anatomy and the layer of the foundations of modern medicine.

Vesalius encountered difficulty in obtaining material for dissection in his student days. He tells of fighting with hungry dogs for the possession of human bones exposed in the Paris cemeteries of climbing the gibbet and removing a corpse from which the birds had cleaned all the flesh, he even visited the graves as modern body snatchers have done. But later he was given the bodies of criminals to dissect and executions were arranged that the corpse might suit his requirements. He worked for five years at anatomy at Padua as Sir Michael Foster says. Five years he wrought not weaving a web of fancied thoughts but patiently disentangling the pattern of the texture of the human body, trusting to the words of no master admitting nothing but that which he himself had seen and at the end of five years while he was as yet not 28 years old, in 1542 he was able to write the dedication to Charles V. of a folio work entitled "The structure of the human body" adorned with many plates and wood cuts which appeared at Basle in 1542."

This roused the wrath of his old master Sylvius, in that he had dared to contradict Galen. Fierce storms broke out from all quarters and, discouraged he burned his unpublished manuscript and accepted a position as Court Physician at the Court of Charles V. of Spain. Here the Inquisition had full sway, and, though they tortured men living, they permitted not the dissection of the dead. Vesalius says he could not as much as lay his hand on a dried skull much less make a dissection. He endured this till 1561 when his enthusiasm was again fired by a perusal of a book of anatomical observations and he wrote a review of it in which he expressed the hope of again returning to the study of that true Bible Nature—of the human body and of the nature of man.

In 1563 he performed a post-mortem on a nobleman, and when he had opened the body, the heart still beat. The Inquisition laid a penance of a pilgrimage to Jerusalem on the unlicensed vivisectionist and on the way back Vesalius died. He had done his work and with his work medicine passed from the fairy tales of the nursery to the realities of the laboratory. Medical practice and doctrine did not become at once scientific and systematic. Anatomy is only the foundation of medicine nothing more and medicine had to wait on chemistry, physiology, bacteriology and physics for its full development. Yet the foundations were laid fair and square and from the date of the issue of his work onward anatomy pursued an unbroken straightforward course being made successively fuller and thereby the labors of those who came after.

We have given a short account of some of the work of the early fathers of medicine and the views handed down. We come to a period where to give any continuous and consecutive history of medicine would be more laborious and so we will confine ourselves to a few of the great discoveries and their bearing on medicine. Of these one of the greatest and earliest is the discovery of the circulation of the blood by Harvey. Many of Harvey's time considered that he had no basis on which to work but, as a matter of fact, many had some very near a solution of the mystery previous to Harvey. Primitive man when he chopped an artery with a stone axe must have regarded it more as a fountain than a pool. Indeed the Egyptians in their Papyrus, the oldest medical document known note that shortness of breath occurs because the blood does not circulate. Of course this word circulate has no further meaning than move. Plato said: "The blood is carried round to all parts of the body." Hippocrates affirmed. "Where it begins or where it ends I protest I know not for in a circle there is neither beginning nor end." Aristotle distinguishes between arteries and veins but taught that the arteries contained air which was conveyed to the heart by means of the windpipe. Then Erasistratus claimed that the veins conveyed blood and the arteries contained a spirituous principle and that there was communication between them. So that when an artery was cut the blood that escaped was from a vein. Galen as an experimental physiologist was opposed to these on the ground of logic and experiment and proved that an artery contained blood and blood only, but it was different from the blood in the vein in that it contained a greater proportion of pneuma and that these provided the various parts of the body with the nutriment most necessary. He proved a communication between the arteries and veins but never dreamed of a systematic circulation though the pulmonary circulation was almost discovered by him. When Vesalius wrote his book 1500 years later, Galen's views still prevailed and, though he recognised that the doctrines of Galen led to paradoxes, yet he accounted his statement to the dogma of Galen because in a new work he hesitated to swerve from the doctrines of the Prince of Medicine. Winter one of the Vesalius teachers taught that the blood passed through the lungs from the right to the left ventricle and in its passage was elaborated into a pure, subtle, vaporous, and proper ailment of the heart and arteries. The honor of discovery of the lesser circulation is usually ascribed to Servetus a pupil of Winter's. He was a Theologian as well as a great doctor and was burnt by Calvin because he refused to believe in the Calvanistic doctrines and had published an heretical work. Though an acute thinker and a courageous one he was still so much under the dominion of superstition as to believe that the devil could pass up the nostrils with the air of the chambers of the brain and thus lay seige to the soul. In 1559 Matthew Collumbus in his anatomical work, made a definite statement on the pulmonary circulation. So these observers, Galen, Winter, Servetus and Columbus had produced the idea of a communication between the right ventricle and the left auricle through the lungs, but none had learned by what force this was brought about. In 1571 Caesalpinus of Pisa gave a full account of the circulation with the exception of the communication between the arteries and veins in the greater or systematic circulation.

Thus were matters prepared for Harvey by generations of men and he had much to lead and mislead him. His logic shattered the Galenic doctrines of the working of the heart, and then he started to find out how the heart did work. He dissected and vivisected numerous animals and I shall not here detail the course of his discoveries of the mechanism of the heart and the circulation of the blood but, suffice to say, that he made a complete demonstration of the course of the blood, with the exception of the connecting link between the arteries and veins. Regarding this he made many theories which were cleared up a few years after his death by Malpighi, an Italian microscopist, discovering a network of fine termination of arteries and fine beginnings of veins in the lung of a frog. The effect of Harvey's discovery was to cause a great reaction against treatment based on spirits and humors, and the mechanical school arose, which was in many cases carried to extravagance and exaggeration. Despite this Harvey's doctrine eventually became the basis of a large part of modern scientific therapeutics. Modern doctrines of heart disease—its effects and treatment—treatment by transfusion of blood, hypodermic injection, the principle of the tourniquet, tying of arteries for hemmorrhage and aneurism, our knowledge of the nature of blood clot and dropsy, of inflammation suppuration, of respiration and digestion are all fruits of Harvey's work. Sir Thomas Browne considers Harvey's discovery of the circulation of the blood greater than Columbus' discovery of America. Hunter thought the three great discoveries of modern times were the western hemisphere by Columbus, that of the Solar system by Copernicus and the circulation of the blood by Harvey.

In spite of Harvey's work and the impetus given to clear thinking medicine still wandered in the 18th century in the mists of metaphysics. A few great thinkers and workers foreshadowed great facts which have since been proven but on the whole there were vast speculations, as to the ultimate constitution of the body. Observation had begun with the body as a mysterious metaphysical whole, had narrowed down to the body as an aggregate of organs, then to the organs as a patchwork of tissues and with the advent of 1830 of the compound microscope as a weapon of scientific truth it became focused on the ultimate structural elements. The cells Virchow, in 1858, published his great work on cellular pathology and showed that the cell was the true pathological unit, and all diseases were prefigured and accompanied by cellular changes. Thus was man teased out into a tesselated multiplicity of cells and like all great analysis it led to great syntheses. Man, who had dared to consider himself a little lower than the angels, now might venture to consider himself a little higher than the amoeba. He might now say to the worm, "Thou art my brother and my sister," and to the Tubercle Bacillus, "Thou art my brother Cain." All living material whether roses or reptiles, microbes or men, were shown to be either single cells or colonies of cells and all cells were shown to be composed of the same material — protoplasm. Shakespeare said we are of such stuff as dreams are made of, Virchow proved we are also of such stuff as worms are made of.

This conception of man as a cellular colony and conception of disease as a cellular disorder quickly bore fruit. It was soon seen that many tumors, including cancer, were caused simply by the multiplication of normal tissue cells, and that many illnesses were due to specific misdemeanors on the part of cells in certain regions when irritated in various ways. While with the discovery of bacteria of disease a few years later the nature of many diseases as a combat between cell and cell became apparent. To recognize that disease was the chemical inco-ordination and insubordination of cells, to recognize in many cases it was a fight between certain cells of the body and marauding invaders, was to recognize at once new methods of treatment. On the one hand it was possible to correct the chemical discords of the cells—on the other hand it was found possible to exclude disease cells (microbes) by simple defensive devices or to slay them in situ by suitable poisons. It was found that in some cases the cells of the body could be gradually educated to resist most powerful disease germs and that one of the best ways to assist the cells of the body to combat disease was by giving good air and food. Medicine in fact, was at once put on a much more scientific basis and great victories became possible.

To the ordinary individual a microbe suggests only mumps or measles, yet its discovery is one of the most romantic events of the history of medicine. In the seventeenth century, great discoveries were made. Galileo put his eye to the telescope and discovered suns. Leeuwenhoek put his eye to the microscope and discovered microbes —the arsenal of life and death. He discovered animalcules in the saliva, the tartar from the teeth and the rain in the gutter. He shrewdly guessed that these did not originate spontaneously or by the putrefaction of decaying substances, and though he recognized the great fact that all life must arise from some preceding thing it was not till one hundred years later that it was brought forward that germs are the cause of disease. In 1762 Plencis of Vienna, maintained that every disease had its own particular micro-organism but this was only theory and it was 70 years later before Bassi proved this prophecy by demonstrating that silk worms disease was due to a minute cryptogamic plant and expressed the opinion that smallpox and all cutaneous diseases were due to a similar cause. But again he had stated more than he could prove and it was only in 1863 that Davaine captured the Anthrax bacillus the first bacterium of human disease. Since then proofs of the propositions advocated by Plenc's and Bassi have come in quick succession. The bacteria of suppuration were found in 1866, in 1875 the spirilla of relapsing fever, in 1880 the typhoid bacillus, in 1882 the tubercle bacillus, in 1884 the cholera bacillus, and now millions of microscopes are investigating the world opened up by Leeuwenhoek.

For ages the origin of living matter had been a subject of momentous and interesting controversy, and on no war has so many lives depended, involving as it does the practical question of the origin and treatment of disease. Not until 1862 was the question settled, when Pasteur gave final and conclusive evidence that spontaneous generation never occurs, and with this discovery bacteriology acquired a practical importance, for it was at once obvious that if germs did not arise spontaneously, then germ diseases might be prevented by preventing the entrance of microbes, or cured by destroying the microbes after entrance.

As has been said, the first bacterium convicted of homicide was the anthrax bacillus, the microbes causing a disease called anthrax, carbuncle malignant pustule or wool sorters disease or splenic fever. It is comparatively speaking, large, yet 150,000,000 might find elbow room on a postage stamp. It invades the skin, or may be inhaled into the lungs. In France the disease amounted to a plague. In Russia, in one district, during three years 56000 cattle, sheep and horses, and 528 men died of Anthrax, and though the cause was known, and a certain degree of prevention could be carried out, it was not till 1881 that Pasteur succeeded in obtaining a vaccine as a protective against the disease. Since that time, vaccination of animals against Anthrax has been carried out in those districts and its value can be seen when we say that since vaccination ten per cent of sheep and five per cent of cattle died and before .94 per cent of sheep and .34 per cent of cattle. Other microbes that have been the subject of much study and investigation are those of tetanus, hydrophobia, malaria, tuberculosis and yellow fever. The method of carry out these experiments by the investigators, has often been romantic in the determination and heroism displayed by them in exposing themselves to infection, which, in case their theories were not well-founded, would have proven fatal.

The fact that microbes are the cause of disease having been established, the question naturally arose as to why every individual affected by the disease did not succumb. The tetanus bacillus secretes a poison so potent that 3-100 part of a grain is sufficient to kill a man, and the poison of anthrax bacillus is still more virulent. How do the cells of the body resist such poisons? and how can their resistance be increased? It is a matter of Greek meeting Greek, of thief catching thief, of poison antagonizing poison. If the bacteria form poisons fatal to the cells of the body, the cells of the body in turn form poisons fatal to the bacteria cells. They have the power of neutralizing the bacteria toxines by means of substances known as antitoxins, alexins and opsonins.

The workings of the bacteria were first discovered through the action of the fermentation of the yeast in the production of beer. Just as this yeast cell feeds and multiplies in beer so the anthrax bacillus feeds and multiplies in the blood, so changing the blood with its excretions that it poisons the cells instead of nourishing them. It finds the blood a good nourishing food, and it multiplies. They why should it not continue to multiply until it causes the body to die. Various theories were put forward, but to Metchnikoff belongs the honor of ascribing the true reason of the phagocytosis of these bacteria by the white blood cells of the body, by a series of brilliant experiments he has been able to show that when foreign material appears, in the system these scavengers of the body are mobilized to surround it and repel the invasion. The white blood cells are the army and navy of the body—a vast multitude of free cells maintained by the State, that they repel invasion by any unicellular organism. They have minds of their own, tastes and distastes, and it was shown that the immunity of an individual depended on a gradual education of the phagocytes to acquire tastes, and their failure to conquer an infective disease depended on their inadequacy or ineducatibility. There is added to the opsonin produced by the serum of the blood which does much towards overcoming the bacteria by digesting or cooking them, making them palatable for the phagocytes thus producing an immunity for the individual. This has been made use of by scientists in generating an artificial immunity by the injection of the serum of an animal which has overcome the disease, in the form of antitoxin.

The first scientific victory arising out of the knowledge of the nature of disease and the manner in which it attacked was antisepsis. From earliest ages it had been practised by the embalmers, who preserved the dead bodies of animals and men. Their methods were rough, but effectual, and their preservatives were pitch, palm oil, myrrh, cassia, cedar oil and sometimes wax and honey. Wine and vinegar were laid upon wounds. The good Samaritan bound up the wounds of the man, pouring in oil and wine. But throughout these and the middle ages no relationship between germs and suppuration was conceived.

Semmelweiss, an Austrian physician, in 1856, improved the statistics in his department of a maternity hospital, by having all students who attended patients, wash their hands with liquid chlorine, but his discovery was not made much of.

Lister, in 1865, began his work, having the experience of all his predecessors at his command. He noted that all mischief arose from the life contained in the atmospheric particles and declared the requisite precautions to be to dress the wound with some substance capable of killing the septic germs, yet not sufficiently caustic to destroy the tissues. He advocated carbolic acid and in his first three years he reduced the mortality from amputations from 46 per cent. to 15 per cent. But his theory had to fight its way. It was received joyfully by some, but others scoffed at it. The step from antiseptic surgery to aseptic was quickly taken and was a natural outgrowth of Lister's first practical application. Lister's antiseptic surgery has probably saved more lives than have been lost on the battlefields of the world since its discovery, and as long as the world lasts his name must be immortal. The discovery of aseptic surgery has placed it within the power of the surgeon to attempt operations which previously would have meant certain death, and here we have part of the answer of the oft repeated question as to the prevalence of appendicitis and similar diseases at the present time. Thousands died previous to twenty years ago with a diagnosis of congestion or inflamation of the bowels, which, in my opinion, was in nearly all cases due to a perforating appendicites. To-day we would endeavor to prevent such by timely operation for removal of the offending organ.

The origin of anaesthesia is another interesting theme. Its benefits are known to us, but not appreciated as it would be had we unwitnessed the brutality that had to be exerted to restrain the terror-stricken patient to enable the operation to be proceeded with. The overcoming of hydrophobia by the investigation of Pasteur,—the development of preventive medicine,—of diphtheria antitoxin and other defensive serums—the advances of modern surgery in the excision of the stomach, stitching of the heart, operations on the brain, making of noses, transplanting of skin, the advances in medicine a making use of the extracts of certain organs of the body, and the advances made in diagnosis by the use of instruments of precision for examination of the body and its secretions. All these would make material for a paper much longer than I have inflicted upon you. But have no fear I appreciate that I have already transgressed sufficiently by trying your patience to this extent. The subject has been so large that in my condensation I have been able to touch very hurriedly on the outskirts of most and must be satisfied though I have given you only an outline.

VOTE OF THANKS

A vote of thanks, moved by Mr. J. Coyle Brown, and seconded by Mr. Keyes, of the Normal School was tendered Dr. McCulloch for his excellent address, afterwhich the meeting adjourned.

CITY FINANCES

The rate this year will be 20 mills on the dollar. That of last year was 17. Let us see how this comes about. The following table is of interest:

Rates	1908	1909
Administration of Justice	1.21	1.15
City general rate	5.68	6.45
Collegiate Institute	1.54	1.71
Collegiate Institute, debentures	0.57	0.54
City Trust, Public school debentures	1.00	1.00
Public School	4.62	5.66
Local improvement debentures	0.88	1.00
City general debenture debt	1.50	1.46
	17 mills	19 mills

Apparently the difference is between 17 and 19 mills but if all the deficit on current account, viz., $9,350.53 is to be met then it will require the additional mill.

The administration of justice rate shows a decrease because the appropriation of the preceding year was not all expended. This is worthy of note. The increase in item No. 2, the city rate for general purposes is to be .77 or 3-4 of a mill. But this will provide for only $1170.00 of the $9350.00 deficit on general current account. The current account of the Collegiate Institute shows a slight increase while interest on Collegiate Institute debenture debt appears as 54 as against .57 of last year. The city's share of debenture liabilities has gone up from .88 to the full mill. The city general debenture liability is to be decreased by 4-100 of a mill. But this total as we see of 19 mills for 1909 is short by a mill of what it is to be. To the ordinary ratepayer the question arises after a perusal of the above statement, why is this thus? The favorable showing of the administration of justice rate is due to economy in that department. It is well to note that. It would no doubt have been possible to spend more money but it was not spent. The excess in item No. 2. is partly due to the Board of Works' exceeding its appropriation of $16,500 by some $9,000. It spent $24,833. It justifies this on the ground that so many men were out of work last summer that something had to be done to give them employment. Most people will agree with them. If some one was to blame it was not the Board of Works. This year no doubt, well-considered measures will be taken. The Board of Works for 1909 is to have $12,000 and not one cent more. The fire department cost some $5000 more than was intended and that department must bear to that extent the charge of having increased the 1909 rate. The whole council approved of it. The Public School item is said to be unavoidable. Various increased demands for accommodation, equipment, etc, are the cause of difference between last year and this year.

So that boiled down whereas we had a surplus on current account left over from 1907 of $6,500, this year it is a deficit of $9,350, or a difference of $15,800 as compared with that year. Every dollar of increase raises the rate in an alarming way. So far no serious fault can be found with what was done except in this that the city should not get into a 20 mill habit. It is oppressive and we believe unnecessary. The request of last year's school board that $10,000 of equipment for the Collegiate Institute should go on this year's rate will excite protest. This would mean a death rate not a tax rate, of say 22 mills. Let this go to the debenture debt. It all shows how much easier it would have been for the ratepayers to have voted the $100,000 in the first place than to have it built up to a long drawn out way. When the Separate School was pulled down it was pulled down and Mr. Vincent Eastwood asked the people what they were going to do about it. One Alderman is reported to have said that the people will just have to be more careful in the selection of their trustees. This little feud between the Council and the Board is not wholly warranted. It is a case of taking notice and being more careful in future for both bodies, it would seem.

"FLORADORA" TO-MORROW NIGHT

It is quite safe to say a musical treat is to be given us tomorrow when the favorite Imperial Opera Co. present the tuneful opera of Florodora with its beautiful scenery and gorgeous costumes, all of which have been especially made for this tour.

In addition to the many former favorites in the cast, the services of Miss Florence Burdette, formerly of the Gaiety Theatre in London, have been secured and she will be seen in the role of Lady Hollyrood, as has also Mr. Herbert Salinger, from the Casino Theatre in New York, who handles the important part of "Tweedlepunch"

With such a charming singer and actress as Agnes Cain-Brown, at the head of the list, ably assisted by the above-mentioned, and Harry Girard, Hallen Mostyn, W. H. Pringle, Miss Laura Christopher, W. L. Doyle and a most capable chorus of sixty singers, a night of real opera will be seen and heard.

A new cavalry regiment is to be organized in Brant county.

SCHOOL BOARD WAS CRITICIZED

The Board of Education came in for some criticism at last night's meeting of the city council. Ald. Hicks said the Board had done a bad stroke of business in spending more money than provided for on the Collegiate Institute without notifying the council.

PETERBORO' ON THE MAIN LINE

The City Will be Placed on That Division of the C. P. R.

Toronto is to be placed on the C.P.R. main line at last, and Peterborough will also be on the main division.

It is stated that when the next change of time is announced in the transcontinental train schedule, due provision will be made for a service from Montreal to the west via Toronto and Sudbury, instead of via Ottawa and North Bay.

This will be following out the kindly words towards Toronto uttered by President Shaughnessy at the Board of Trade banquet in Toronto last summer.

Floro doa Music

The music of Florodora is exceptionally pretty and catchy and the audience will recognize many favorites in the score. Some of the best hits are, "Tell Me Pretty Maiden," "The Shade of the Palm," "Queen of the Philippine Isles," "Tact," "We Get Up at 8 a.m."

The seats for Florodora are selling rapidly, but there are still a few good seats left. Order early by phone or call at box office.

SPECIAL

Special meetings are being held nightly, except Saturday, at 8 p.m., and Sunday night at 7 p.m. in the Assembly hall, George street, under Bradburn's old opera house, conducted by Evangelists J. Pearson, formerly of Byfield, Mass, and W. P. Douglas, city.

All are cordially invited. NO COLLECTIONS.

MISS CROLY PASSED AWAY IN NEW YORK

A telegram was received in the city to-day announcing the death in New York of Miss Fannie Croly, a former resident of Peterborough. She was a daughter of the late T. M. D. Croly of Peterborough, and resided here till last fall when she went to New York. Her mother passed away in Peterborough a few months ago. Miss Croly had many friends in Peterborough and her death will be learned of with deep regret. She passed away at the Red Cross Hospital, having been ill for several months. She is survived by one brother, Mr. Louis Croly, of New York.

The remains will arrive here on the C.P.R. local to-morrow night. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

Gone to Cobalt

Mr. R. Adams left yesterday for Cobalt, where he will spend some time. The "chief" will be much missed, especially around the Peterborough Bowling Club alleys, where he was a general favorite.

"SOCK" SOCIAL GREAT SUCCESS

Held at St. Luke's Last Evening Under Auspices of the Ladies' Aid

A very successful "sock" social was held last evening in St. Luke's schoolroom under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of that church. A large number were present, the price of admission being two cents an inch according to the measurement of one's foot. The money was placed in little socks which were given each one and handed in at the door.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt was in the chair and introduced the following programme:

Vocal solo—Miss Ruby Quartermaine.
Recitation—Miss Billings.
Vocal solo—Mr Jos. Mercier.
Intermission.
Vocal solo—Miss Ruby Quartermaine.
Vocal solo—Miss Bertha Curtis.
Recitation—Miss K Leary.
Instrumental duet—Misses K Leary and Shearer.

During intermission refreshments were served by the ladies who deserve great credit for the success of the affair.

The evening was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

health show a very advanced state, suited to the conditions of the climate and the people.

The Indian and Chinese systems were very primitive, the Chinese lasting continuously, however, for about 4000 years.

The Greek system is that from which our present day system traces its origin mainly. Its most famous exponent was Aesculapius, whose origin is enshrouded in mythology. Temples were erected to his honout and schools of instruction established there. His followers and the priests in the temples dedicated to him, soon formed a separate caste, transmitting their medical knowledge from one to another as a family heritage.

After the Trojan war navigation became free and the worship of Aesculapius passed from Greece into Asia, Africa and Italy. The temples were placed among groves, near thermal springs and fountains. Pilgrimages were made to them and the pilgrims were stimulated in their faith and imagination. They were purified by prayer, abstinence and sacrifice, and sometimes were required to lie in the temple for one or more nights. Sometimes, at least, the grossest frauds and basest trickery were relied on for the purpose of influencing the minds of those weakened by their abstinence or influenced by drugs. In the neighbourhood of the temples serpents abounded, non-venomous and easily tamed, and these were employed by the priests in various supernatural performances by which to impress the ignorant. It is probably due to this that the serpent became a symbol along with the Ausculapian staff in medicine.

These temples were very successful and their claims and cures put Christian Science quite in the shade. A man who had only one eye was visited by the god during the night and ointment applied to the empty orbit, On awakening he found that he had two sound eyes. Wnother man had no hair on his head. He prayed to the god to make it grow again. Aesculapius applied some ointment and next morning there was a thick growth of hair. What a business we could do if we knew that ointment! His method of curing dropsy was simple. He cut off the patient's head, held up the patient's body by the heels to let the water run out adn then clapped on the head again!

Later the temples practised good, sound, common sense therapeutics, prescribing simple food, gymnastics, riding, friction, massage, counter irritation, baths, poultices. Among drugs were iron, bellebore, squills lime. For diet of indigestion we read that a diet of bread and curdled milk, milk and honey, lemons boiled in water, parsley and lettuce was prescribed. Recently Metchnikoff, the Russian scientist, has pointed out the value of sour milk in intestinal disorders.

In the period of Greek philosophy, charms, incantations and magic play a less important part. The bond between medicine and theology is loosening and that between medicine and philosophy is being formed. The early Greek thinkers regarded motion as the only criterion of life and stars, fires, waves, winds were living things the same as the body, and their endeavour was to reduce the body and the universe to the same physical laws. The king of physicians of this period was undoubtedly Hippocrates, usually called the Father of Mdecine. In this age the Greek mind was emerging from myth and superstition to distinguish between fact and fiction. Navigation, exploration and conquest extended the borders of the natural world and the supernatural receded. The myths were exploded and reason rose and shook the foundations of the temples of the gods.

In the gods no thinkers believed, but, as usual, the thinkers were few and the mass of men clung to their superstitions and were ready to stone their prophets. Anaxagoras was condemned to die. Euripides was cursed as a heretic. Aeschylus narrowly escaped being stoned to death. Pericles was accused of atheism and Socrates was given the cup of hemlock. Geography, history and logic mattered not to the mob.

Into this atmosphere was born Hippocrates—said to have been a descendant of Aesculapius, certainly one of his followers. He crystallised and systematised and developed doctrines and ideas which, up to his time, had been ill-defined, and separated the chaff from the wheat. He did much to put medical practice and theory on a scientific and reasonable basis. He had nothing but scorn for the "windbags" and "street corner prophets," who dealt in incantations and purifications and sought to conceal their own ignorance and impotence uunder the mantle of the divine. He believed in a diety and saw that natural law was not incompatible with a divine law-giver.

He endeavoured to base a doctrine of disease on the humors of the body. There were four cardinal humors—blood, phlegm, black bile, yellow bile. The tissues were formed by putrefaction and coagulation, condensation and rarefaction, melting and boiling from the warm, the cold, the moist, the dry, the fat and the gelatinous. Man enjoyed health when each humor was in due proportion of gravity and force, but especially, when properly commingled. Disease occured when when any humor was excessive or deficient, or if the humors were not duly bblended.

In practice Hipprocrates appears to have relied more on general measures than drugs. He poulticedm bled and dieted, he gave purgatives and diuretics and in quite a modern pirit prescribed baths and change of just as civilized bad been evolved from the course diet of primitive man. The first efforts at experimental physiology may be considered as arising with this school when they they gave man foods of vairous kinds and induced vomiting to observe what advance digestion had made in each case. His knowledge of anatomy was defective. He recognised blood vessels as continuous with the heart but did not distinguish between veins and arteries. Ligaments, tendons and nerves were the same to him, and muscles were classified as flesh and not individualized, which is rather peculiar as statues of that period show that the great sculptors of that day indicated muscles indi.

The great feature of the Hippocratic system was its study of symptoms—inferences were ddrawn from the expression, complexion, posture, manner, voice and quantity of secretions, and though they were often wrong they served to show how much could be inferred from symptoms. His descrptions are picturesque and accurate, and to this day the facial signs of impneding death are spoken of as the Facies Hippocratica, because of their being so vividly described by him.

The intellectual improvement of medicine under Hippocrates was commensurate with the moral. The so-called Oath of Hippocrates enacts that the physician, among other things, is to help the sick according to his knowledge and power, to rigidly abstain from every evil, iriminal abuse of the means and instruments of his art, to supply no poison, to keep an inviolable silence about the secrets which he learned in his calling or even outside it.

His writings enjoin the physician to have good manners, dress neatly, and avoid perfumes—he must be temperate, honourable, humane, modest, just, affable and clean; he must oppose fraud and superstition, show courage in adversity, must have a due sense of the divine power and recognize that to Heaven he owes his success. How much higher have our ideals risen since or I wonder how much nearer have we come to reaching them.

On the death of Hippocrates he was promptly defied and thus he who abjured magic when living was reputed to perform magic dead.

After Hippocrates came Aristotle, a distinctly retrogressive step. As a scientist he had some of the worst attributes of a modern physical investigator, indistinctness of ideas, confusion of mind, and a confident use of language, which led to a delusive notion that he had really mastered his subject, when he had as yet failed to grasp the elements. He preached induction without practising it passing from the general to the particular instead of from the particular to the general. Many of his statements are inaccurate, and he made no experimental researches. He owes his scientific reputation to his garrulity and the ignorance of his audience just as many reputations are thus won.

Alexander the Great, a pupil of Aristotle, founded at Alexandria a museum or school, which became the greatest university the world has probably ever seen. Under its roof were poets, astronomers, engineers, chemists, bottanists, biologists, the literary dandy and the grim theologian, and in this envronment medicine spent the second part of its infancy and throve in the dissecting room of the Alexandrian museum. The Egyptians had practised embalming for thousands of years, but were opposed to dissection of the human body, but Ptolemy Philadelphas allowed hs professor of anatomy not only to dissect dead human bodies, but to vivisect animals and criminals. the dissection undoubtedly put both medicine proper and surgery on a more accurate and scientific basis. Erasistratus, one of the first anatomists, distinguished between nerves of motion and sensation; he was aware of the valves of the heart and seems even to have seen lacteals, which were not rediscovered for nearly 2,000 years. Herophilus, his colleague, dissected 600 bodies and also some live animals. At the same time, as advance were made in anatomy, surgery and pharmacy were progressng. New drugs and preparations were ntroduced and new operations and instruments were evolved.

The glory of the Alexandria school passed with the Ptolemies and Rome now became the centre of the civilized world and when the next genius in medicine appeared in the 2nd century, A D., Rome is his theatre. Galen was educated at Alexandria, though by birth a Greek, and gravitated to Rome. He was a geat anatoimst, but it was chiefly as an experimenal physiologist he acquired fame. He demonstrated that the cords in the heart, which Aristotle called nerves, were not nerves, and have no connection with nerves. But the argument that the heart was not the seat of the soul was met by saying that a man laid his hand on his heart to give emphasis to the assertion of self. The doctrine of Aristotle, regarding the brain, was that it was merely a kind of sponge to cool the heart; but Galen proved by ingenious experiments that serious injury to a part of the brain affected the opposite side of the body. He showed that injury to the cord at various levels produced different forms of paralysis. Unable to understand why, he concluded a sort of air or subtle spirit ran down the nerve and there were 3 kinds—vital, animal, natural, and this classificaton and idea persisted for centuries. Galen also made many other discoveries in physiological chemistry.

Thus was a good beginning made under Hippocrates, Erasistratus, Erasistratus, Herophilus and Galen, but the development was arrested after Galen's death. Greece was no more, Rome was unfavourable soil for the growth of science and Alexandria was in decline. Thelogical controversies were raging and neoplatonism arose. The aim and end of existence was a mystical union with God—the body was a delusion and a lie, a strait-jacket of the soul. The Church took upon itself the power of arbiter and all teaching had to conform to Scripture. Hence died geography, engineering, astronomy, and history, and moral and intellectual progress became impossible. Medicine fell with the rest. The The world was dying of dogma. But just as it is surprising to see such a brilliant beginning in progress ending so disastrously, so aid came from an unexpected quarter. While creeds were contending for mastery Mahommed was born in 509 A. D. His battle cry: "There is but one God and Mahommed is his prophet," together with a sharp scimitar in a few years extended the rule of the Arabians east and west so that all the cities of western Asia and northern Africa were in their hands. When they took Alexandria the great libraries were burned by order of the Khalif, who said that if they disagreed they were wicked. Legends asserts that the books were so numerous as to heat the baths (40,000 in number) of the city for 6 months. Though this concurred, the Arabs were not opposed to literature and in a short time they became parons, custodians and cultivators of ancient learning. They did not accept the beliefs of the Fathers of the Church, owing to their antagonism to the Trinitarian doctrines, and so they went to the ancient Greeks for their science and philosophy. The Nestorians, who had been expelled from Constantinople in 431 A. D., on account of their heresies with regard to the Trinitarian doctrine, had settled in the valley of the Euphrates and had taken great interest in learning, taking a special interest in medicine. They are said to have been the first to write books dealing in a systematic way with the employment of medicine. These were invited by the Arabs to translate the Greek words into Arabic, and later their learned men were made teachers of the sons of the more important Arabs. Learned men were given a place at Court and no mosque was built unless with a school attached to it, and one of the most magnificent and enlightened civilizations the world has ever known was being developed.

In ths atmosphere throve in some ways and and in others ceased from growing. Chemistry was the Arabs' hobby pursuing it with a view to mage or to obtain the elixir of life. There was advance in pharamcy and surgery, but their anatomy suffered as to the Mussulman it was sacrilege to touch a corpse. Consequently their anatomy was based on the writings of the Greeks, and from this time onward Galen came to be considered almost as a God. Hence we find his vews governing Meanwhile Europe was bound hand and foot with the vain philosophies and theologies which paralyzed the reason of men. In a roundabout way the writings of Galen reached them. The Greek writings were tranlated into Syriac, then into Arabic, sometimes through the Hebrew into Latin. This process did not improve the quality of the science, but it was at least a rush light in the darkness. In the 10th, 11th, 12th, and 13th centuries the immigration of Jews learned in Arabic medicine, added to the influence of the writings. Roger Bacon, in the 13th century had the courage to believe his own senses, rather than Aristotle, and his scientific spirit was remarkable for the age. He was not a medical scientist, but he preerred the way for truth. His scientific work was rewarded by 10 years of imprisonment.

In 1453 Constantinople was captured and a remnant of learned Greeks moved to Italian soil, stimulating the revval of Greek learning. The original writings of Hippocrates and Galen were revealed and many discrepancies between them and their Arabic commentators noed. Men began criticism and argument, and men had to use their long-neglected reason and choose. Sides were taken and Christian ranged against infidel in the controversy. The invention of the printing press had its influence, but more important as a stimulus to independent scientific thought was the advance in discovery by Columbus and Magellan, and the publishing of the heresy that the earth revolved on its axis by Copernicus, Bruno and Galileo, upsetting the dogma of the geography of the fathers.

In 1526 Paracelsus began an attack on the medical dogma of the time. Iitatingm uther, he began a course o fmedical lectures at Basle by lighting a basin of sulphur and in all thought up to 1,500 years after his death and thus it took a man of some backbone to question things which had been accepted for so long.

THE FINALS IN THE CHURCH LEAGUE LIKELY THIS WEEK

This week will likely see the finish of the Junior Church League, if any, ice is available. There have been many close and interesting games in this league and Murray street and All Saints are now a tie with five wins and one loss to their credit. All the games have been played on Knox rink, and the players are to be commended on the way the schedule has been carried out. All Saints' and Murray street will play a sudden death game for the championship this week, some time, and as both teams have strong sevens, a fast game may be expected.

FRED. SIMPSON IN TORONTO; IS AFTER RECORDS NOW

Looking as fresh as a daisy, and feeling better than that, Fred Simpson jumped off the train at the Union Station this morning with his manager, Tom Eck.

Simpson has undertaken a big task on short notice, namely, the setting up of a Canadian ten mile record, and also a professional ten mile record indoors And there is a strong probability that Simpson will do it. He is the picture of health, and unquestionably is in fine condition every way.

Simpson and Eck left Savannah, Georgia, where the Objiway has been doing his training on Saturday and from New York came straight to Toronto.—Toronto News.

STRATHS. WON'T PLAY TO-NIGHT

Word was received from Lakefield this afternoon that the ice was in no condition for a hockey match and the game arranged for with Leo Quinn's aggregation of that place by the Strathconas has been called off. The game may be played on Friday night if there is good ice, as this is needed by both teams to enable them to do their best.

INTERMEDIATE BASKETBALL

At the Y.M.C.A. tonight Port Hope and Peterborough will play a district championship game in the intermediate series of the provincial basketball league. Port Hope will bring a strong team with them.

The locals have had lots of practise for the match and will be able to put up an interesting argument. Play will commence at eight o'clock.

WRESTLING

Yankee Rogers went on with Champion Frank Gotch at the Star Theatre last night with the determination to earn the fifty dollars offered by the management if Gotch failed to throw him within fifteen minutes. It was the opinion of the crowded house that Rogers earned the money. There were times when it looked as if Gotch would throw his opponent but Rogers succeeded in getting out of difficulty. Rogers was on the defensive almost all the time. After seven minutes work however, he went after Gotch but the latter soon made him resort to defensive tactics. The finish came with the men doing a mauling act off the mat. Gotch's work was a revelation to those who had never seen the champion in action.

Game To-night

The Peterborough Hardware Co.'s team will meet Cressman's Counter Hoppers at Brock street rink between seven and eight o'clock. The hardware men will line up as follows;

Goal, "Scotty" McCullock.
Point, "Sleigh" Shea.
Cover point, "Foxy" Squires.
Rover, "Irish" Flanagan.
Centre, "Buck" Cox.

WON'T PLAY GAME HERE

Peterborough hockey fans will be disappointed to learn that the Kingston-T.A.A.C. game will not be pulled off here. Kingston want home and home games, while T.A.A.C. want a sudden death, as they claim it is impossible to get their players together for two games.

However, the O.H.A. decided on home and home games and it's up to the teams to swallow their medicine. The dates will be fixed after the result of the T.A.A.C.-Osgoode Hall game, which comes off tonight, is ascertained.

SPORTING TALK

Galt won the Ontario professional hockey league last night by defeating the flying Dutchmen on their own rink by the score of 4—2. Fred Dougherty played a star game and was largely instrumental in winning the game.

Harry Morgan has consented to referee the church league games at the Brock street rink tomorrow night.

Dick Baker, formerly of this city, wants to bring his Kodak team of Toronto down here to play the Strathconas. He may be accommodated if there is any ice next week.

The sign "Wrestling match tonight" displayed in front of the roller rink for the past week, would lead any strangers in the city to imagine this was such a great centre for that strenuous game that a bout was being pulled off every night.

There were no games at Brock St. rink yesterday.

Keene hockey fans are anxious to see the Strathconas in action and are offering big inducements to the ex-champions to make the trip.

BOWLING

The scores in the Y.M.C.A. tournament games last night were as follows;

Elliott	135	177	122

Hetherington	83	93	102

BIG LIST FOR GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE

New York Feb. 22.—Thirteen of the greatest long distance athletes in Europe left Liverpool Saturday on the Cunard Line steamer Lucania to compete in the international six-day go-as-you-please race at Madison Square Garden during the week of March 8-13.

The European representatives were selected from over one hundred and fifty applicants and the list includes several runners who have played important parts in recent professional races throughout Europe. The countries represented by the athletes who sailed yesterday are England, France, Ireland, Italy, Holland and Belgium.

The race marks a departure in the history of professional athletes. Unlike the old-time six-day walking matchs this event will be a six-day Marathon contest, in all that the name implies, and as it is a team competition new world's records will probably be hung up for all the distances after the first fifty miles.

SMALLWOOD IN RACE.

To meet the European champions the best men in the United States have been selected, and although the pairing of the men has not yet been completed the teams already selected give every indication of putting up a stiff argument with the foreigners. In addition to the American teams, which will probably number ten and comprise the greatest distance runners in the country, Percy Smallwood, champion of Wales, has just entered the contest with James Curran, champion of Scotland, as a partner.

The list of entries also includes teams of Indians Canadians, Germans Greeks, Swiss and an extra Italian pair. The United States army will also be represented by the best endurance men in the service, and it is probable that a Hindu combination will be added to the list.

THE TEAMS ENTERED.

The teams officially selected up to date are;—

Italy—Ettore Ferri and Guido Palanti.

Holland—W. W. Wakker and C. sen.

France—Louis Orphee and Edouard Cibot.

Belgium—Alexander Navez and Albert Doms.

Ireland—Jack Sapsford and Fred. Wooledge.

Canada—David Hartley and Anthony Higgins.

Italy—Mario Rovere and Umberto Rovere.

Indians—W. Davis and partner.

Greece—N. G. Athanassiades and Andrew Davaris.

United States Army—Harvey Endlish and G. Hunt.

United States.—Mike Spring and Ed. Adams, Frank Annable and J. P. O'Driscoll, P. J. Dineen and Albert H. Corey, Henry Shelton and James Fraser, George Harrington and Jerry Sullivan Edward von Kaenal and Irving Coleman.

HOCKEY

The Peterborough Hardware and Cressman's hockey teams will play tonight at Brock street rink from seven to eight. Both teams have a likely looking bunch and should put up a good exhibition.

George Barrie will handle the bell, and the teams will line-up in the following order.

THOUGHT BOUT WAS GOOD ONE

A North Dakota follower of sport, registered at the Oriental, thought the bout at the roller rink between Kaiser and Hurtubise was one of the very best he ever saw. He said if such a fine mat struggle took place in Dakota the fans would be willing to pay almost any admission to be allowed to witness it.

SLIGHT DROP IN PRICE OF HAY

Is Now Selling in Peterborough at $13.00 Per Ton—Local Market is Quiet

There being neither sleighing or good wheeling resulted in the market being quiet during the past week. Wheat took a quiet jump and reached even the $ mark and oats also advanced to 45c. The hay supply has been so good that the price has dropped somewhat, the best figure now being $13. The high prices that prevailed for hogs during the past two or three weeks have dropped slightly and the best now realized is $6.50. Cattle quotations remain the same.

Dr. Bell's New Airship.

Sydney, N.S., Feb. 24.—Dr. Alexander Graham Bell's new tetrahedral airship Cygnet II. made a trial trip over Bras d'Or Lakes, with Douglas MacCurdy as navigator. The final was made from an automobile running along the ice. Shortly after the machine had got under way one of the propellors broke, and the ship came slowly down, scarcely damaging the huge, yet fragile, framework.

The Cygnet is constructed on the tetrahedral principle, having upwards of 5,000 cells, and is the first of its kind ever sent up with a motor and man aboard.

B. C. Hotbed of Indian Sedition.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 24.—Sensational statements regarding the collection of funds with which rifles and ammunition are purchased by a Bengalese in Seattle to arm disaffected natives in Bengal against the British Government, were made in the Police Court by Narain Singh, a Sikh giving evidence in an assault case. It was alleged that a local teacher and a Vancouver priest are collecting the moneys to send munitions of war to Bengal.

Investigation is being made by the Attorney-General's Department.

To Harness Fundy Tides.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 24.—With the idea of harnessing the world famous tides of the Bay of Fundy and utilising the latent power therein contained for mechanical purposes, a company has been organized and will petition the Dominion Parliament for an act of incorporation.

In its petition the company indicates that its purpose is to develop electric power, and it seeks authority to construct dams across a large number of rivers in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia subject to the laws with reference to navigable rivers.

Wife Fights Annulment.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—Judge Martineau of the Superior Court yesterday annulled the marriage of Augustus H. Agnew, son of a rich family, who married, while under age, and a cadet in Kingston to a Miss Gober, a school teacher.

Miss Gober is a southerner, and the Agnews have prominent connections in Ontario and Quebec.

The fight has been going on on behalf of the boy's parents for several years now, and will probably be continued, as the wife intends to appeal to the Privy Council.

STOLE SEVERAL TURKEYS AND DUCKS FROM A SHED

During last night some one entered the shed at the rear of the residence of Mr. W. H. Hamilton, Bethune street, and carried away six turkeys, two ducks and two sides of bacon. Mr. Hamilton was not aware of the theft until this morning. The matter was referred to the the police, who are making an investigation. Mr. Hamilton has suspicions as to who the guilty party is.

THE PYTHIANS ENTERTAIN IN THEIR CASTLE HALL

Another pleasant evening was spent by the Knights and their friends last night after the regular meeting, the boys welcoming their friends in knightly fashion.

Progressive euchre was the first item of the evening's amusement, after which an excellent programme of instrumental music, songs, speeches and friendly intercourse whiled away the time. At this point a dainty luncheon was enjoyed.

Instrumental—The Mandolin club.
Speeches from the winners of the euchre game.
Song—Bro Freeland.
Piano solo—Mr H Nichol.
Song—Mr John King.
Speech and song — Bro J A. McDonald of Ottawa.
Duet—Bro W A Greenslade and Mr John King.
Song—Mr Beggs, of Toronto
Selection—Mandolin club.
God Save the King.

Bro. Jim Squires acted in the capacity of chairman and kept everyone in the best of humor with his witty sallies.

The accompaniments were played with artistic taste by Mr Nichol and the various numbers on the programme were appreciated by all present and the fourth social evening was voted by all an evening profitably spent.

At the close a vote of thanks was extended to all who had contributed to the evening's entertainment.

EUCHRE CONTEST ON WEDNESDAY

The Young Conservative Club announce another euchre constest for members, to be held in the rooms on Wednesday March 3rd. Three prizes will be contested for, first, second and third high scores respectively. These contests are interesting and exciting, and no doubt a large number will be on hand next Wednesday evening.

Ald. J. Duffus attended the automobile show held in the St. Lawrence hall, Toronto on Monday, and Tuesday. Ald. Duffus also purchased a handsome Ford touring car. He expects to have it here about the first of April.

OYSTER SUPPER AT COLDSPRINGS

An oyster supper was held at the Springville Sunday school hall last night and it was a very successful function. A large number were in attendance. When the supper was over a moving picture entertainment was given. The machine was operated by Mr. Herb Peters and the illustrated songs were sung by the girls of the Sunday school.

NAVY BLUE SERGE IS THE STANDBY

Coat Suits and Trailing Coat Costumes in Smart Effects

Navy blue serges and fine cloths still offer themselves as serious rivals to the new tweeds and friezes when coat and shirt costumes for immediate wear have to be considered In fact, it would almost seem as though navy blue gowns would very soon become a kind of uniform for well-dressed women at all events, for the earlier hours of the day. The color has much to recommend it, partly because it was so generally becoming, and also on account of the amiable way in which it can be combined with other and more brilliant shades.

A touch of vivid emerald green, for instance, or of bright cerise, seen perhaps in the form of a smart little cravat in glace silk or in crepe de chine, strikes a distinctive note at once, and yet harmonise perfectly with the rest of the gown.

It is only just at the throat, however, that this introduction of contrasting color is desirable, more especially as the navy blue coats and skirts of the moment are so frequently adorned with elaborate designs carried out in black silk brading and decorated also with the multiplicity of buttons, indispensable to the latest mode. Some of the prettiest of the new coats in navy serge are cut up all the way round, into long panels, bordered with wide black braid. These panels start from some distance above the natural line of the waist, and are connected together with loops of silk cord and the inevitable buttons. Other navy serge costumes are being made with perfectly plain skirts, cut in a sensibly short length for walking and trimmed only with two or three rows of black silk braid at the hem. The coats are made in long, close-fitting Directoire shape, with wide revers of black satin and a bordering line of black silk braid to edge the garment throughout.

BACKACHE IS THE DANGER SIGNAL

This Simple Home Mixture Said to Prevent Serious Kidney Trouble

More people succumb each year to some form of kidney trouble than any other cause. The slightest form of kidney derangement often devlops into Bright's kidney disease, diabetes or dropsy. When either of these diseases are suspected the sufferer should at once seek the best medical attention possible. Consult only a good, first-class physician.

There are many of the lesser symptoms of kidney trouble which can be treated at home is stated by a well-known authority. For some of these, such as backache, pain in the region of the kidneys, weak bladder, frequency, (especially at night) painful scalding and other urinary troubles, try the following simple home remedy; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple ingredients are harmless and can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy and anyone can mix them by shaking well in a bottle. The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and again at bedtime.

There is no more effective remedy known to relieve all forms of rheumatism, because it acts directly upon the kidneys and blood. It cleans the clogged up pores in the kidneys so they can filter and strain from the blood the poisonous uric acid and waste matter which if not eliminated remain in the blood, decompose and settle about the joints and muscular tissues causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.

Backache is nature's signal notifying the sufferer that the kidneys are not acting properly. "Take care of your kidneys." is now the physician's advice to his patients.

Enough people have gone into Gowganda to stake all the minerals, between Lake Temiskaming and the north pole, [illegible]

ALL THE DISTRICTS DOING SPLENDIDLY

In the Review's European Tour and Diamond Contest---Candidates Busily at Work--- Over 300,000 Votes Polled.

GO OUT AFTER THE VOTES

That is the Way, and the Only Way, to Win the Trip Abroad or One of the Other Prizes.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

The total vote polled up to the present time is sufficient indication of the interest taken in the Review's popularity contest. Taking into consideration the number of active contestants and the length of time the competition has been running, the vote is surprisingly heavy. The ladies' list is a remarkably strong one, as the high scores show. The total vote in this is more than 130,000. The ladies in the county also have a strong list, about 85,000 votes being registered. Several very active candidates in the county have made gains within a week.

The men in the city are warming up to the struggle in fine style. There are four contestants with but 3000 votes between them, and yesterday's entrant has a good start. The list shows five good hustlers and the opportunity open for as many more to join the race. The greater the number in one list the fewer votes it will take to win.

The greatest surprise of all is in the men's list in the county. Less than a week ago it looked like a one-man race for two prizes. What a snap that would have been for Mr. Smithson. Since Monday, however, indications show "fire" in this line. If the fighting qualities of the "actives" mean anything, there will be a very warm contest in this list.

The contest has almost four weeks to run, and much can be accomplished in that time. In fact, new entrants on the last day candidates are accepted (usually a month before the close) often win the grand prize. The opportunities are equal for all, and it is up to the candidates to take advantage of them.

Contestants in District No. 2, have as much to gain as those in the city. The vote on the Weekly is proportionately, money considered, which is manifestly fair, for the reason that county candidates have to cover more ground and consume more time to get the same results. A few Weekly clubs will help out wonderfully. The least number of votes a Weekly club can carry is 10,000. Add to this the special ballot for 5000 extra votes, and you have 15,000. If the club is made up with two Weekly subscriptions of five years each from two different subscribers, the gain is much greater—five years Weekly to one person carries 9000 votes, the second subscriber for five years, of course, getting another 9000, making 18,000 and after adding the special ballot, the candidate will have 23,000 votes for the one "good" Weekly club. Get one or two of these if you can.

Ladies' list, city	134.514
Ladies' list, country	82.190
Men's list, city	55.597
Men's list, country	37.264
Total	309.565

The voting yesterday as a whole was light. Miss Perry increased her lead in first place, and Mr Strickland tightened his grip on second place. Miss Dawson, Miss Adams and Miss Whetung and Mr. Mowry also voted the previous pinks.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number cheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE TO BRIDGES OF THE COUNTY

Hope's Bridge to be Rebuilt—Special Session of County Council—Report From Special Committee—Agricultural School for Norwood.

The County Council held a session at the Court House, Monday evening and transacted considerable business.

The chief item was the report of the special committee sent out to inspect the bridges in the county. As a result several thousand dollars will be spent in that way this year.

Those present were.—Warden Scott, Councillors Breault, Kidd, Knox Comstock, Russell, Tucker, Hales Darling, Moher, Perdue, Coben, Shaw, Brown, Fife, Stewart and Graham.

Mr. George Fitzgerald asked the County Council to solicit the Game And Fisheries Department of Ontario to consider him and thereby take him on the staff again. On motion of Messrs. Moher and Breault the request was granted and the Ontario Government will be notified.

Mr. Lees, the public school inspector, addressed the Council and explained the system employed in paying public school inspectors, suggesting that Peterborough County advance more money by way of the county's share. On motion the matter was referred to the June session.

On motion Messrs. McWilliams and Armstrong were heard in reference to the Orange Order using the court room this summer for their annual convention. On motion the request was granted.

On motion of Messrs. Breault and Comstock the account of the Havelock Standard of $16.56 balance on minutes of 1908 and $60 on account of assessment schedules, 1909, was passed.

Warden Scott brought up the matter of the caretaker of the Burleigh bridge. Mr. Bates was appointed overseer of the work done there and rendered good service. He was never paid anything and was entitled to something. On motion he was given $5.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.

Mr. R. Lees notified the Council that it was the intention of the Ontario Government to establish three more agricultural schools in the province. Norwood was trying to get one located there, and the East Peterborough Agricultural Society and Board of Education were working it up, and it was desirable to have the county co-operate with them. The Council was favorably impressed and a committee composed of Messrs. Breault, Comstock and Darling were appointed to work with the Norwood people and to go with them to the Ontario Government during the present session.

ROADS AND BRIDGES.

The special committee appointed to inspect the different bridges in the county made the following report;—

To the members of the Council;—

Gentlemen—We, your committee appointed at the January session to inspect certain bridges with a view to report on the same at this a special meeting called for the purpose.

HOPE'S BRIDGE, OTONABEE.

We found as expected an old bridge that now, and has been for some time a county bridge, in a bad state of repair. The timbers are rotten and in such a condition that all traffic of heavy loads have ceased to pass over it. The old bridge is 160 feet long at present, but would not only recommend the rebuilding of a permanent bridge but the shortening of the same to 75 feet between abutments. [illegible]

Steel's bridge and Davidson's bridge your committee also visited. Steel's bridge being a county bridge at present, we would recommend the same to be scraped and re-painted.

With reference to Davidson's bridge we found a wooden one that is, in our opinion, adequate for the present time, and with small expenditure would do for several years yet.

WELBECK'S BRIDGE

ROBSON'S BRIDGE

The above bridge is at present a county bridge and the flooring and upper part of the bridge is completely gone. The piers apparently being in good condition. We would recommend new top on bridge also shortening by one span and fill in where shortened.

HYNES BRIDGE

Your committee visited the above bridge and found a bridge 46 feet in length.

The same not being a county bridge and your committee do not feel that they should recommend the assuming of the bridge, do not express any opinion as to what repairs should take place.

SNELGROVE BRIDGE

Your committee also visited Snelgrove bridge in Smith and do not consider this should be assumed by county it being some 60 feet long. We do not say as to what repairs should take place for the same reason as in the case of the Hynes bridge.

McCOLL'S BRIDGE, ANSTRUTHER

Your committee visited the above bridge and find that it is now 95 ft. long and in so far as bridge is concerned, rotten but the west abutment being natural rock and the centre pier sound, would only necessitate the building of one abutment.

We would recommend the assuming of this bridge by the county and have it rebuilt at a length of 75 feet using the west abutment and present centre pier.

A wooden structure from the fact that timber is plentiful in that municipality would be the most advisable structure.

LOOKIES' BRIDGE, MONAGHAN

We herewith express ourselves with regard to this bridge, for the same reasons as in the Hynes bridge, that we would not recommend the assumption by the county, the bridge being only thirty-five feet long in a comparatively quiet place in so far as much traffic is concerned.

HOPE'S BRIDGE

It was decided to rebuild Hope's bridge at a cost of $300 and Messrs Graham, Comstock, Moher and Fife were appointed a committee to look after it.

STEEL'S BRIDGE

Steele's bridge will be scraped and repainted, and Mr Comstock will also look after this.

ROBSON'S BRIDGE

Robson's bridge will be fixed up. It will be in charge of Messrs. Darling and Comstock.

McCOLL'S BRIDGE

McColl's bridge will be rebuilt, and made seventy-five feet long instead of ninety-five feet.

BYLAW READ

The council read a bylaw providing for issuing debentures for $4000 for the construction of Hope's bridge at a cost of $3000, Robson's bridge $400, and Anstruther bridge $600. The bylaw was given two readings and will be read a third time and passed at the June session. They are 4 1-2 per cent debentures.

AN INVITATION

An invitation was extended to the City Council to send a committee to Ottawa with the County at the expense of the city, to interview the government in connection with the new bridge in Harvey.

NEW WATERWORKS DAM AND ELECTRIC POWER FOR CITY

Two By-laws Will be Submitted, One for $120,000 for New Dam and One for $15,000 to Develop the Power—City Council Comes to a Decision.

The city council, in committee of the whole last night, decided to adopt the recommendation of the Power committee to have a bylaw submitted to the ratepayers to authorize the issuing of debentures for $120,000 for a new waterworks dam and pump house and a bylaw for $15,000 to provide sluice-ways on the dam, build a power house, and provide other necessities for developing power. The $15,000 will be provided by the city, as the city is to have a certain proportion of the power developed but the $120,000 is to be looked after by the Water Commission.

The matter caused a long discussion, Ald. Hicks raising the point that it would be time enough to submit the $15,000 bylaw at the municipal elections in January.

In view of the fact that the city wants to have power of its own to offer manufacturers as soon as possible and that the experts who had reported on the matter had stated that the power house could be built more cheaply when the dam was being constructed than later, the majority of those present were in favor of submitting the $15,000 bylaw at the same time as the one for the dam.

It was moved by Ald Morrow and seconded by Ald. Morgan that the recommendations of the Power committee be adopted.

This resolution was carried and the bylaws will accordingly be prepared at once and submitted to the ratepayers as soon as possible.

The experts who reported on the new dam estimate that a minimum of 1150 horse power will be developed. Of this the Water Commissioners will reserve 500 for their own use and the remainder will go to the city, provided they put in the sluiceways and other equipment and the power house. This it is estimated will cost $15,000. This sum does not include the machinery for the power house.

The purchase of the Auburn dam, the buying out of the Peterborough Light and Power Company and fifteen hundred horse power for manufacturers, were touched on in the discussion which lasted for almost an hour.

NINETEEN MILL RATE TOO LOW IS GENERAL OPINION

Of Aldermen as Expressed at Last Might's Meeting—Matter Will be Decided Next Monday Night—Breezy Discussion.

The City Council will strike the rate for 1909 at the meeting next Monday night. In all probability it will be twenty mills. The Finance Committee has recommended nineteen mills but the majority of the aldermen feel that this is too low and that there will be overdrafts in some of the departments if the rate is too low.

The matter caused a long discussion at the meeting of the Council last night. Ald. Hicks said the Finance Committee was paring too closely, and that there would be overdrafts at the end of the year if a nineteen mill rate was adopted. He would be in favor of placing the rate at 20 1-2 mills.

Mayor Rush said he favored a twenty mill rate. He pointed out that the Board of Works had spent more money than usual last year in order to provide employment for those who were out of work. It was better to give work than charity.

Ald. Duncan took offence at a statement of the Mayor which he thought reflected on the Board of Works of 1907, of which he was chairman. He contended that the Board of Works in 1907 had done just as satisfactory work in 1907 as that of 1908.

Mayor Rush said he had no intention of reflecting on Ald. Duncan, and the incident closed there.

Ald Morgan said it would be well to have a high rate and low assessment in order to get after those with fixed assessments.

Ald. Bradburn did not like the principle of giving a man a fixed assessment and then trying to "soak" him afterwards.

Ald Morrow said a mistake had been made in placing the rate at seventeen mills last year. That was too low.

Finally it was decided to leave the matter of striking the rate over until Monday night. This was done on motion of Ald. Duffus and Ald. McIntyre.

During the discussion Ald. Hicks charged the Board of Works of 1908 with spending more money than they should have.

PRINCESS CHRYSANTHEMUM GIVEN AT CONSERVATORY HALL BY 70 CHILDREN

Bright and clever in lines and lyrics and pleasing and tuneful in melody, "The Princess Chrysanthemum," King Proctor's picturesque Japanese operatta was given by 70 young Conservatory pupils at the Conservatory Music Hall last night. The story of the operatta is a very pretty and interesting one, and the solo and ensemble numbers were given in a captivating way by the soloists and the large and capable chorus. The principal roles were assumed in a highly satisfactory manner, and great praise is due those who sang in the choruses, the vocalism and drills showing ability and careful direction by Mr. Gliddon.

The audience was particularly appreciative of the little fairies who were most becomingly arrayed and who acted charmingly. An effective scene was in the second act when the sprites of the night appeared to much advantage in a cleverly executed drill. Miss Mabel McCaw, of the Conservatory staff, is responsible for the excellent training of the fairies and the sprites.

The scenic dressings of the stage were attractive and the costumes very handsome.

A great fete is being held in honor of the coming of age of the Emperor's daughter, Princess Chrysanthemum. She is loved by Prince So-tru and returns his affections; but he has a rival in the person of Prince So-sli, who seeks the aid of Saucer-Eyes the Wizard Cat, who carries off the Princess to the cave of Inky Night, leaving the Emperor and Prince So-tru distracted at her strange appearance.

Princess Chrysanthemum imprisoned in the Cave of Inky Night with the aid of a magic ring summons the Fairy Moonbeam who is about to help her when she drops the ring and cannot find it. Fairy Moonbeam disappears at the loss of the ring, and the unhappy Princess is left to bewail her fate. Prince So-tru manages to obtain entrance to the cave and finds the ring, which at once causes Fairy Moonbeam to return and aid him. At this moment the Emperor arrives with his attendants and takes Saucer-Eyes prisoner, bearing him in triumph to the palace.

Threatened with torture Saucer-Eyes confesses the complicity of Prince So-sli whom the Emperor orders to instant execution. This is, however frustrated by the appearance of Princess Chrysanthemum accompanied by Prince So-tru and Fairy Moonbeam with her band. The Emperor pardons Saucer-Eyes and So-sli at the Princess' request, and gives her hand in marriage to Prince So-tru, thus bringing everything to a happy conclusion.

The principal roles and those who filled them were:—

Prince So-Tru—Jas. Bogue.
Hop-Not—Jas. O'Brien.
Prince So-Sli—H. Wilmot.
Saucer-Eyes—R. Wilson.
Princess—Carrie White.
Emperor—M. Johnston.
Fair—Maud Titterson.

Mr. Johnston had very little rehearsing for the part of the Emperor, which was the heaviest one of the operatta. At the eleventh hour he was called upon to sing the role, the singer originally cast for the part having withdrawn. Under the circumstances he did exceptionally well.

The maidens in attendance on the Princess were; Misses Geraldine Rudkins, Phyllis Dawson, Helen Henry, Verna Devlin; the guards Grant Potter, Egbert Kelly; attendants on the Emperor, Bruce Marshall, Gordon Matthews.

One of the features of the evening was Miss Myrtle Kline's singing of the exquisite song gem "Somebody." The selection was received with great applause.

The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. L. Mendel, played most acceptably in the intervals between the acts.

CHARITY CONCERT

One Held at Ottawa Made Over $900 to Help Those Who are in Need

Every city has its poor. Peterborough is no exception and the support of those without means and out of work at the present time is no small problem

The city of Ottawa has the same problem on its hands and to raise funds for the needy a "Charity concert" was recently held at the Capital. One of the newspapers there inaugurated the scheme, the other two papers joined in and a committee of citizens was formed to carry the idea out. The Russell Theatre was secured for the night free of charge and the city's best talent contributed to the programme without charging one cent for their services. The newspapers advertised the concert extensively free of cost and the printed matter used in connection with the function was also donated.

The concert drew a full house and the receipts were over $900. As there were no expenses, the whole sum was turned over to the secretary of the Charity Board. It will be of great help in the work of aiding the poor.

CLASH EXPECTED IN THE BALKANS

Situation Again Assumes a Serious Aspect.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—The pessimism with regard to the Balkan crisis is steadily deepening in diplomatic circles, where it is believed that Austrian action against Servia may be expected within a fortnight, unless a solution to the present grave problem is soon arranged.

Foreign Office officials state that Russia is not disposed to consider an invasion of Servia alone as a casus belli, but there is fear that the Government's hand may be forced under such circumstances by popular feeling. The beginning of hostilities would throw thousands of Russian volunteers into the Servian ranks.

The Duma leaders, who visited the Foreign Office yesterday, expressed themselves as convinced that war is inevitable. Information received from Kiev yesterday indicates that no military measures have yet been undertaken on the southwestern frontier, but all applications of officers for leave of absence have been refused, and the Kiev department is ready for instant mobilization.

Britain Not Disturbed.

London, Feb. 25.—The British Government is not so apprehensive regarding the situation in the Balkans as are some of the other Governments of Europe, judging from the indications in despatches received here from various continental capitals.

The Foreign Office of course recognizes that an undue prolongation of the tension between Austria-Hungary and Servia is dangerous, but it is hopeful of an early relaxation in the situation.

So far as is known officially here Germany has not declined to participate in a joint action and negotiations still are going on with the view of a proffer of good offices.

SMOKING BY BOYS

It is said that there is a lot of smoking going on among boys under sixteen in Peterborough. This is contrary to the law.

The police are doing good work in keeping a close watch for young boys indulging in the weed but despite this small boys are often seen on the streets smoking cigarettes.

According to an Ottawa paper, a strong attempt is being made in that city to stamp out the use of tobacco by minors. The paper in question, discussing the matter says;

The suggestion has been made that in order to stop boys under sixteen years of age smoking cigars and cigarettes on the public streets contrary to law, it might be advisable to put two of the constables in plain clothes and have them pay special attention to the boys. The Journal has already pointed out the difficulty of constables confiscating cigars or tobacco, because the minute the lads catch sight of their uniform they hide their cigarettes. The chief intimated this morning that he did not care to discuss the question.

Magistrate O'Keefe today said the police commissioners would consider this question of juveniles smoking and breaking the law —probably at their next meeting when a letter from the Ottawa Children's Aid Society in reference to this subject will be before them.

He was asked what he thought of the "plain clothes" suggestion:

He replied that he considered it a good one. While he could not say what the board would or would not do, he thought it probable that a couple of constables would be put on this work specially.

NOTABLES IN RIOTING IN LONDON

Persons of High Social Position Participate in Suffragette Raids---Situation Embarrassing.

London, Feb. 25.—Every effort of the woman suffragettes to force the hand of the Government becomes more determined, and it is increasingly difficult to predict how their demands may be successfully parried.

The situation has taken on an embarrassing aspect for the Government, owing to the high social position of many among some 30 or more women arrested last evening, these including Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, and daughter of the former Viceroy of India; Miss Stratford Dugdale, daughter of Commander Dugdale, and cousin of Hon. William R. Peel, who was elected Tuesday in the bye-election as member of the House of Commons for Taunton; Miss Daisy Solomon, daughter of the ex-Premier of Cape Colony, and Mrs. Catherine Elizabeth Corbett, an aristocratic supporter of suffrage movement.

Both sides were well prepared for last night's attempt on the part of the suffragettes to force themselves on Premier Asquith, who on Tuesday declined by letter to receive the deputation. The women held "parliament" at Caxton Hall, and a number of them started on "danger duty" in a solid phalanx, led by Mrs. Lawrence.

The police, abandoning former tactics of barring the approaches to the House of Commons, adopted the new plan of breaking up the procession close to Caxton Hall. They permitted the suffragettes to proceed simply by couples, escorted by small parties of spectators. The women were thus not given much chance to create a disturbance, although they were allowed to come within close proximity of Parliament. The police, however, kept them continually on the move and none was allowed access to the building.

Miss Solomon, in returning from the first expedition, apologized to the meeting for her failure to get arrested. She said she had done her best, and would lead another attempt. All the expeditions were given musical honors when they set forth, the band playing the Marsaillaise.

TWO ESCAPE FROM PRISON

New Westminster Prison Again Loses Some Inmates---Getting Into the Habit There.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 25.—A daring and sensational escape was made from the penitentiary at New Westminster yesterday morning, the fugitives being a French-Canadian named Labourdette and a Britisher named Stanton, both serving terms for burglary.

The night guard made his usual round at 6 o'clock in the morning dropping the bars off the cells preparatory to letting the occupants out to work. Labourdette and Stanton had evidently tampered with the lock and when the guard's back was turned after the bar had been dropped all they had to do was to push the door open and sneak away.

Stanton had secured a pipe wrench, which he had used in effecting his getaway. Having left the cells, the pair climbed up the hot water pipes to a window and escaped.

This is the penitentiary from which Bill Miner and several others have gotten away. Within the past few months, too, three prisoners have committed suicide.

COULDN'T GET IN

The manager of the City Hotel, the leading hotel in Merrickville, refused to give accommodation to the colored troupe of singers, known as the Old Southland Sextette Company, which appeared here a few weeks ago, under the auspices of the Leaders' Corps of the Y.M.C.A. The Star Chronicle of Merrickville, in commenting on the action of the hotel manager, says; "That the action of the proprietor should be brought to the attention of the License Inspector and thoroughly investigated." "That action," the paper continues, "was not only a personal affront to the members of the company in question who afterards proved themselves to be ladies and gentlemen, but was a dirty slur upon the Library Board, the Secretary-Treasurer, of which guaranteed all the expenses of the company while they were to remain in town."

The Southland Sextette was brought to Merrickville by the Public Library Board. The colored singers had no difficulty in securing hotel accommodation in Peterborough.

Prof. J. Hume Cameron, of Toronto university will lecture at the Normal School tomorrow night on "Pre-Raphaelite Paintings." The public is invited.

LIVES ENDANGERED IN BAD FLOODS

At Port Hope, Belleville and Other Points---Loss at Port Hope Will Reach $25,000---Ice Blocks the Streets.

Port Hope, Feb. 25.—The usually picturesque little Ganeraska river, swollen by the recent rains, overflooded its banks yesterday afternoon and caused damage that will run up close to $25,000.

A slight rise toward noon gave little indication of a serious flood, but between 2 and 3 o'clock the river had changed to a torrent and had torn out the Canton bridge, to the north; Helms' dam, the electric light plant footbridge, the Barrett's Mill bridge and the G.T.R. foot bridge, besides ripping away the north side of the heavy cement ridge on Walton street, Port Hope's main thoroughfare.

The Ontario House was swamped, part of the barn torn away and several cutters lost; the Royal Hotel had its new balcony destroyed, and Walton, Queen, Mill, Cavan and John streets were flooded two feet deep.

Thousands of heavy blocks of ice swept down the streets and presented an awe-inspiring sight. In the south side of Walton street bridge the ice filled The Times' office, Tom Lee's laundry, Putnam's shoe store, Smith's barber shop, Wells' bakery, Shaw's store, Moore's restaurant and two empty stores. The laundry, shoe store, barber shop, bakery and the empty stores were almost wrecked, the windows breaking in.

The Toronto Bank and McLean's piano store were flooded, but not damaged. Hayden's foundry, Chalk's carriage works and G. N. Pattison's lumber yards were also sufferers, the latter losing $1,500 worth of timber.

The girls in the Ideal Clothing factory had to escape by ladders, and Ken Runnells, insurance agent, had a narrow escape from drowning, his rig and horse falling with the G.T.R. bridge.

It was said that a Cantan man lost his life, but a telephonic communication fails to confirm this.

J. G. Elliott, foreman of The Times, actually caught two fish in The Times office during the flood.

Lives Endangered.

St. Thomas, Ont., Feb. 25.—The worst flood in 35 years has been raging on the outskirts of St. Thomas all day, and one man almost lost his life.

Kettle Creek broke loose and flooded adjoining lands early yesterday morning, in many cases completely surrounding barns.

To his father's barn on the London and Port Stanley gravel road, Jimmy Alexander, machinist at the P. M. shops here, waded yesterday, but before he was ready to return the water was so deep he had to swim. He had to be rescued by his brothers, and when taken from the water was unconscious. Two doctors soon succeeded in reviving him.

The water was so high around the waterworks it broke over the high wall into the reservoir.

The family of Charles Murphy, south of the city, were rescued in the nick of time yesterday morning, being warned by neighbors.

Turville's dam, a few miles down the creek, broke, and farmers residing near there had great difficulty in rescuing Mrs. Hampton. Her position was a perilous one and she couldn't be reached without crossing the flood. A horse was brought to her assistance, thinking that she might be taken out on the animal's back, but the poor brute was swept down the stream and it was with difficulty that the owner saved it. Finally the men obtained ropes and going to the house carried her out on their backs, although they were in water above their waists,

Rain at Belleville.

The rolling mills plant had to close down owing to the premises being flooded,—while many furnaces were put out of business by the high water. Hundreds of cellars were flooded, involving much loss.

Several streets are impassable, and in very many cases householders have had to be assisted from their homes.

Yesterday afternoon water was running a foot deep over Coleman street, and employes in the factories have to be driven to and from work.

Upset by Flood.

Hagersville, Feb. 25.—A fatality occurred yesterday about two miles from Hagersville, as a result of the heavy rains.

William Boyle and his son were returning home from Hagersville about noon. They had to pass over the Spring Creek on the reserve, where they found the road for nearly a quarter of a mile under water. They attempted to cross, but missed the bridge, went over the embankment into deep water and sank.

The team was drowned and Boyle is supposed to have been seized with cramps. He was unable to get out of the water. His son reached land and called for help and two men succeeded in getting Boyle out, but he died almost immediately.

TO INCREASE THE PAY OF SHERIFFS IN THE PROVINCE

Mr. Foy Proposes Increase to About $1,200 a Yeaa—Mr. Downey's Tuberculosis Notification Bill Does Not Call for Placarding of Any Sort.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Yesterday was another busy day in the Legislature, which sat assiduously all afternoon, passing fourteen bills through committee. These were some of the revised statutes already reported.

One of the bills passing committee, and which may be given a third reading to-morrow, Premier Whitney explained, would enable Hamilton to refer the power bylaw to the vote of the people at any time instead of waiting till next January. The mayor and council had asked the Government to aid them in the matter, and he had felt it his duty to do so.

Hon. J. J. Foy has prepared a resolution which will commit the Government to an increase of the salaries of sheriffs, who now depend on fees to a minimum unstated, but probably of $1,200, to be made up by the Government where the fees do not reach that sum.

Bills were introduced respecting the publication of official notices, by Hon. W. J. Hanna, and to amend the Assessment Act, by A. E. Fripp.

Joseph Downey's bill, respecting the notification of tuberculosis, will not involve any public placarding. The notification will be confidential, a fine being imposed for unauthorized disclosures. The intention is simply to enable the authorities to take steps to educate people as to the proper treatment of patients.

W. K. McNaught will move - lution next week, having in view the appointment of a provincial commission to deal with the supply of pure milk.

The following sixty members were placed upon the private bills committee: Sir James Whitney, Messrs. Beck, Bowman, Bradburn, Brewster, Brower, Calder, Carrick, Carscallen, Clark (Bruce), Clarke (Northumberland), Craig, Downey, Duff, Elliott, Ferguson (Grenville), Fisher, Fox, Foy, Fraser, Fripp, Gallagher, Gamey, Godfrey, Gooderham, Hanna, Hearst, Hendrie, Hoyle, Innes, Jamieson, Jessop, Konler, Lennox, Lucas, MacKay (Grey), Mahaffy, Matheson, McCowan, McCart, McDougall, McGarry, McKeown, McNaught, McPherson, Nickle, Preston (Durham), Preston (Lanark), Pratt, Proudfoot, Racine, Reed (Wentworth), Ross (Middlesex), Shaw, Smellie, Sulman, Thompson (Simcoe), Torrance, Tudhope and Whiteside—60.

W. H. Hoyle has been chosen chairman of the standing orders committee. I. B. Lucas will again be chairman of the private bills committee.

Bills will be introduced by Mr. Brewster, to amend the insurance law; Mr. Torrance, to amend the Assessment act; Mr. Downey, to prevent the spread of pulmonary and other forms of tuberculosis; Mr. Craig, to amend the Municipal Act; Mr. Racine, to amend the Separate Schools Act; Mr. Macdiarmid, to amend the Municipal Act.

SUFFRAGETTES OF HIGH RANK SENT TO GAOL IN ENGLAND

Special to the Review.

London, Feb 25— Suffragettes of title and the highest social position were sentenced from one to two months in gaol for the demonstration last night when an army of suffragettes tried to force an interview with Premier Asquith. Among those sentenced were Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton and daughter of the former Viceroy of India. Mrs Pethick Lawrence, Daisy Solomon, daughter of the Ex-premier of South Africa and others of equal rank Thirty suffragettes were arraigned in court as a result of last night's arrests. They refused to give bonds for their good behaviour in the future and instead demanded the prison sentences.

Anchor Ice

Anchor ice caused trouble at the Nassau power station and as a result the machine hands of the Canadian General are having a holiday. Work will likely be resumed in the morning.

MALONE IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Simcoe, Feb. 25.—Imprisonment for life in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence imposed last night by Chief Justice Mulock on Archibald W. Malone, found guilty by a Norfolk County jury of attempting to murder his fellow constable, William Wilkins, on the morning of Dec. 1 last.

The jury were out two hours and ten minutes, and returned to the court-room about 7.35.

"Have you agreed upon a verdict?" asked the clerk.

"We have," said the foreman. "Guilty."

W. E. Kelly, K.C., counsel for defendant, asked that the jury be polled. Every man of the twelve said "Guilty" in a clear voice.

"What have you to say, Malone, why the sentence of this court should not be passed on you?" said his lordship.

"My counsel will speak for me, my lord," said the prisoner.

Mr. Kelly merely pointed out that his client had four children, that his record had previously been good, that he had served in South Africa, and had soldiered for Britain eight years in all.

His lordship said he did not wish to add to the burden being borne by the prisoner, but he felt it necessary to make a few remarks.

"It gives me very great pain," said the chief justice, "to be obliged to perform my duty at this stage of this regrettable affair. But others in the earlier stages have done their duty, and I must do mine now.

"You have had very able counsel, and your case has been presented with remarkable ability. I myself have offered you such protection as I could. The evidence was conclusive, and I must say that I came to the same conclusion myself on the testimony put forward.

"You have been found guilty, and the question now is what punishment will fit the crime. It is not my wish to add to your burden, that is great enough already. I think it advisable for the information of the public to

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Hugh F. Rowe, aged 30, a car checker at Port Arthur, was found dead in his bachelor home from alcoholic poisoning.

Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, wife of Gen. Booth of the Volunteers of America, underwent a successful surgical operation at New York yesterday for appendicitis.

The police at Sarnia believe that John Houck may have been murdered. He left Oil Springs on Feb. 1, to visit his parents in Berlin, and hasn't been heard of since. He had $67.

Mahlon K. Cowan, K.C., chief solicitor of the G.T.R., who has been quite seriously ill at his home in Montreal, is very much better and will probably be at his office in a few weeks.

The House of Representatives at Washington yesterday rejected the Senate provision increasing the salary of the President to $100,000, and by a vote of 163 to 149, fixed the salary at $75,000.

The Anglican Synod of British Columbia has requested the Attorney-General of British Columbia to investigate the "confession" of the perpetrator of the Borden forged telegram, as made to Bishop Perrin.

MACHINE 'PHONES

Have Been Installed in Lyon, France---Mr. Lorimer Home.

The following is from the Brantford Courier:

Mr. E. S. Lorimer, of the Canadian Machine Telephone Company, arrived in the city yesterday after a six months' visit to Lyons, France, where he was installing one of the automatic 'phone exchanges.

It has been installed in conjunction with the local exchange, which, like all exchanges in France, is owned and operated by the Government. There are 400 subscribers. The government inspection was thorough, and a most favorable report was made.

Mr. Lorimer was also in Rome, Italy, where another exchange has been established for the government and the government inspector also expressed great delight with that.

While here Mr. Lorimer looked over the Brantford exchange building the equipment for which has all arrived. He will immediately commence the work of installation in Brantford.

The cable which will complete outside construction will be here within the next ten days and the system will be in full operation by the first of May.

STREET LIGHTS

Kingston Paper Contains Comparison of Rates in Several Cities

The Kingston Whig says;

The places are classified as having municipal plants and receiving their light from private companies respectively, the cost mentioned being per light per year.

MUNICIPAL.
Ottawa	$45.00
Fort William	45.00
Port Arthur	48.00
Brockville	62.50
Guelph	60.00
Kingston	60.00
Owen Sound	51.00
Niagara Falls	85.00
St. Thomas	91.25
Calgary	156.00
PRIVATE COMPANIES.
Stratford	75.00
Galt	75.00
St. John's	75.00
Cornwall	82.12
London	83.95
Sherbrooke	60.00
Quebec	62.10
Brantford	55.00
Montreal	60.00
Hamilton	47.50
Halifax	65.00
Toronto	69.35
St. Catharines	50.00
Peterborough	50.00
Pembroke	50.00

Ald. R. H. Toye says the figures do not fairly represent the real facts. Most of the municipal plants are run by steam; most of the private plants are run by water power. If the comparison was between steam or water plants alone, a fairer view of the matter could be obtained.

THE TARIFF OF THE COLONIES

Secretary Hewins Says Parts of Empire Must Suit Own Needs

London, Feb. 25.—In view of Balfour's evident adhesion to principles of tariff reform policy as enunciated by the tariff commission and his possible return to power at an early date, importance is attached to a statement a Hawick by Hewins, secretary of the tariff commission. He was asked how far the Ministry had justified the faith expressed by Laurier in the Canadian Commons Feb. 18, that in Government contracts the British Government would, whenever possible, favor British in preference to foreign countries.

Hewins added that tariff reform had two great principles in view, first to safeguard the self-governing powers of the different states of the British flag; the other was that all the states of the Empire should minister to each other's development by closer reciprocal connections. One great advantage of the proposed system of imperial preference would be that it secured both these ends. Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa had shown the way in regard to the general principles which should actuate the United Kingdom in adopting the preferential scheme. The idea at the bottom of it was not haggling about details, certainly not fiscal subordination in any sense term, but that in the spirit of Imperial good-fellowship, to adopt Balfour's phrase, all states of Empire should, after arranging their own tariffs to suit their needs as individual states, each do the best they could to increase trade between these states and build up the Empire in which we had a common interest.

LOSS AT COBOURG

Ten Thousand Dollars Damage Done by the Flood —Creek Became Blocked.

Special to the Review.

Cobourg, Feb. 25.—For the first time in twenty years the creek which runs through the town and under King street over flowed yesterday causing a great amount of damage by flooding the cellars of nearly every business place on the street. The heavy rains and the giving away of a dam north of the town was the cause of the flood. On Covet street some families had to take shelter in the second story of their homes, the lower flats being entirely under water. The financial loss will amount to fully ten thousand dollars.

THEY WAITED ON MINISTER

Deputation From Peterboro' County See Hon. George P. Graham

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—A deputation of about 40 residents of Peterborough County, headed by Warden Scott and including several Indians today called on Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals and Mr. Frank Pedley, superintendent of Indian affairs, to urge some bridge improvements in that district.

The Indians, who are from the Chemong reserve, want the construction of a brideg which will give them a short cut to Peterborough.

THE GLOBE AND MR. BORDEN

The Globe is unjust and uncandid in its attack on Mr. Borden in the matter of the forged telegram. Mr. Borden had no right to publish Bishop Perrin's communication respecting the forger in any other way than that employed by him. The leader of a party cannot depose and dismiss members at will. Much of the Globe's rant about the probabilities of what would have happened if the telegram had not been altered is mere rant and nothing more. How could it have deprived a leader of support when the leader of the opposing side, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, was the father of the whole immigration iniquity which the telegram was supposed to condemn. Mr. Borden fought too long against Oriental immigration to be misunderstood. The Globe is trying to draw a herring across the scent.

A LOCAL PANIC

It is not too much to say that there is a panic amongst school children and their parents over the scarlet fever situation. SINCE THERE IS NO ISOLATION HOSPITAL the problem of isolation is a difficult one. Cases are known in the city where the brothers and sisters of scarlet fever patients residing in the same house and nominally isolated there, have been allowed to go to school and otherwise mingle with other children. Now either isolation is an important measure or it is not. If not then let us cease to oppress the poor while we wink at the doings of the rich and let us acknowledge the measure a farce and have done with it. If on the other hand it is as doctors allege and as most others believe and have always believed a good measure why is it not enforced? Manifestly because there is no isolation hospital and it is considered undesirable to isolate or quarantine a whole family. However, on behalf of the children menaced and of their parents who are complaining bitterly we demand an enforcement of the law and that enforcement should begin with the erection of an Isolation Hospital.

THE NEW DAM

The question is being generally asked how it comes that the waterworks dam aged 15 years, has become a wreck at so early an age. It is possible that this dam cannot be repaired for a few thousand dollars. Timber-dams are general along the river and have lasted with repairs for 3 score years and more and yet here we are with a dam that appears to have been a failure from the beginning, and the builder of it advising on a new one. That the plan now before the people will be voted down is a very general opinion. Without derogating from the excellent work done by the Water Commissioners in the least, we may be allowed to complain of the history of the dam in the past and the $120 000.00 prospect for the future.

A CRUEL WASTE

The Toronto Star (Liberal) says that our laws against combines are a mockery because they are not enforced. It is like everything else under the control of the Laurier Government. This is the money-man's Government. All that is necessary is to be connected with Capital in some way, and

"It don't matter what you do
If your heart be true."

to that material ideal Laurier is satisfied. As a consequence everything else is sacrificed to that god, even conscience (see Cassel report) and to the owner of that god. What does it matter that there are unemployed? Let the market be full to overflowing is the motto of such a Government. Bring in more. People must suffer, and let them suffer. Even the babe at the breast may starve for want of nourishment, but that is due to the fact that "Cox can't wait"! It is an "economic law." The Japanese must come in. Why? To help labour to a full and just reward for its toil? By no means. Because money must have all the privileges including that priceless one of cheap labour. So the world's workers are invited in coaxed in and lied in. No government builded upon such a heartless and headless policy can last long. Its rich allies may help it out for a time, but even the combinesters, whom the Star complains of, can't long ward off the vengeance of the People. Everywhere capital, especially in the form of money is making money. The banks multiply daily and even in the hardest times reap a reward for their shareholders of a gross profit of from 18 to 20 per cent. And yet a vast number of workers look in vain for work! "What matters it if the People faint and fail so long as Money gets a satisfactory meal?" This waste of a humanity that ought to be dear to the patriot and the statesman alike goes on apace. It is a cruel waste and it forebodes disaster. Churches throb with an impulse to provide a remedy. They do not lack the heart but it would seem as if they were sadly wanting in head. There has been no failure on the part of the churches to "teach" religion and "make known" the "glad tidings of great joy," but what do their efforts avail when, as the Star says, the laws against combines are not enforced? Think what that means. It means the wholesale persistent robbery of the people, and by whom? BY THOSE WHO FAIL TO ENFORCE THE LAWS. We manage our business badly.

ONCE MORE THE PROOF IS GIVEN

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Will Cure the Deadly Bright's Disease

Emmett, Renfrew Co. Ont, Feb 24—Special—That the one sure cure for Bright's Disease, the most deadly of all kidney diseases is Dodd's Kidney Pills is again proved in the case of Martin O'Grady of this place. And for the benefit of other sufferers Mr O'Grady has given the following statement for publication:

"For over a year I suffered from Bright's disease. I was attended by a doctor, but he did me no good. My appetite was fitful, my sleep broken and unrefreshing. My memory failed men and I was always tired and nervous. I had sharp pain and pressure at the top of my head.

"Being advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, I bought a couple of boxes and found relief soon after I started taking them."

This is only one of hundreds of cases in which Dodd's Kidney Pills have conquered the worst form of kidney disease. They never fail to cure Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Lumbago or Sciatica.

The barns and stables of Frank Howard near Wicklow, Ont., were burned with eight head of cattle.

show that the crime justifies the sentence that I am about to impose.

"I entertain no doubt of the correctness of Constable Wilkins' evidence. You were employed and trusted as a police officer, sworn to protect the people of this town, their property and their lives. Shortly after your appointment to the force you proceeded to your career of crime. You engaged Wilkins as your assistant. He says your first crime was the entrance to Madden's shop. That evidence is not contradicted. Wilkins had no idea then what you were about to do.

"Through some way you obtained a mastery over him. Your mind was apparently the stronger; it was not unnatural that he should feel to some extent compromised by what he had done. His duty was to report to the authorities; he did not do so. From that moment he seemed to become clay in your hands.

"Nothing but a kind Providence prevented his death and saved you from appearing before the bar of justice as a murderer to-night. You sought to take the life of the man you had made a criminal, and sought to send him to eternity without a word of warning.

"You are the last man in the world who should have made such an attack. I much regret to say that of all these facts there seems to be no extenuating circumstances."

His lordship then passed sentence of life imprisonment.

Malone didn't turn a hair while sentence was being passed. His lordship had kindly asked Mrs. Malone if she would care to retire while sentence was being pronounced. She said "No," she would stay. She knew he was not guilty, she said. She broke into tears when the sentence was pronounced.

Mr. Kelly asked about the plea for a reserved case.

"I have carefully looked into all the arguments and find I cannot entertain the proposition," said the chief justice.

The prisoner pulled his lawyer's coat and whispered something.

"I want to ask a favor of your lordship," said Mr. Kelly. "The prisoner would like to stay here for a few days to arrange his family affairs." Then Malone spoke up himself.

"I would like a week at least, my lord," said he. "I want to arrange for the care of my wife and children. It wasn't my wife's fault, my lord."

"I'm sure it wasn't," said his lordship. Even the chief justice had a tremor in his voice by this time, and there was scarcely a dry eye in the court-room.

The prisoner manifested considerable bitterness when the court had been adjourned.

"Why didn't he tell them to hang me?" he said to his wife and curious ones who crowded around the dock.

"Don't say that," said the unfortunate wife.

"I'll be in the insane asylum in a few weeks," said Malone, but when he was led out to his cell he spruced up and said good-bye to his acquaintances.

The entire last day of the proceedings was taken up with addresses of the lawyers and the judge, the defence offering no evidence. Mr. Kelly made an impassioned plea for the prisoner, but he was in a losing cause.

Anglican College for B. C.

London, Feb. 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A big Mansion House meeting was held yesterday to commemorate the jubilee of church work in British Columbia, and a further appeal was made to establish St. Mark's College for the purpose of training the clergy to be attached to the provincial university and to be under the control of representatives of each diocese in British Columbia. The cost would likely be $150,000.

Brakemen Are Let Go.

Guelph, Feb. 25.—The three other Grand Trunk trainmen against whom a true bill for criminal negligence in connection with the Harriston wreck was returned by the grand jury at the Assizes here, were tried yesterday. Burgman and Alexander pleaded guilty, and were released on suspended sentence. Jackson pleaded not guilty, and his case was laid over for the next Assizes.

Train Topples Over Cliff.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Feb. 25.—A passenger train on the main line bound north was yesterday thrown over a cliff 100 feet high, at a point near Rio Bamba, and crashed to the bottom of the ravine. All the cars were practically demolished. Twenty-five persons were killed and 40 were wounded.

COMPLETELY RUN DOWN
Lost Appetite Restored by Psychine.

Mr. Geo. Pratt, of Clarkson, Ont., says: "Four years ago my son Wilbert was so run down, thin and emaciated, that we thought he was going into a decline and feared he would never pull through the severe cold of the winter months. The boy had no appetite and seemed to have lost all energy and interest in life. He was altogether in terribly bad shape. His condition caused us the gravest anxiety."

"Fortunately I procured PSYCHINE for him and this soon gave him a new lease of life. It is really remarkable how rapidly this splendid medicine brought about a change. After taking one or two bottles he was hardly recognizable as the same youth. PSYCHINE effected a speedy cure and he was soon able to work about on the farm again. To-day he is a robust young fellow, and if anything stronger than his brothers. Nothing in the way of hard work seems to affect him. I cannot speak too highly of PSYCHINE. It certainly saved our boy and made a man of him."

NO HOME SHOULD BE WITHOUT PSYCHINE. As a builder-up of the system it is unequalled. It prevents the children taking cold, wards off that terrible malady La Grippe and completely fortifies them against disease. It should always be used for colds, la grippe, weariness, loss of appetite, etc. The proprietors offer you a TRIAL FREE. Send coupon to DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Limited, Spadina Ave., Toronto.

Psychine the greatest of tonics always removes that run down feeling. Sold by all druggists and dealers, in bottles, 50c and $1.00.

FREE! On receipt of this coupon and your name and address Dr T. A. Slocum, Limited, will send you a FREE TRIAL of Psychine.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

Like a flash his manner changed. He had her in his power, and it was not in his nature to permit his subjects to dictate to him. Craft and coercion always had been his ally. Craft could not win a woman's heart, but coercion might crush it into submission. It was not like James Bansemer to play a waiting game after it had been fairly started.

"Now listen to me," he said distinctly. "You cannot afford to talk like that. You cannot afford to make an enemy of me. I mean what I"—

"What would you do?" she cried. "You have promised that nothing shall happen to mar the lives of our children. You have given me your pledge. Is it worthless? Is it"—

"I wouldn't speak so loud if I were you," said he slowly. "The walls have ears. You have much to lose if ears other than those in the wall should hear what could be said. It would mean disaster. I know at least that you do not love David Cable"—

"What! I—I worship my husband!" she cried, her eyes flashing, her bosom heaving. "I love him better than anything else in all the world. How dare you say that to me!"

"Control yourself," he cautioned calmly. "Permit me to say you love the position he has given you. You love the pedestal on which you stand so insecurely. You would rather hear his curse than to see the hand of social ostracism raised against you. Wait! A word from me and not only David Cable, but the whole world would turn against you."

"I have committed no crime," she flared back at him. "I have deceived my husband, but I have not dishonored him. Tell the world everything, if you will."

"It would be a luscious tale," he said, with an evil laugh. "The world, which is wicked, might forget the fact that Jane is not David's daughter, but David would not forget that she is yours."

"What do you mean?" starting from her chair. "She is not my child. You know she isn't. You know the entire story. You"—

"I only know that you brought her to me and that I did you a service. Don't ask me to be brutal and say more." She sank back and glared at him like a helpless, wounded thing, the full force of his threat rushing in upon her.

"You—you couldn't do that," she whispered tremulously.

"I could, but I don't see why I should," he said, leaning closer to her shrinking figure.

"You know it isn't true," faintly.

"I only know that I am trying to save you from calamity."

"Oh, what a beast you are!" she cried, springing to her feet. "Go! I defy you! Do and say what you will! Only go!"

"I shall of course first of all forbid my son to marry the young woman. It will be necessary for me to explain the reason to Mr. Cable. I am sorry to have distressed you. Really I had expected quite a different evening after your invitation. You can't blame me for misunderstanding your motive in asking me to come here when you expected to be utterly alone." His laugh was a sneer.

"Poor—poor little Jane!" murmured the harassed woman, clasping her hands over her eyes. Then suddenly she cried out, "What a devil you are to barter with your son's happiness!"

"I'll not mince matters," he said harshly. "You and I must understand each other. To be perfectly frank, everything rests with you. Call me a beast if you like. As a beast I can destroy you, and I will."

"You forget that I can go to my husband and tell him everything. He will hate me, but he will believe me," she said, facing him once more.

"The world will believe me," he scoffed.

"Not after I tell the world that you tried to blackmail me; that you have demanded $50,000."

"But I haven't made such a demand."

"I can swear that you have," she cried triumphantly. He glared at her for a moment, his past coming up from behind with a rush that left him nothing to stand on.

"I am willing to run the risk of scandal if you are, my dear," he said after a moment, his hands clinched behind him. "It will be very costly. You have much to lose."

"I think," she said shrewdly, guessing his weakness even as he saw it, "that we can talk sensibly of the situation from now on. I am not afraid of you."

He looked at her steadily for a moment, reading her thoughts, seeing her trembling heart. Then he said dryly:

The door in the vestibule opened suddenly and some one—aye, more than one—came in from the outside. Mrs. Cable started to her feet and turned toward the library door. Bansemer was standing close by her side. He turned to move away as David Cable stepped to the door to look in. Cable's coat collar was about his ears, and he was removing his gloves. For a moment he stood motionless, gazing upon the occupants of the room.

Then for the first time there flashed before [illegible] point of [illegible] which was to pierce his brain later on with deadly suspicion and doubt. There was no mistaking the confusion of Mrs. Cable and her visitor. It was manifest that they had not expected him to appear so unexpectedly. He remembered now that on two other occasions he had found Bansemer at his house and alone with Mrs. Cable, but he had not regarded it as extraordinary. But there was a startled look in her eyes tonight, an indecision in her greeting that caused him to knit his brows and lift his hand unconsciously to his temple before speaking. He heard Bansemer say that he was just going, but that he would stay for a short chat about the banquet. Mrs. Cable turned to stir the fire with the poker, an unusual act on her part he was not slow to observe. The seed was sown.

"I brought Bobby over from the club with me—and a friend, Frances," he said, after asking Bansemer to sit down for awhile. His keen eyes noted that her hand shook as she put the poker back into its place. As he walked into the hall to throw aside his coat Frances Cable turned to Bansemer with a significant look, shaking her head in mute appeal for silence.

Bobby Rigby came into the room, followed by a tall stranger, whom he presented to Mrs. Cable. Bansemer, standing near the library table, caught a glimpse of the stranger's face as he took Mrs. Cable's hand. He started violently, unable at first to believe his eyes. A chill ran through his frame, and his expression changed from wonder to consternation.

"Mr. Bansemer, my friend, Mr. Harbert."

"I have met Mr. Bansemer," said Harbert, with a cold stare straight into the other's eyes. They were on opposite sides of the table.

He stood motionless, gazing upon the occupants of the room.

He noticed that Harbert's look was uncompromisingly antagonistic, but that was to be expected. It troubled him, however, to see something like unfriendliness in Rigby's greeting.

Harbert was the man who had fought him to rout in New York. This keen, aggressive young barrister had driven him into a corner from which he escaped only by merest chance. He knew James Bansemer for what he was. It had not been his fault that the man crawled through a small avenue of technicalities and avoided the punishment that had seemed so certain. He had waged war bitterly against the blackmailer, and he missed complete victory by a hair's breadth.

Feeling the strain of the situation Rigby talked with earnest volubility. He led the conversation into many lines—the war in the Philippines, the banquet, the play which Jane and Graydon were seeing. The thought of the play brought a shade of despair to his brow—pretty Miss Clegg was in the party with that "mucker," Medford.

LENTEN SERVICE HELD

Ash Wednesday was commemorated in St. John's church last evening by a short service including the Commination service. The sermon was preached by Rev. H. R. Trumpour, Rector of All Saints'. He took for his text the words, "Then when Jesus returned from the Jordan He was led of the Spirit into the wilderness." (St. Luke 4.1.). The lines of thought were suggested by Christ's call into the wilderness. First, if Christ in order to live the perfect life found it necessary to retire from the world; how can the Christian find it possible to do so, living as he does, every day at the same place, and in the midst of so many and great temptations. Christ's example is binding on us all. According to the Church of England standards we must, during Lent, follow Him in the abandonment of worldly luxuries and pleasures. There must be no half measures. As an aid to the development of our will power and to the purification of our appetites temporary retirement from the world is absolutely essential. Second, the influence which led Jesus was the Holy Spirit. It was stronger than the world's call, and as we find in Christ's case that it could overcome the blandishments of friends and the allurement of worldly pleasures, so can we also find it if we listen to it in earnestness and sincerity.

Third, what is the use of Lenten denial? It enables us to get away from the world in order to commune with God, to develop our Scripture reading, and indulge in prayer and meditation.

Lack of thinking was the cause of our quickly changing tastes and of our constant demand for amusements of all sorts.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

Ash Wednesday was duly observed at St. Luke's by morning prayer and Commination service at 10.30 a.m., and evensong at 8 p.m. The Rector, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt officiated at all services and preached also at evensong. His text was I. Samuel XIV; 6 and 7. The theme of the sermon was loyalty to the leader. Jonathan was loyally supported by his faithful armour-bearer in the battle against the Philistines, and his loyal support helped him to be victorious. In a special effort for the revival of the spiritual life such as the Lenten season offered, every power of evil will be arrayed against it. At such a time the clergyman expects loyal support from consecrated Christians by prayer and co-operation. Dr. Langfeldt urged upon the congregation the necessity of rallying around him and helping him in the Lenten season to make the special services a spiritual success. No leader could be successful if he had not assistance from his own flock. Unfair criticism and slander had broken the heart of many a man who went into the battle with great enthusiasm. The earnest support of the people was necessary to make a leader victorious.

The regular Lenten services at St. Luke's will be held every Wednesday and Friday. Rev. Mr. Reid will preach to-morrow evening.

Helping Those Who are Poor

There are many people in the city who are willing to help charitable work when a personal request is made. It is not always possible to do this and the different charitable societies find that when an appeal is made for special cases the response is always satisfactory.

In the case of the appeal for the "Twins" the result was as follows:

FRUIT JUICES CLEAR THE SKIN

The skin mirrors faithfully the state of the blood, and the blood shows how well—or how badly—the liver, bowels, kidneys and the millions of tiny glands in the skin are doing their work. If these organs are not properly clearing out the waste matter, the blood will be poisoned and the skin sallow, "muddy" and sprinkled with pimples.

Plenty of ripe fruit helps more than any other food to cure this condition, but even more effective, as well as less expensive, are "Fruit-a-tives." These are little tablets of concentrated fruit juices, combined in such a way as to many times increase their action on those organs that eliminate impurities. One or two "Fruit-a-tives" a day will keep the blood pure and give the skin the clear glow of health. 25c for trial size box—50c for regular size—6 for $2.50. Dealers everywhere should have both sizes. If you are unable to obtain "Fruit-a-tives" in your neighborhood, they will be sent on receipt of price. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

PROMOTERS HAVE A LIVELY ROW

For a short time on Monday, says the Cobourg Sentinel-Star, a little tempest that has been brewing for some time burst out in full fury at one of our hotels. The promoters of the rival electric lines have been looking for blood, and although no blood flowed, plenty of language—some of it not the best—flowed forth, and pet words were thrown back and forth. As a result a police court case is to be heard and perhaps two cases may result from the episode. We think both parties foolish as it is not going to better the prospects of either road. What the people want is a line to Havelock first, and then branch lines after that.

These promoters may use all the bad language that they can conjure up, but what will please and convince the people is that the road getting the charter go to work and build it without delay. No more tempests in the tea pot.

The United States ranks third in tea consumption but leads the world in drinking tea and cocoa.

Port Hope Objects to Despatches About Smallpox Epidemic

Port Hope Guide:—The Board of Trade but voices the sentiments of the people of Port Hope in deploring the uncharitable notoriety recently given to Port Hope and Cobourg in despatches to the Toronto press in connection with an epidemic prevailing throughout the province. The publicity thus given to this matter is injurious alike to both towns. Unfortunately the onus of responsibility for this friction appears to rest primarily with Port Hope all through an associated despatch concerning Cobourg, which was sent from Port Hope by some thoughtless correspondent. But the sending of that despatch in no wise reflected public motive or opinion here and it is regretted by the people of Port Hope at large. Let Port Hope and Cobourg be friendly commercial rivals, but in misfortune—never.

THE EXAMINER

When the C.G.E. was tendering for the Ontario Government electrical contract in October last, Messrs Bradburn, MPP, Jas Kendrey and J H. Burnham, interviewed the prime minister, urging him to give the contract to Canadian manufacturers and to disregard the Laurier tariff which would let loose upon Canadian tenderers, foreigners from every manufacturing country under the sun. The deputation had a long interview with Mr. Whitney at the end of which Mr. Whitney expressed his entire sympathy with the arguments put forward. He adopted the policy. The C.G.E. got the contract as the telegram received here direct, set out. The substance of it was published. The C.G.E. thanked the deputation. Straightway the Examiner started in to call the deputation above-named every vile name in its extensive vocabulary. "There was no contract. It was all a lie.". At recurring intervals it smelled out all sorts of "rats" and returned gladly to the false charge again and again. It was challenged to make good its charges, boldly, candidly and openly, by the deputation which never varied in its statements from the first but it could not. A few months' delay gave a rosy color to the Examiner's hopes but it served only to betray it further. Now the contract, much more extensive than at first supposed, has been fully defined, apportioned and placed at the disposal of the C.G.E. Instead of apologizing for its childish frenzy, and for its own impudent endorsation of a destroying tariff, the Examiner hails the day of receiving the recent news of the final apportionment to each Canadian tenderer, in the following fashion which every patriotic citizen will condemn. Had the Examiner and Mr. Stratton, supporters of the Laurier tariff, had their way, not one dollar's worth of that contract would have come to Peterborough or to Canada. Germany would have had the contract and our good Canadian money in payment of it, while the Examiner was doubtless opening a soup-kitchen or arranging a bureau in its back shop for the great number of the unemployed or per chance opening its columns free in a "charitable" endeavor to find work for its dupes at no price since it is unable to find it otherwise.

"A rumor is current to the effect that the works of the Canadian General Electric Company will have to be enlarged. What gives weight to such a rumor is the fact that if the large contracts awarded to the company are filled with the proper degree of promptitude, the present manufacturing capacity of the works will have to be substantially increased. The contract for Niagara Falls power transmission as announced exclusively in Tuesday's issue of the Examiner is a big thing in itself. But when we come to add the big contract for the same work awarded to the Canadian General Electric Company a day or two before the general elections last October, solely through the direct influence of Mr J. H. Burnham, the Conservative candidate and his powerful party allies, Messrs T. E. Bradburn, MPP, and Mr. Jas. Kendry, the rumor of enlargement of the works is to be accounted as reliable as the statement of the award, and the means of the award, of last October."—The Examiner, Feb 24, 1909.

REGISTER!

The Daily Review will place in its columns daily a register in which any unemployed may if they wish place their names and qualifications together with address. The register will be published each day. No charge for the insertion. By this means the Review hopes to place those without employment in communication with those requiring help.

Register will appear in both daily and weekly editions.

"INDIAN LIST" MAN WAS FINED

One of our citizens who is on the "Indian List" came before Magistrate Joyce on Monday on a charge of being intoxicated. He would not admit the charge but was fined ten dollars and costs, over fifteen dollars in all. A summons was issued for a resident of Belmont on the same charge, but he did not appear, and a bench warrant will probably be issued for his arrest.—Havelock Standard.

RADIAL RAILWAYS FROM THE SOUTH

The Cobourg, Port Hope and Havelock Railway Company is applying for a charter for an electric road to the north. The Cobourg, Peterborough Kawartha Lakes Co. is applying for a similar charter. The main line is to be from Cobourg to Peterborough. Both companies are asking for privileges to run branch lines here, there and everywhere. Cobourg and Port Hope are both taking notice. The Peterborough City Council and the Board of Trade should do likewise.

BAD NIGHT FOR A FIRE

Chimney Blaze in Last Nights High Wind--No Damage Resulted

In last night's high wind it was bad for a chimney fire and the one that occurred at the residence of Mr. McCarthy, 39 Jackson avenue, might have resulted in considerable damage, had it not been discovered in good time and the services of the brigade called into requisition. A passerby noticed the blaze and immediately informed the occupants of the house of the danger. Big sparks were being blown around like snowflakes in the gale.

The brigade arrived in short order and the blaze was very soon put out by the use of chemicals.

Delegates for the Canadian National Missionary Congress at Toronto

Delegates are already registering for the Canadian National Missionary Congress to be held in Toronto March 31st to April 4th. More than 500 clergymen are registered as Honorary Commissioners and 60 of the most prominent men from the United States are coming as visitors. The Executive Committee of Montreal expect to send a delegation of at least 100 men. Hamilton, Ont. will send 80, and a special committee is at work in Halifax to secure a delegation from that city. The allotment of commissioners as assigned gives 500 to Toronto and the Toronto men feel that this is not nearly enough.

"FLORODORA" HERE THIS EVENING

Noted English Musical Comedy Will be Presented by Imperial Opera Company

The Imperial Opera Co. headed by Miss Agnes Cain-Brown, who won so much favor here last month as San Toy, appears at the Grand Opera House tonight in this well known company's stupendous production of "Florodora." There is not one among the many noted English musical comedies which has achieved such tremendous international popularity as this splendid production. It is in every sense tuneful, catchy and charming. Mr. Harry Girard, who was seen as Bobbie, in San Toy, has a baritone voice of wonderful and marvelous range and his portrayal of Abercoed is delightful. Others in the cast include Miss Florence Burdette, as Lady Hollyrood, Laura Christopher, the Dainty Soubrette, Hallen Mostyn, W. H. Pringle, Mr. Herbert Salinger and and a chorus of 60.

PROF. CHANT A BRILLIANT AND AUTHORATIVE SPEAKER

Prof C. A. Chant, who lectures tomorrow evening at the Collegiate Institute under the auspices of the Royal Astronomical Society is very well known to a large number in this city. Having been before a Peterborough audience on several occasions his name is familiar to all, but as a professor in Toronto university he has a student following all over Canada and beyond.

Professor Chant is the first speaker in a course of lectures which probably has never been equalled in Peterborough. The local officials of the Astronomical Society have been very fortunate in securing men of such calibre to lecture in our city. It will undoubtedly be a rare literary treat.

Considering the efforts of the society in obtaining these men of note, it is expected the literary element of our city will mark their appreciation by attendance in large numbers.

Though naturally there will be considerable expense in bringing some of these men from such long distances there will be no admission fee if it is at all possible to avoid such. Possibly this lack of a fee is a drawback. Because the lectures will be free their educative and entertaining value should be measured thereby.

Since the announcement of the course of lectures many inquiries have been made relative to membership in the Royal Astronomical Society. Miss Estelle Foy, 193 London street, the energetic secretary of the society will be pleased to supply such with information.

A very moderate membership fee entitles the receipt of the various publications of the Canadian Society including the yearly handbook and the bi-monthly journal.

RHEUMATISM & STIFF JOINTS

When you have any deep-seated pain in the joints, the back, the wrists, or elsewhere, place a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers, or on the palm of the hand, and rub it in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation-balm," kills pain and removes stiffness.

Sound rubbings of the affected parts with this wonderful balm will drive out all pain, reduce swelling, strengthen the skin and tissues (enabling them to resist cold and damp better during the winter months), and restore perfect elasticity and looseness.

MONTREAL LADY'S EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. Frances Wyatt, of St. Guy Avenue, Montreal, says:—"I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable in a very bad case of rheumatism, and also for stiffness of joints and muscles. I suffered long and acutely from rheumatism, and tried one liniment after another in vain. I also took medicines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure.

"I began applying this balm whenever I felt the aches and pains of rheumatism coming on or felt any of the stiffness. The result was truly wonderful. Zam-Buk seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pain, driving them out completely, and I am now quite cured."

WHAT ICE HOUSES AND STEAM DID FOR HIM.

Mr. P. G. Wells, of 838 Ogden Street, Fort William, Ont., says:—"Following my duties in attending to passenger trains, I often get wet through with rain and steam (the latter in winter). This with hours of duty in icehouses in summer, was no doubt the cause of my contracting rheumatism in both knees, left arm, and shoulder. This got so bad that I could no longer work and was laid off on three different occasions for several weeks during which I was under the treatment of my doctor. I seemed to get little if any better, no matter what I tried, and this was my state when Zam-Buk was recommended to me. I laid in a supply, and to my great joy it began to cure me. I rubbed it well in every night, and when a few boxes had been used I found I was free from the pain and stiffness of rheumatism. I have had no more trouble from the disease."

Zam-Buk is a positive and certain cure for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, piles, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, scabs, chapped hands, cold cracks, chilblains, ringworm, scalp sores, bad leg, diseased ankles, and all other skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the parts affected, it cures neuralgia, rheumatism, and sciatica. All druggists and stores sell at 50 c. box, three for $1·25 or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse the harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

LOCALS RAN AWAY FROM PORT HOPE LAST NIGHT BY BIG SCORE 52 TO 15

A fair sized crowd watched the local YMCA. basketball team run away last night from the Port Hope five thereby securing a firmer hold on the district championship. Captain Dobbin's men were better in all departments of the game and the boys from the smallpox town never had a chance to win. In the first stages of the game both teams lost many chances to score by missing passes and poor shooting but as the game progressed the teams showed a big improvement. The local outfit played a good combination shot better and were quicker in handling the ball and these coupled with their good all round work won them the game.

With a little better luck Port Hope would have made the score a lot closer as they missed many shots by a close margin. Their combination was broken up by the close checking of their opponents and it was very rarely that they ever got away.

The half time score was 23-9 and at full time the reading was Peterborough 52; Port Hope 15.

In the interval that followed the Leaders gymnasium corps gave a fine exhibition on the parallel bars and showed a high grade of proficiency.

Mr. Jack Laing refereed the first half and Mr Garney Galley the second half;

REVIEW'S CHALLENGE FOR THE ANNUAL PRESS GAME

The Review challenges the Examiner. The time has come for the Conservative puck chasers to hurl the gauntlet for the annual historic match The Examiner seven holds the Press Cup and the Review will make a mighty effort to wrest the tinware from its present holders. The seven from this office made a mighty effort last year—but the less said about that struggle the better.

Arrangements will be made for the rink just as soon as this challenge is accepted.

The Review will trot out a better team than last year and if possible will get away with the much coveted trophy. They will be without the services of their official stickhandler Mr. P. Alexander Crane who has deserted this establishment for the Examiner camp and the big game will see him on the rooting department of the present champ ons.

P.S.—It is understood there are a couple of good men on the reportorial staff of the Morning Times. These men will be barred from playing with either team.

DOUBLE HEADER AT THE P.B.C. ALLEYS LAST NIGHT

The Examiner A team took three games from the B.A.C. trio last night, putting on the splendid total of 1589. Cairns cut loose and hung up a total of 608 which is a new record for the alleys in a league game. The previous record was 600 and was also held by Cairns.

The B.A.C. team after being trimmed by the Exams. went after the Hams and took two out of three from Gene Hurtubise and his band.

ROGERS PUT UP A FAST MATCH

Yankee Rogers tackled Champion Frank Gotch last night and, strange to say not only came out of the fracas sound in wind and limb, but he stayed the 15-minute limit and took down Gotch's $50 forfeit.

It was a whirlwind bout all the way, and the crowd went half crazy when Rogers got behind Gotch and proceeded to try for a fall. He didn't get it but when the wrestlers were sorted out when the time was called Rogers was on top. Rogers had a barrel of speed and only Gotch's tremendous strength got him out of several bad holds.—Toronto Star.

SIMPSON ESTABLISHES A NEW INDOOR RECORD

It took Fred Simpson, the Peterborough Indian, just 52 minutes and 30 seconds to run ten miles, or 120 laps, at the Riverdale Arena last evening. The time constitutes a new Canadian record. Simpson was in fine condition at the start and finished full of running. Indeed he looked as if he could have cut many more seconds off the time, or have gone the Marathon distance, without trouble. There is no doubt about the time, as the following well-known men officiated with the watch;—Messrs. Tom Flanagan, P. J. Mulqueen, J. J. McCaffery, C. W. Smith and Tom Eck. Following are the times by miles;

3	15.30
4	21.00
5	25.35
6	30.42
7	36.19
8	41.07 1-2
9	46.41
10	52.30

The track is 12 laps to the mile or something less. The time for the 120 laps was 52.30 and to make sure of the Canadian records Simpson went on three extra laps in 53.24 and he was still inside Geo. Adams' Canadian mark, made outdoors two years ago, which was 53.59. Shrubb, of course, still holds the world's record of 50.40 3-5, made at Glasgow.

The wonderful run of Fred Simpson last night at Riverdale Arena makes good the predictions about the Peterborough Indian of several well-posted Marathon experts, including J. Howard Crocker, manager of the Canadian Olympic team, who called Simpson as sure to beat Tom Longboat in the race from Windsor to Shepherd's Bush, which he did. Also the trial speaks well for the acumen and training ability of white-haired Tom Eck, another one of the prophets who always insisted that Simpson was in the front rank as a long distance performer.—Toronto World.

Contrary to the common belief Simpson is [illegible] a young Indian, being just 27 years of age. His manager sees a bright career before him, and Tom Eck feels assured that his man can not only get matches with Dorando, Shrubb and Longboat, but that he can defeat them all at any distance from 10 to 26 miles 385 yards.

Fred Simpson arrived in town this morning fresh from his triumph at Riverdale rink last night. The coming champion is looking the picture of health and feels in fine trim. Fred was to have run in a 12 mile relay, but by some accident the telegram which Tom Eck sent was misplaced and the race did not take place. Fred is greatly pleased with his trainer and his showing last night coupled with his splendid condition, speaks for itself.

Simpson is greatly pleased with the way he was treated when training in the south and has many amusing incidents to tell. He will spend the next few days with his family in Hiawatha to enjoy a short rest and will then report to his manager, who should be able to arrange matches with the best in the country.

LONGBOAT, DORANDO AND SIMPSON MAY RUN HERE

Now that Fred Simpson has shown that he can really run with the best of them, Peterborough may have the opportunity of seeing Longboat, Dorando and Simpson in action here. The Peterborough Indian has shown that he should be placed in the same class with the runners who have been making such a big noise lately.

Tom Eck, Simpson's handler, is trying to arrange a race with the abovementioned runners to take place here and it would be sure to be well patronized, and followers of the running game in the city will await with interest the outcome of these arrangements.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF JUNIOR LEAGUE

Friday night from 7 to 8 o'clock on Knox rink, All Saints' and Murray street will battle for the championship of the Junior Church League. Both aggregations have been playing good hockey throughout the season and to-morrow night's game should be well worth seeing. Each team has four wins and one loss to its credit, including defaults, the defaults being from St. John's, who failed to finish the schedule. The teams for Friday night's game will likely be as follows;

ALL SAINTS',
Goal, Moore,
Point, Flowers.
Cover point, Allen.
Centre, Lebar.
Rover, Layfield,
Wings, Armstrong and Sweaton.

MURRAY ST.
Goal, Scott.
Point, Irwin.
Cover, Miller.
Centre, McConnel.
Rover, Evans.
Wings, Matthews and Doherty.

SIMPSON WILLING TO MEET SHRUBB

Fred Simpson was quite willing to tackle Shrubb in the erring Longboat's place, but it was not so arranged.

Simpson will go up against time to-night, and he is in great shape for it. The Riverdale Rink track is a good one and with Tom Eck's runner feeling as he does, something ought to happen to the records.

Simpson met his Olympic manager, J. Howard Crocker, this morning, and the two talked over old times in England.—Toronto News.

CURLING

Glasgow, February 23— The Canadian curlers played their last match in Scotland today defeating the Dumbarton province curlers by 91 shots. The Canadians will proceed to London tomorrow.

London, Feb 24 — The Canadian curlers and Lord Strathcona were entertained by the London Caledonian Club at the Trocadero. J G Carmichael presided, and Sir J H Maxwell was present. The Caledonians gave gave the visitors a warm welcome to the capital.

WRESTLING

The Galt Reformer says;—Fritz Mohl, the big German wrestler, will arrive here on Wednesday next and will finish his preparations and be ready for the famous Yankee Rogers when the men clash together at Scott's opera house on Friday, the 26th. Rogers is one of the best wrestlers in the world to-day, and is a great favorite with the crowd. Just imagine what will be doing.

Yankee Rogers stands 6 ft. 2 in. and weighs 212 pounds, while Fitz Mohl, who is twice winner of the German Greeco-Roman style wrestling stands 6 ft. 1 in., and weight 215 pounds. These two babies will clash together like an earthquake.

HOCKEY

George street request the following players to be on hand for their game with Knox church at the Brock street rink at eight o'clock tonight; Armstrong, Best, Sanderson, Davidson, Lisdale, Godfrey, Pratt and Robertson.

The Grafters accept the challenge of the Tame Banties to a game of hockey as soon as the rink can be secured.

CHURCH LEAGUE GAMES TO-NIGHT

Two church league games will be put on at the Brock street rink tonight and as the outcome will have a distinct bearing as to who will carry off the silverware, the games are sure to be well contested.

Knox church will meet George St, in the first game which will start at eight o'clock and St. Andrew's and Park street will meet in the second game. Harry Morgan will handle the bell in both games and will keep the teams playing their best all the time.

City League prices will prevail, 10c for ladies and 15c for gentlemen and a big crowd should be on hand to witness these two games which are sure to be fast and interesting.

TRUE REPORT OF THE GAME

The big noise you heard about ten o'clock on Monday night was the breaking up of Ackerman's winning streak and not the downfall of the C. GE seven as the report furnished the Review Tuesday night has it. The said report shows very poor sportsmanship on the part of somebody and if it was intended as a joke the joke is pretty flat in view of the real circumstances.

As a matter of fact the harness men came up with wax ends and glue pots and many rooters to tie the Electric men in packages but they ran into some live wires and died young. The Canadian General played well together and were always on the puck and had the leather workers "faded" and when the curtain was rung down on the scene they were distributing the big end of a 10-1 score.

HOCKEY

The following members of St. Andrew's hockey team are requested to be on hand tonight for their game with Park street; Patterson, Stanton, Flanagan, H Rae, Currie, N. Rae, E Reid and Dormer.

Auburn and Bridgenorth will clash in a game of hockey from seven to eight at Brock street rink tonight. Bridgenorth will have pretty much the same team as represented them in the city league last season, and are sure to make the weavers go the limit.

Big Shed Collapsed.

Preston, Feb. 25. -A large shed, 80 by 160, in course of erection, adjoining the Preston Car & Coach Co. works, collapsed yesterday. A number of men were at work, but all escaped. The damage will be about $200, the loss of the men's time to the work that had been done.

Four Accused of Murder.

Prince Albert, Feb. 25.—Four men, Robert Umphreville, John Turner, Alex. Dubois and Tom Ballantyne, are held at the Mounted Police barracks here, charged with the murder of J. Anderson last November at Kinistino. The five were drinking together and left for home. Later Anderson's body was found with the head battered in. The four were arrested and will have a preliminary hearing on Friday.

Every Little Bit—

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—The last volume of the Auditor-General's report gives the sums paid for printing and advertising in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1908.

For advertising $287,167 was paid, and for printing and lithographs, $800,413.

The Toronto Globe got $6,493 for advertising, and The Toronto Star $4,977.

WRESTLING

Hamilton Spectator;

There is work for Fritz Mohl to do. The following letter was received by the Sporting Editor this morning;

Toronto, Feb 22.

Dear Sir,—

In your Saturday's issue I notice Fritz Mohl, the German champion, after beating three men said it was no credit for him to do so.

If Mr Mohl sees this, and the Hamilton sports want to see someone make this big Dutchman travel, let him take a crack at myself, I am not so small. I stand 6 feet 2 inches and weigh 212 pounds and I think I can make Mr Mohl skip around that ring to a nice tune. He may beat me but if he does he will be unable to say that it was no credit for him to do so. If I can get a chance, I will show Mohl and your wrestling fans what it looks like to clean up a bragging heavyweight.

CHARLES (YANKEE) ROGERS

Montreal, Feb 24—One of the best programmes of the season is promised for Friday night at Sohmer Park, when Lundin, the big Swede, will meet Raoul de Rouen, in a catch as catch can wrestling match to a finish.

Lundin and De Rouen have met once before and the Swede won at the catch as catch can style, so that when the men meet on Friday night they should put up an interesting contest.

This will be the Frenchman's last appearance at Montreal, as he will leave next week for the West, to train for his match with Gotch, in Kansas City on March 25th, for a $10,000 purse.

NORWOOD

A number of Norwood citizens drove over to Havelock last night and attended the concert held in the town hall of that place.

Mr. Lee McNichol is visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe, of Havelock, visited at the home of Mrs. J. Forsythe over Sunday.

Mrs. E. J. Laing and daughter Elsie visited friends in Hastings over Sunday.

Mrs Anderson, of Hastings, was in town over Sunday.

Misses Annie and Mary Murray visited at their home in Hastings on Sunday last.

Mrs. G. Buck and son Harold, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bowsen in Peterborough.

Miss Nennie Young went to Toronto last week, where she has secured a position as a milliner.

Dr. Kindred, of Havelock, was in town on Tuesday.

Mrs. Fitzgerald and daughters Greta and Thelma have returned to their home in Tweed and visiting friends in town.

Mr. J. Weir, of Havelock, visited his family here on Sunday and Monday.

Miss Ella Johnston visited friends in Peterborough on Wednesday last.

Miss Maggie McGraw, of Peterborough, visited friends in Norwood on Wednesday last.

Mr. R. Finley visited friends in Hastings on Sunday.

The marriage of Miss Clara McNicholl, daughter of Mr. J. McNicholl, of this place, and Mr. J. Grady, of Peterborough, took place at St. Paul's church on Wednesday, Feb. 17th. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Conroy, and the bride was married in her travelling suit of tan-stripped goods with mink furs and a small mink hat to match. The bride was supported by Miss Maggie McGraw, of Peterborough, and the groom by Mr. J. Coughlin of Peterborough.

After the ceremony the party repaired to the home of the bride's parents on Spring street, where a most sumptuous dinner was served.

During the afternoon a reception was held and the happy couple left on the 6.45 train for Rochester, Buffalo and New York. On their return they will reside at their home in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Huffman, of Rawdon, visited at the home of the latter's sister, Miss M. P. Williams, last week.

The first Methodist church erected in Norwood was in the year 1839. The thank offering asked from the congregation on Easter will go towards decorating and cleaning the interior of the church, and on Good Friday, April 9th, Mr. Edward Barton, late soloist of the Metropolitan church, Toronto, eight years soloist in England and Paris, will sing the base solo in Maunder's "Olivet" to Calvary," to be given by the Norwood choir.

Rev. W. E. Norton, of Toronto, superintendent of the Home Mission Board of the Baptist church, was in town last week.

The weather permitting, there will be races at the Norwood rink on Thursday evening next. Messrs. Russell Pearce, Alex. Kempt, H. McNicholl and Orall Johnsten, four of Norwood's fastest skaters, have entered. There will be skating before and after the races, and there will in all probability be an event taken in by all who are interested.

T.A.S. FORMED AT CAMPBELLFORD

We hear that a Total Abstinence Society has been formed by the young men of St Mary's church. Great success has attended such organizations in other places, and especially in Peterborough. The society have engaged the top flat of the Turner block, and are equipping it with gymnasium apparatus and other requisites. This is a move in the right direction. Provision should be made for our young men to spend their evenings pleasantly and profitably instead of being forced to congregate at the pool rooms or other places of questionable amusements.—Campbellford Herald.

EVERY CONTESTANT PLAYING TO WIN

Fine Campaigning Being Done by all Active Candidates--Some Favor "Dark Horse" Plan, While Othert Believe in Voting Enough to Show Their Friends That They Want to Win.

WEDNESDAY ANOTHER FINE DAY

Tremendous Voting Yesterday -- Miss Rose P. Moore Leads the Contest With Over 40,000—Miss Holcombe the Heaviest Voter for a Single Day Since the Contest Started.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

Like the ever-fascinating kaleidoscope, the Review contest is rapidly shifting, and each day the list of candidates presents a different arrangement. To-day your favorite may be in the lead, but to-morrow another active competitor forges to the front (and then again we see another creep forward possibly from some unexpected quarter, and so the field presents a picture.

To-day's leaders are;—

HIGH VOTE

Miss Rose P. Moore.

FIRSTS

Miss Rose P. Moore.
Miss Birdie Dawson.
W. G. Rundle.
Sidney A. Smithson.

SECONDS

Miss Maud Adams.
Miss Ada Holcombe.
Wm. A. Mowry.
R. C. Strickland.

Another day of plunging. Miss Moore patronized the ballot box with a sufficient number of certificates to lead the contest to-day, but the margin is small, there being less than 300 votes separating Miss Moore and Miss Dawson, who is first in the city list. Although Miss Adams increased her score over 10,000, a strong second place in the city list was the best her heavy vote gave her. Miss Bell's steady climb is again in evidence.

Miss Holcombe polled the heaviest individual vote for one day since the voting began and is now second in her list, less than 1,00 ahead of Miss Lila Finlay, who voted 6,000. Miss Whetung voted another pink slip. This list is rapidly developing, and considering that the candidates started a little later than the ladies' city list, is showing the same relative strength.

Herb McMillan is rapidly closing the gap, and unless the former leaders "come over," will secure first place if he keeps up his fast pace.

Sidney A. Smithson reached the 20,000 mark, and has double the vote of any other contestant in his list. The Road to victory.

The Road to Victory

If you believe you can win a contest of any kind, you are a big enough jury, and your own verdict is the only one that counts—the only one that is needed. Wade into the thick of the fight, and head straight for the goal.

Don't wait for some one to tell you that you are the person who should be honored by your fellowmen. Our neighbors as a rule, wish to be shown, but are ever ready to recognize merit when it is brought to their attention. It is up to you to make them take notice.

It isn't a bad thing in the long run, this hard-headed, hard-hearted attitude of our fellow-men. It forces you to prove yourself. It keeps you from growing self-complacent and dependent. It rouses all the best that is in you and makes you so angry because you have been underestimated that you strive with a two-fold object to succeed, and by success show that you were right after all.

A little hard work won't hurt you—it's the crucible through which untried strength must pass to get its temper. Incredulity won't rattle the person who is really determined. On the contrary, it reminds them that they must count on themselves. It sets them going at a stiffer pace—it rouses the struggle of resistance and jerks the jaw out into the fighting angle—and sweet VICTORY is the result.

Get right out after the subscriptions while the "club" offer is in force and you will be started right. The first blow is one of the most important in every battle. Land it without delay—NOW.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number scheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

URGENT NECESSITY FOR AN ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Board of Health Again Pass a Resolution, Reminding the Council That the Matter Has Been Repeatedly Brought to Their Notice—Meeting Held This Morning

The Board of Health met this morning and again took up the matter of an Isolation Hospital.

Those present at the meeting were Dr. Burnham (chairman), W. J. Johnston, Dr. Young, Jas. Murty and Mayor Bush.

It was moved by Mr. Johnston, seconded by Dr. Young, that it shall be a regulation of the local Board of Health under sec. 91 of the Public Health Act that except the physician or clergyman, no person affected with smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria or cholera, and no person affected with any of the said diseases shall leave the house in which any of the said diseases is or mingle with the public until the Medical Health Officer has prescribed such sanitary precautions as he deems advisable, nor until such precautions have been complied with, and it shall be the duty of the Medical Health Officer in each case of such disease to prescribe such precautions as he deems necessary for the protection of the public.—Carried.

It was moved by Dr. Young and seconded by W. J. Johnston that the attention of the City Council be again called to the urgent necessity for a hospital in which contagious diseases may be treated, and that the council be reminded that the Board has repeatedly called attention to this matter.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

HIGH WIND LAST NIGHT BUT DAMAGE WAS VERY SLIGHT

Probably the most cutting wind of the winter was blowing last night.

It was a penetrating blast from the northwest and blew at a furious rate. In fact, one going west when he got away from the protection of the houses and big buildings of the city would be almost blown off his feet. And to make it worse the footing was very treacherous. In places where it was solid it was very slippery and one was liable to step through the rough snow into water six inches deep.

The rain and thaw for the past couple of days has given householders troubles of their own and they will be glad that the cold weather has come again. Many cellars have been flooded and a great deal of inconvenience has been caused generally by the excess of water.

Although the gale last night was a bad one the damage was trifling. The Review communicated this morning with the Peterborough Light and Power Company, the Otonabee Light and Power Company and the Machine and Bell Telephone Companies and all reported that as far as they were concerned there was practically no damage at all.

CONVENTION MAY BE HELD IN THIS CITY

Next Annual Convention of Hardwaremen's Association May be Held Here

Toronto, Feb. 24.—The next annual convention of the Ontario Retail Hardwaremen's Association may be held in Peterborough. Secretary Weston Wrigley stated today that there were but two places under discussion—London and Peterborough—and as yet the association was undecided as to which would be chosen.

The convention this year met at Hamilton and was a big success, hardwaremen being present from all parts of Ontario. Mr. Wrigley, the secretary of the association, is the editor of the Hardware and Metal.

BOBBY ROBINSON WAS ACQUITTED

Sporting Editor of the Spectator Now Threatens to Sue Mills of the Times

Hamilton, Feb. 24.—The belligerent sporting editors of the Times and the Spectator have once more faced each other in the police court. This morning Magistrate Jelfs was called upon to hear a charge of disorderly conduct brought by F. C. Mills, of the Times, against M. M. Robinson, of the Spectator. Mills ran a wrestling match last Friday night and intimated to the Spectator that Robinson would not be admitted. Robinson presented himself after buying a ticket and was told by the policemen that he would not be allowed in. Robinson left but returned twice and sought to gain entrance to the building. As a result Mills laid an information of disorderly conduct against him. The magistrate, after hearing the evidence of the policemen, dismissed the case, but not before he had warned the two to avoid each other in future. Mills' lawyer lodged an appeal, and G. L. Staunton, who is appearing for Robinson, intimated he would proceed against the plaintiff for wrongful arrest of his client.

ICE JAM ON THE CREEK IN REAR OF PROTESTANT HOME

Residents living to the north of the Protestant Home had an exciting time yesterday afternoon. The big downpour of rain of the night before aided by the mild weather of the last couple of days threatened to cause considerable damage and inconvenience to many who were living in the danger zone. The large amount of water that comes down the creek at this point became blocked by the breaking up and being unable to get past the bridges. As a result a large area was covered with water and many cellars were flooded. Several houses were completely surrounded by water and the inmates viewed the excitement from the windows. The dynamite supply was limited and the men who were trying to save the situation were up against a big disadvantage. However, after many hours' hard work, a large amount of the ice was broken up and the creek soon settled down to a normal flow.

OTTAWA SUFFRAGETTES WILL NOT TAKE SEATS FROM MEN

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—"Why should a tired man give up his seat in a car to a woman?" asked Mrs. J. H. Brown at the executive meeting of the Ottawa Equal Suffrage Association in the Carnegie Library Hall last night."

"Why should a man who has worked all day give up his seat to a lady who is returning from devouring an elaborate five o'clock tea? I hope that the men of Ottawa will understand that we do not want their seats, but we do want votes. Anyway, if we get votes we will provide enough seats for both men and women," the president of the society concluded her address. The women applauded the sentiment by generous hand clapping.

Mrs. George E. Holland, treasurer of the Equal Suffrage Association, when speaking, asked why people should oppose giving votes to women. When war was declared between South Africa and England, Canadian soldiers fought and were considered heroes, explained the speaker. These men were fighting because Englishmen in Africa were being taxed by the Boers, and not given representation in Parliament. When these soldiers returned home from the war they were not called names, but were lauded as brave men.

"Women are being taxed" said Mrs. Holland, "and when they claim votes they are not considered heroines, they are called names."

Petitions to the Provincial Legislature were given to members of the executive to be signed by the public. These petitions ask parliament to give franchise to women.

"It should be our aim to place a lady in the field for school trustee next year," said Mrs. Brown near the close of the meeting.

LEEDS CHORAL UNION MAY VISIT CANADA

The members of the Leeds Choral Union who held their final rehearsal at Elgar's "King Olaf" on Monday night at the Philosophical Hall, received a surprise visit from Dr. Chas. Harriss, of Ottawa, who recently organized the trip of the Sheffield chorus to Canada, and who had travelled specially from Glasgow to hear the Choral union sing. Dr Harriss, in the course of a short speech said that if the Leeds choir could see their way to organize a Canadian trip he would do all he could to make it a success. This sentiment, says the Yorkshire Post, was rapturously applauded by the members of the choir. — London Canadian Gazette.

SHOULD SUPPORT THE ORCHESTRA

Visit of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra To-morrow Night a Rare Musical Treat

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Without asking you, or desiring myself, to enter into free advertising, I feel it a matter of good importance, from a musical point of view that our lovers of music should support the visit of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra on Friday night in the Opera House.

The distinction enjoyed by the city of Toronto as a musical city has been largely brought about by the enterprise manifested in making a visit of the large American orchestras an annual feature. This season the New York Symphony have given two concerts, the Chicago Symphony four concerts and the Pittsburg Symphony two concerts. These visits have made possible the formation in Toronto of several excellent choral societies one at least of which has a continental reputation. This has all been accomplished in the past ten years and has done much to bring Toronto into prominence.

It is often stated that our good city is wanting in musical culture and musical intelligence. It is true that, outside of our church choirs, nothing is being done to instruct and elevate the musical desire. I am of the opinion that a taste or two of the "good things" is needed to create a thirst for the best obtainable. Why should it not be possible for Peterborough to have a well-trained chorus that could be used in conjunction with at least one of the great symphony organizations every winter. It is true, as I have said, that Toronto leads in this line, but why should we not come to love the art that we may hope to produce good results right here in Peterborough.

Our fathers who read "Festus," found there the statement that "Music Tells us Truths." It does better. It liberates the emotions it enlarges the imaginations, it puts color into feeling, it gives wings to daily life. A grand symphony calls for the richest response human nature knows. Not without reason was it called the "Angel's" speech.

The Toronto Symphony orchestra played with the Sheffield Choir during their recent visit to Toronto and were highly complimented by Dr. Coward on their efficiency. I have heard them several times and have to say that Mr. Welsman has a fine band and the programme offered will be a delight.

If we are to have a visit from such an organization occasionally and not be side-tracked by that which goes to make for our musical betterment we must endeavor to at least make it a paying motive. To bring an orchestra of 60 pieces to Peterborough is no small undertaking and I sincerely hope they may be met with such a reception as will show beyond a doubt that Peterborough desires to learn and grow in the cultivation of the art.

Yours truly,
JOHN CRANE.

MORE AID FOR THE HOSPITALS

Toronto, Feb 25— Representing the Hospital Association of Ontario, a large deputation waited on Hon W. J. Hanna yesterday and asked for an increased provincial grant and amended legislation. The deputation consisted of W E Rundle, Toronto, president; G A Hutchinson, Brockville, secretary; J W Flavelle, J E Atkinson, Toronto; S Fournier and Rev Father J S Lebel, Sudbury; Dr. Smith, Dr Brandon and W Martin, North Bay; G Y Chown, Kingston; J Billings and Dr Langrill, Hamilton; Dr Guest, St Thomas, and Dr Robertson.

The deputation pointed out that the number of patients in hospitals was increasing and on that account the Government grant had decreased from 32 to 13 per cent of the cost of maintenance.

It was suggested that legislation be passed to compel municipalities to pay for patients sent to hospitals.

The great amount of charitable work was also referred to, especially in regard to New Ontario.

Mr. Hanna promised to give the requests careful consideration.

MASON & RISCH PIANO

Will be used at the Toronto Symphony Club's Recital next Friday evening

Mr. Frank S. Welsman, musical composer and leader of the Toronto Symphony Club writes of the Mason & Risch Piano as follows:

The Mason & Risch Piano Co.

Gentlemen: Allow me to thank you for the Grand Piano you have supplied for my recitals during the past season. The instruments have very materially assisted me in interpreting to my own satisfaction the compositions my programmes have called for. Not only have your instruments a large volume of tone, but have what I might call a pervading quality which I found in no other piano.

The lightness and perfect repetition of the Action permits one to bring out the tonal qualities referred to above with such ease that it is with the greatest of pleasure I have used the Mason & Risch Piano.

It is gratifying to find that it is not necessary to go outside our own country to secure an instrument of the highest excellence.

Yours sincerely,
FRANK S. WELSMAN.

FAIR DIRECTORS ALREADY MAKING ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1909 EXHIBITION

Preliminary Plans Made at Meeting Held Yesterday — Committees Were Appointed — Field Crop Competition Will be Inaugurated.

The directors of the Peterborough Agricultural Society held a meeting yesterday afternoon to make preliminary arrangements for this year's exhibition. There was a large attendance and the meeting was of a most enthusiastic nature.

The principal object of the meeting was to revise the rules and regulations and this was done although there were no very radical changes made. The prize list was the next thing taken up and this was handed over to the various committees who will revise their individual classes and report to the board at the next meeting.

DEPARTMENT JUDGE.

At the request of the Department of Agriculture of Ontario, the Peterborough Association took up the question of selecting men who were capable of judging to act at the fall fair for the Ontario department. The members recommended that Mr. R. H. Leary be a judge of light horses and his name will be sent to the superintendant of fairs.

Mr Jas. Baptie was also as a judge on poultry.

FIELD CROP.

There will be a competition this fall for the best standing field crop. The directors decided that this competition would create a great interest among the farmers. The seed selected will be white oats, and all the farmers who have a good clean field will be asked to enter.

An application was received yesterday from a local party for the dining hall privilege at the fair grounds next fall. It is pretty early in the season and the matter was left over for the time being.

A resolution of thanks and appreciation of service rendered was passed to Miss Melville, who has acted as judge of ladies work and fine arts at the exhibition for several years past. Miss Melville is leaving the city and her services will be greatly missed.

President R. H. Leary was authorized to communicate with the department at Toronto in reference to the suggested rural mounted police service. The local association is strongly in favor of the scheme but content that it should be under the control of the provincial authorities.

The next meeting of the board will be held on Tuesday, March 18th, at 2.30 o'clock.

Those present were President R. H. Leary, Secretary F. J. A. Hall and Directors Deyell, Collins, Kennedy, Young, Oke, Cox, Bell, Garbutt, Jones Storey, Conway, Milburn, Baptie, Turner and Dr. King.

COMMITTEES.

The following committees were appointed;

Executive — The President and Messrs. Garbutt, Turner, Bell, Collins, Gillespie, Conway, Oke, Jones, Storey, Dennison and Cruikshanks.

Horses, Light — Messrs. Elliott, Cruikshanks and Storey.

GRUESOME JOURNEY OF 150 MILES OVER ICE AND SNOW WITH DEAD MEN

Details of a Terrible Accident on the Transcontinental North of Nepigon—Through the Woods With the Corpses of the Dead Men.

Fort William, Feb. 21.—With the corpses of seven men whose lives were snuffed out in an instant in a premature explosion on the Transcontinental railway, a single bob sleigh, accompanied by three weary and travel-stained men, arrived at Nipigon last Saturday after having conveyed its gruesome burden over 135 miles of lakes, rivers and brush covered hills.

Since last Tuesday, the day succeeding that of the explosion, the men had been on one of the most awesome journeys ever recorded in this part of the west.

While tramping in a rock cut some 15 feet in depth, last Monday, Nelson Munson, foreman of a crew of nine men, accidentally struck a charge of dynamite. When the debris occasioned by the explosion which resulted had been cleared away, it was found that only two members of the party had survived. Four lay buried beneath tons of earth and broken rock, while three had been mangled almost beyond recognition. The whole face of the cut, close to which all nine of the men were standing, fell in. No one has been able to account for the miraculous escape of the two survivors.

Sjblom was a Norwegian and the others were Swedes. They were in the employ of McCaffery & McQuaig sub-contractors, under the Nipigon Construction Company. All were experienced at their work.

No cries were heard at the time of nor following the explosion. It is not thought that one of the seven men knew that an accident had occurred. It was several minutes before either of the two men who had passed safely through the shadow of death realized what had happened. Although they were so wedged in by the falling rock that it was impossible for them to move more than a few inches the two survivors were not even seriously bruised.

It was more than two hours before two score of willing hands could remove the debris from some of the bodies. All but two had died where they stood.

It was at the break of day on the following morning that the long death march which will form one of the most appalling death chapters in the building of the great railway was begun. The only means of conveyance was the primitive bob sleigh. The trail is difficult to traverse under the best of conditions.

Knowing that the testimony of the two survivors, the only living eye-witnesses, would be required at the inquest, the superintendent of the camp advised them to accompany the driver of the team. They travelled from early morning until late in the evening, and took turns in watching their charges at night.

The two survivors were on the verge of collapse when they arrived at Nipigon. One of them had accompanied two of the men killed across the same trail a short time before.

Crown Attorney Langworthy and Coroner Brown, of Port Arthur, returned from Nipigon, where the inquest was held. There was no evidence produced at the inquiry to show that any one had been to blame.

Both the foreman, who was doing the tamping and his helper were accustomed to the use of dynamite. The tools used were new and in good order.

The verdict rendered was simply that the men had come to their deaths as the result of an accidental explosion.

The funeral took place yesterday and was conducted by the pastor of the Swedish Anglican church. There were no relatives present. Seven graves in a row were made in the English cemetery.

STRANGE AFFAIR

South-end Resident Reports to Police of Hearing a Loud Scream.

The police department have received a short missive from a south end resident, who lives outside the city limits, to the effect that he heard a loud scream the other night which may have meant trouble for some unfortunate. He suggests that the police look into the case and try and get at the bottom of this mysterious affair. As the locality is out of the police department's limits, nothing can be done by them.

HAMILTON GIRL IS KILLED BY TRAMP

Miss Ethel Kinrade is Shot By Man Who Comes to House Seeking Charity—Elder Sister Tells Story of Shooting.

Hamilton, Feb. 26.—Ethel Kinrade, second daughter of T. L. Kinrade, 105 Herkimer street, the principal of the Cannon street school, was foully shot to death yesterday afternoon by a tramp thief.

It is one of the most shocking crimes in the history of the city, and was committed in a home on one of the busiest and best streets in the residential portions of the city, where street cars pass every two or three minutes.

The thug got away scot free, and no trace of him has been found.

The victim, who was about 24 years of age, was alone in the house with her elder sister, Miss Florence Kinrade. According to the latter's story last night, the two were dressing for the street, when the front door bell rang.

Miss Florence answered it, and when she opened the door a tramp presented himself.

"I want something to eat," he said. "Certainly," answered the girl. "Come in."

When he got inside he pushed past her and told her that what he wanted was money, and he wanted it quick. She ran upstairs to get her purse and shouted to her sister to lock herself in her bedroom.

As she was coming downstairs with $10 she had got out of her purse, she heard her sister run down the back stairs screaming. She heard shots and ran back to the kitchen, handed the tramp the money and fled into the back yard, not seeing her sister. She found she could not escape over the back fence, and returned to the kitchen, where the man was standing over her sister's body.

She grappled with him and he threatened to kill her. She ran to a window and raised it but was afraid to call. As the man jumped out of a side window she ran out of the front door and gave the alarm.

Another version, as it was understood from her disjointed hysterical statement after the shooting was that she had come downstairs to find a man standing in the hall. She went towards the kitchen and he followed. When they reached the kitchen the man drew a revolver and demanded money. According to this version she saw the whole shooting affair, but was unable to interfere.

The [illegible] could not have made a more complete get-away if the earth had swallowed him up. None of the neighbors saw him.

The bereaved family is one of the oldest [illegible] best known in the city. The young girl's life was sacrificed through the fame of the family amongst the needy for charity, for the man is thought to be one of the numerous army of tramps that have secured succor at the home. Mr. Kinrade is very comfortably off and he made it a rule never to turn any beggar away empty-handed. The tramps would come almost daily with lodging-house tickets to be signed and this man was amongst the number.

He had been hanging around the Kinrade home all day, and as he had been seen around there before, Mrs. Kinrade decided to go down town and report him to the police. She had hardly left the police office after making her report to Detective McMahon when the telephone rang and the inspector got the message that one of Mrs. Kinrade's daughter had been murdered.

The girl describes the murderer as a thick-set man of about 35 and about five foot seven or eight inches in height. He was of rather dark complexion and had a heavy dark moustache that drooped over the corners of his mouth. He was dressed in black and had a black overcoat. He wore a black slouch hat, pulled down over his eyes.

The crime is regarded as the deed of a crazy man. That he should have made himself conspicuous by hanging about the house all day and then should walk into the front door of a house on such a busy street in broad daylight is considered as an indication of insanity.

After the eldest daughter had somewhat quieted down, the police last night secured the clearer account of the tragedy. Why the man remained in the kitchen after shooting the younger sister, while the other sister was trying to escape by way of the back yard and how the elder sister escaped so lightly, are things that are puzzling the police.

Newmarket Canal Is Criticized

HON. G. P. GRAHAM,
Minister of Railways and Canals.

USELESS SCHEME

Capt. Wallace Criticizes the Newmarket Canal—The Minister Speaks.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—Canal estimates were taken up in supply and several members of the Opposition urged Mr Graham to make a statement of policy as to the Georgian Bay Canal scheme.

Mr. Graham said it was well known that the policy of the Government, for the present year at least, was not to branch out into any new large undertaking.

Asked as to the policy in regard to giving contracts, Mr. Graham said that everybody was at liberty to tender for goods required by the Department. If any honorable member had a friend whom he wished to tender for supplies, the Department would be glad to ask him to submit prices.

Major Sam Sharpe raised the question of the Newmarket or "Aylesworth Canal," and sundry jibes were hurled at the Minister in this connection.

Mr. Graham reminded the Opposition that the Trent Valley Canal had as much fun poked at them when it was projected, but now it had come to be regarded as an important link in our water communications. Even the Newmarket Canal would, he thought, be a valuable adjunct.

"How will they get water into it?" asked Dr. Reid.

This was the question for the engineers to answer, said Mr. Graham. Competent engineers had said that a system of storage for this canal was perfectly feasible.

Mr. Graham, after further criticism, said that the Newmarket Canal, ten miles in length, would cost about $80,000, of which some $20,000 had been spent.

The Minister was anxious to have

BILL GETS SECOND READING IN ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Is Designed to Make Further Legislation Unnecessary When Another Hurry-up Town is Wanted in the North Country—Other Bills.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—Hon. A. J. Matheson announced yesterday in the Legislature that the public accounts would be brought down to-day. The estimates, he thought, would be ready for the beginning of the week.

Hon. Frank Cochrane on the second reading of the bill to amend the forest reserve act, explained that it was intended to enable the Government to set aside a townsite at Gowganda and give title therein. He would have placed the site on the market before, but for the necessity of obtaining special legislation. Another clause in the bill will enable the Government by order-in-council when any future necessity might arise, to set aside such a townsite without further legislation.

In reply to Hon. Mr. MacKay, Hon. Frank Cochrane stated that a constable had been appointed for Gowganda and the adjacent territory. The townsite had been laid out and would be sold by tender as advertised. No townsite has been laid out at South Gowganda. A mining recorder's office has been established at Kerr Lake and a recorder appointed. An office will be opened as soon as possible at Gowganda. Inspection of mining claims staked in the last nine months has been going on. An extension of the T. & N.O. Railway from Charlton to Elk Lake and Gowganda was under consideration.

Hon. J. J. Foy's resolution regarding the establishment of a minimum salary of $1,200 for sheriffs, was carried. Hon. Mr. MacKay concurred after having it made clear that the payment did not depend on the report of the inspector of legal offices absolutely.

Most of the afternoon was spent in committee passing several of the statutes prepared by the revision committee, that respecting witnesses and evidence was the chief.

The following bills were read a first time: To amend the Municipal Act, Evan Fraser; to amend the act respecting division courts, T. W. McGarry; to amend the Municipal Act, W. H. Hoyle; to amend the Municipal Act, 1903, J. J. Craig; to amend the act of incorporation of the Ontario Veterinary Association, T. W. McGarry.

Mr. Hearst will introduce a bill to amend the unorganized territory act.

Employers of labor object to T. W. McGarry's bill allowing workmen to sue for damages both where he is employed and where he was engaged. They foresee enormous expense in defending actions at points where they have no connections.

Superannuation for policemen after 25 years on half salary is what J. J. Craig proposes in his bill revived from last session.

W. S. Brewster, who dwells in the Brantford gas belt, has a bill to make insurance companies liable for damages from gas explosions.

D. Racine wants to make land, when once assessed for separate schools, liable for the indebtedness as long as it exists, and after the first owner has sold the property.

HAD THEIR NERVE ALONG WITH THEM

Windsor, Feb. 26.—A young woman, whose name could not be learned, called on Police Magistrate Leggatt yesterday morning, and swore that she was married in the magistrate's outer office last Tuesday afternoon by a tall dark man, who said he was a minister.

The magistrate was in his office the entire afternoon. The young girl, who says her home is in Grosse Pointe, Mich., further states that the "minister" handed the marriage certificate to her husband, who promptly tore it up. The supposed husband denied the marriage and later fled.

It is undoubtedly a false marriage, but the nerve of performing it in the City Hall, especially in the outer office of the police magistrate in order to give the marriage some color, is one of the boldest and most extraordinary on record in this city.

A CHAIN OF PRAYER

Some Religously Thoughtful Person is Active in Sending Communications

The following is a link of the chain of prayer which someone writing anonymously is sending to different persons in the city;—

THE CHAIN OF PRAYER.

Will you kindly copy this prayer and send it to nine of your friends?

O Lord, Jesus, we implore Thee to have mercy on all mankind; keep us from sin by Thy precious blood and take us to be with Thee through all eternity.

It is said that those who write this paper to nine of their friends, commencing the day received, will on the ninth day experience a great joy, and to those who do not write will meet with some misfortune. It was said at the "Holy Feast" at Jerusalem that all who wrote this prayer would be delivered from all calamities.

Rumor That They Are Endeavoring to Buy Property on George St.

There is a persistent rumor in the city that the T. Eaton Co., of Toronto, intend opening a branch in Peterborough. It was stated on the street to-day that the big Toronto house has been negotiating for the purchase of the block of property at the corner of George and Charlotte streets, lying between Charlotte st. and the Grand Hotel.

One report is that Eaton's intend opening a branch store here and another is that they will start a branch factory in Peterborough, similar to the one they have in Oshawa.

London, Feb. 26.—Lord Strathcona, interviewed by The London Mail, says the Imperial Press Congress can do nothing but good. The Canadian delegates are worthy in every way to represent not only the Canadian press, but the Canadian people. He could find no suspicions of a political purpose in the conference.

A Sydney despatch says the arrangements for the Imperial Press Conference do not seem likely to give good results as far as Australia is concerned. Most of the delegates are proprietors or managers, and not pressmen. The majority oppose the cheaper cable rates, and certainly do not represent public opinion thereon.

CHURCHES AND POLITICIANS

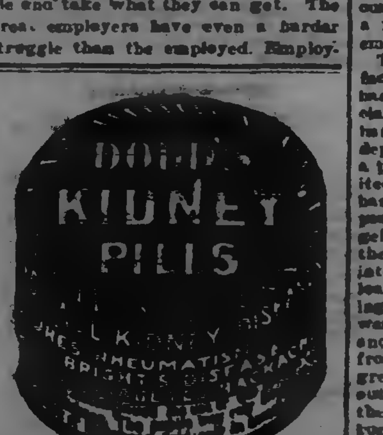
The Montreal Witness has a very sensible news item on the forged Borden telegram. The culprit self-confessed though he be, may be a worse villain than even at first supposed. Bishop Perrin, the Anglican bishop, may have been utilized as a shield to cover the retreat of a variety of common crook which whether it lodge in the west or in the east is equally devoid of morals or the most ordinary type of honor and as unworthy of the protection and assistance and all but the forgiveness of the Anglican or any other church. The use made of religious bodies by designing people is sometimes unavoidable on the part of the religious bodies but it often happens that the reverse is the case. Sometimes the clergy are willing victims who blind their own eyes if not those of others, in a cloud of bluff. The remedy lies in caution, in not being in a hurry to take up a cause or a man whose general reputation is not good or whose life is unworthy of commendation. Neither the Creator nor His creatures can long be mocked. No cleric or branch of any church can do the cause of religion greater harm than by championing those who are not worthy of it. Such procedure produces in the minds of the people a large measure of contempt for those clergymen who do not know enough to avoid "unholy alliances" or who "know enough" to cultivate them. It is always a source of grief to see clergymen made tools of and never more than when it is known to be a very dubious proceeding indeed. Whenever we hear of a clergyman taking part in a local contest and not confining himself to the general moral and religious bearing of the policies of the parties, we are, as we know, most people to be, at once impressed with the idea that a great risk is being run of injustice and indeed of impropriety which stimulates opposition to the church and brings into contempt the motives of those engaged in so doing. Few men worthy of respect will seek to make an instrument of religion to their own advantage and, while sometimes they are dragged into it by the churches themselves yet it oftener happens that the atempt is made. What must be the ultimate result?

But the politician is not always the real criminal. The clergy have traitors within their ranks as well as other people and while the deception may pass for a time it will probably end where it began, viz. in hell.

THE UNEMPLOYED

Auckland, New Zealand, Feb 22 — Speaking at a demonstration of the unemployed who urged the stopping of assisted immigration into New Zealand Premier Ward pointed out that the Government had never assisted others than agriculturists and domestic servants, and that the country could carry 20 millions of people.

In Canada we do things differently. We bring in everybody who can be deceived or cajoled into coming here on the specious promises of a North Atlantic Trading Company, the members of which would commit suicide we were told, if their names were made known. How sensitive they must be and how noble of Sir Wilfrid to protect inviolate so beautiful a confidence. In New Zealand an explanation was demanded. In Canada the people are unable to object. They sweat and toil and grumble and take what they can get. The great employers have even a harder struggle than the employed. Employers and employed alike, are in the grasp of the great money god in whose presence we tremble and bow down and worship. The modern car of juggernaut honks its horn and flashes past.



A WIFE'S PROTECTION

The Ontario Government's bill respecting dower, like other consolidations of statutes already adopted, shows no trace of the promised policy of law reform. Dower is a survival of the time when real estate was the chief form of wealth, and when a woman's real estate became, at her marriage, vested in her husband. At present the law of dower serves no purpose except to render land titles uncertain and make a great amount of unnecessary work in searching and clearing them.—The Globe.

The last sentence of the above quotation betrays the magnificent ignorance of the Globe rejecting a woman's best protector. Dower is not a relic of an effete past. It is a provision of incalculable benefit conferred automatically upon a wife by an often unwilling husband. To deprive her of it is unnecessary and unwise. Let us not take away from wives what they have already, but let us rather give them more. God knows the future of a widow is often gloomy enough, without making it worse.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The committee's decision with respect to Mr. Kennedy, who broke his hip on a slippery sidewalk, is not a proper one. It is clearly unjust on the merits.

The Examiner has a framed eulogium of the deputy minister of canals. It has a truly framed-up look to it. It asserts that it is owing to Mr. Butler's conservation-of-waters plan here that the Otonabee is not like the Moira, etc., a raging torrent. Indeed! We have lived here a good many years and have yet to find that the Otonabee except on one very extraordinary occasion, 1869-70, ever forgot its good manners. This eulogium is unnecessary and inaccurate. No doubt Mr. Butler is a good man enough. We have no objections to make to him so far as we know, but the frame-up looks as if the horror of last summer was to be patched up by a very far-fected reference to an advantage that existed with respect to these waters before Mr. Butler was born.

OF INTEREST

Mr. Fielding states that the Government does not intend to raise the rate of interest on savings bank deposits. But he is providing an alternative. Small depositors who now get three per cent on their money are to have the opportunity of converting their savings into Government stock yielding a higher rate. These announcements mean that there is no prospect of the Canadian chartered banks paying more than 3 per cent. on interest bearing deposits. The banks and the Government always raise and lower the rate together, and if Mr Fielding is going to stand firm so will the banks.

During the late money pinch which preceded the still more recent financial depression, many people having savings accounts with the Government thought that they should get more than three per cent interest. It was pointed out that the banks were lending these funds for which they paid three per cent to stock brokers at 6 1-2 and 7 per cent, to others for commercial purposes at 7, 8 and 9 per cent and occasionally for short periods in New York at 15 or 20 per cent and even higher rates. To this the banks may reply that the depositor is not bound to entrust his money to the banks. If he is not satisfied with the interest rate he can draw it out and loan it on mortgages or invest it in stocks or bonds yielding him a higher return.

But the depositor is within his right when he points out that he may not want to lock up his surplus funds in mortgages or securities. He desires to have them available for ready use and meantime he requires a safe depository which will allow him a reasonable rate for the temporary use of the money. The banks have been granted great privileges by the people. They enjoy a virtual monopoly of their business throughout the Dominion and by way of compensation they are in duty bound to provide safe custody for private saving and to pay a reasonable price for the right to employ these funds.

The situation is complicated by the fact that the Canadian chartered banks are great financial and commercial institutions as well as savings banks. The gatherings up of small deposits all over the country is only a part of their business. In the United States many of the commercial banks do not pay any interest on deposits. The purely savings banks largely take care of that business across the line. In Canada the failure of the interest rate on deposits to follow the loaning value of money upwards, during the recent period of stringency was partly responsible for the heavy and persistent withdrawal of funds from the savings departments. A great deal of this money was taken out by people who saw bargains in the stock market. They saw opportunities to invest their funds in securities yielding 5, 6, and 7 per cent, instead of only 3 per cent.

The flood tide set in some months ago and still flows. In January deposits payable on notice, which include a portion of the current as well as savings deposits, reached the enormous total of $443,000,000. This money piles up in the bank vaults without the incentive of any increase in the rate of interest. The accumulation is consequent upon the dullness in trade and the disappearance of bargains in stocks and bonds. Money has become a drug in the market, and the great lending institutions are experiencing much difficulty in finding employment for their idle funds.

At the present time the Canadian institutions have many millions of dollars loaned at less than three per cent. Pointing to this they ask how they can be expected to pay more than three per cent on deposits. They overlook the fact that the present cheapness of money is unusual, and that upon a great proportion of their deposits they are not required to pay any interest whatsoever. But this is no reason why the interest rate on interest bearing deposits should not be placed upon a fluctuating basis so that from time to time it would follow the lending value of money upwards and downwards. This end could be attained by the appointment of a standing committee of bankers to act with the Dominion Government in adjusting the rate to the requirements of the changing financial situation.—Toronto News.

the estimates put through at 6 o'clock, but the Opposition refused, and so, when the House resumed at 8 o'clock, the Public Works estimates were taken up.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave Major Currie of North Simcoe his answer yesterday afternoon. On Tuesday the member from North Simcoe called attention to the boundary treaty of 1908, alleging that Canada had been tricked by the United States negotiations in this way: that while it was the intention to follow the lines laid down by the Ashburton treaty, the word "not" had been secretly omitted from the provision that the boundary line "shall not intersect islands along its course." This referred to the Pigeon river, which separates Ontario from the State of Minnesota.

The Parliamentary paper which was quoted by Major Currie had contained a misprint.

The Speaker having informed the House of the election of Edward Kidd for the electoral division of Carleton, Mr. Borden and Richard Blain withdrew and presently introduced Mr. Kidd in the form prescribed amid thunderous Opposition applause.

Mr. Borden referred to a newspaper report of an address before the Canadian Club of Toronto of Geo. C. Gibbons, one of the Canadian representatives on the international waterways commission. In view of the fact that Mr. Gibbons had discussed the waterways treaty, the Prime Minister should expedite the presentation of that treaty to Parliament.

Sir Wilfrid replied that the treaty had not been communicated officially to Congress, although it had been submitted to the United States Senate.

"We have been pressing," he continued, "to have authority to place it at once on the table, but, as my honorable friends knows, we are bound by certain rules."

"How about Mr. Gibbons?" asked Mr. Foster.

"He discussed it because he saw it in the papers, I am afraid without authority," replied the Prime Minister.

"I am afraid he has been a little fresh," commented Mr. Foster.

The Senate re-assembled yesterday. Senator Campbell's bill relating to the water carriage of goods was given a second reading. It is designed to prevent steamship companies contracting themselves out of liability for damage to goods while in their custody in transit.

Sir Richard Cartwright moved the second reading of the bill to amend the annuities act. One amendment provides that a man and woman each of whom have taken out annuities may each continue to have the right to annuity up to $600, should they marry. Anothere provision will allow a husband to share his annuity with his wife. Another provision will allow a person having bought annuities in class "B," where payments end with death, to contract himself out of his agreement with the Government and have refunded the amount paid in.

Sir Richard said the indications were that the public were going to avail themselves largely of the opportunities afforded them by the annuities act. The bill was read the second time.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Hogs Strong to 10c Higher at Chicago.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—London cables for cattle are steady at 12¼c to 14c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10¼c to 10½c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—The railways reported receipts of 100 carloads of live stock for Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 1712 cattle, 1631 hogs, 298 sheep and lambs, with 134 calves.

Exporters.

Export steers are not selling as high as they were a few weeks past, and at present the outlook to say the least is not bright. The cattle on the market to-day did not make the drovers any money, barely paying expenses, altho there were some of the best seen on the market this season. Of course they were bought at the time when all things pointed to higher prices, but there was one load weighing 1440 lbs. that would be hard to beat on any market, and they did not make any money for the drover or dealers handling them, having been bought at too high a price from the farmer. Export steers sold at $5.20 to $5.40, with the best load seen on the market this season, at $5.60. The latter price is no criterion to go by, as there are few like them in the country. Export bulls sold at $4 to $4.50 with now and again one at $4.75 to $5 per cwt.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots sold at $4.85 to $5.15; loads of good, $4.50 to $4.75; medium, $4 to $4.40; common, $3.50 to $4; cows, $3 to $4.25; canners and common cows, $1.50 to $2.50; butcher bulls, $3 to $4.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report very light receipts of feeders and stockers. During the week the Messrs. Murby handled about 120 cattle at the following quotations: Best feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, at $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt.; medium, same weights, $3.60 to $4; stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $2.75 to $3.

Milkers and Springers.

Steady prices were again paid for milkers and springers to-day. Messrs. Tardiff of Quebec and N. Daniel of Montreal being on the market, made prices stronger than they otherwise would have been. Prices ranged from $30 to $60, with two extra quality cows going at $60 each.

Veal Calves.

The market for good vealers was strong. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts have been light all week, with market strong. Export ewes, $4 to $4.50; rams, $3.25 to $3.75; lambs, $5.50 to $6 per cwt. for common and choice grain fed at $6.50 to $7 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quotes selects, $6.75, fed and watered, and $6.50, f.o.b., cars, country points; sows, $4 to $5 per cwt.; stags, $2 to $3 per cwt., as to quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Veals—Receipts, 75 head; active and strong, $7 to $11; a few at $11.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 2800 head; slow and 10c higher; heavy, $6.90 to $6.95; mixed, $6.75 to $6.85; yorkers, $6.40 to $6.75; pigs, $6.25 to $6.35; roughs, $5.60 to $5.90; dairies, $6.25 to $6.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 6000 head; active; lambs and mixed sheep, 5c to 10c higher; lambs, $5 to $7.90; a few $8; sheep, mixed, $2.00 to $5.65.

New York Live Stock.

Calves—Receipts, 11 head; feeling, steady; prime veals, sold at 11c; dressed calves, firm; city dressed veals, selling at 10c to 16½c per lb., country dressed at 8c to 15c; a few at 15½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2620. Feeling, nominally firm. Dressed mutton, steady, at 7c to 10c; dressed lambs, at 11c to 12½c; country dressed hot-house lambs, lower, at $7 to $10 per carcase.

Hogs—Receipts, 1200. Feeling, nominally steady.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Cattle—Receipts, 6000; market strong to 10c higher; steers, $5 to $7; cows, $2.60 to $5.50; heifers, $3.25 to $6; bulls, $3.40 to $5.25; calves, $3.50 to $8.50; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $5.10.

Hogs—Receipts, 18,000; market, 10c to 15c higher; choice heavy, $6.70 to $6.75; butchers, $6.60 to $6.75; light mixed, $6.00 to $6.55; choice light, $6.35 to $6.65; packing, $6.50 to $6.65; pigs, $5.25 to $5.90; bulk of sales, $6.50 to $6.65.

Sheep—Receipts, 11,700; market strong to 10c higher; sheep, $4.25 to $5.75; lambs, $6.50 to $7.80; yearlings, $6 to $7.25.

May Reduce Fine to $720,000.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—U. S. District Judge Anderson broadly intimated yesterday that he will rule that the limit of offence in the Standard Oil rebating case will be the 36th settlements of freight charges.

Under this ruling, if made, a fine of only $720,000 is possible, as compared with Judge Landis' assessment of $29,240,000 in the original case.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

People Waste Power.

Port Arthur, Feb. 26.—Evidence was given at the civic investigation yesterday that one-third the lighting power is wasted by people of the city owing to useless consumption by reason of being on a flat rate. It will likely mean introducing a meter system, which should further reduce rates, which are now the second lowest in Ontario.

Train Crew to Rescue.

St. Thomas, Feb. 26.—A wire from the crew on the Michigan Central train which left here yesterday morning for Courtright says a delay of one hour and fifty minutes was occasioned at Muncey station while the train hands and passengers built a raft and rescued two men and three women from a buggy which was standing in four feet of broken ice and water in the middle of the road.

The water was ten feet deep at the side of the roads.

Young Girl Abused.

St. Thomas, Feb. 26.—Details of an outrage comes from Port Burwell, the victim being the 16-year-old daughter of Norman Selb. She was seized in the village by ruffians in a cutter and driven 14 miles before she escaped. After wandering around till midnight she aroused Mr. Ketchabaw, New England, who notified the police.

Dangerous Highwaymen.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—A street railway employe was tied to a telegraph pole by three men and robbed of his cash. He was leaving the shops at midnight when he was attacked. This was the fourth hold-up in two days. The other three were women, two of whom were so seriously beaten that they had to go to the hospital.

Public Opinion Against War.

Paris, Feb. 26.—Ex-President Loubet is the author of an article published yesterday, maintaining that the world is marching steadily towards a regime of universal peace for the reason that public opinion against war is crystalizing everywhere and will eventually become irresistible.

Would Free Gaynor and Greene.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Senator Bacon of Georgia is behind a bill to parole the Government prisoners, Gaynor and Greene, who were arrested at Quebec and whose subsequent trials were most sensational. Friends especially interested are trying to put the measure through.

Would Regulate Social Evil.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—Recorder Dupuis yesterday, from the bench, delivered a lengthy statement in which he stated that it had to be recognized that the social evil would continue to exist, and, while not in favor of a system of license, he was in favor of regulation.

Appetizing, Isn't It?

New York, Feb. 26.—The Canadian Camp of this city banquets each year in some strange meat.

This year the menu will include devilled boa constrictor and monkeys a la mode.

Sentenced For Graft.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 26.—Failing in his attempt to have the Supreme Court of Massachusetts reverse the verdict of the Superior Court, Isaac Wotten, formerly a member of the Lowell Water Board, must serve six months in the House of Correction, pay a fine of $500 and be disqualified from ever again holding public office.

This sentence was imposed when Wotten was convicted of requesting a gratuity from Charles P. Lynch, who was seeking a position as inspector in the water department of Lowell.

Alberta's Railway Projects.

Edmonton, Feb. 26.—At a session lasting till midnight a practically unanimous vote of the Legislature endorsed the railway policy of the Government as set out in resolutions introduced by Premier Rutherford and accompanied by bills to guarantee the bonds of the C.N.R. and G.T.P. and other branch lines, totalling 1,681 miles and with a guarantee of $27,433,000. Scarcely a corner of the province is left unprovided for, and Alberta will be gridironed with railways.

New Style In Millinery.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—"Get a cabriolet and be in style," is the advice of the National Association of Retail Milliners, which has one on exhibition at its semi-annual opening. It is said to be the very newest of hat confections and partakes of the dominant characteristics of the cab family, yawning in front and flapping at the sides. The Merry Widow, according to those in charge of the opening, is to remain and the tendency in hat extremes is to meet. The missing link is the Dutch bonnet of the mushroom type.

Reciprocity Conference.

Detroit, Feb. 26.—The Detroit Board of Commerce has issued invitations for a Canadian reciprocity conference, to be held in Detroit April 22, 23 and 24. Invitations were sent to civic organizations of St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Chicago, Milwaukee, Toledo, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo and Rochester.

It is pointed out by promoters of the conference that the Canadian preferential tariff law now opens the way for reciprocity if Congress can be induced to take action in the matter.

Peter Hain's Trial.

New York, Feb. 26.—District Attorney Fred C. Dewitt of Queen's County, yesterday notified counsel for Peter C. Hains, jr., charged with the murder of William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club last August, that he would appear in the Supreme Court at Flushing on Monday next and ask that a date be set for the trial. It is believed that when the application is made the defence will ask for the appointment of a commission to enquire into the captain's mental condition.

Brake Was Defective.

Kenora, Feb. 26.—After an inquest on the bodies of Meyers, Goldstein and J. O'Brian of Toronto, killed in the rear-end collision at Ingolf, the jury brought in a verdict that the deaths were due to injuries received in a collision caused by the brake system on the second train being defective. In view of the evidence presented, they exonerated all employes from blame.

Increases For Civil Service.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday morning assured a deputation representing the outside civil service, which included representatives from Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal, that the same treatment would be given to them in the matter of increase in salary as was being extended to the inside service in Ottawa.

Fell Five Storeys.

London, Feb. 26.—Charles Hodgson, 18 years old, son of Mr. W. W. Hodgson, painter, of 143 Maitland street, fell five stories to the basement at Perrin's Biscuit Works into a pile of rubbish, only dislocating one finger.

Refused to Accommodate Negroes.

Brockville, Feb. 26.—The proprietor of the City Hotel at Merrickville refused accommodation to a colored traveling troupe, which was brought there to give concerts under the auspices of the public library board.

Austrian Prince Drowns.

Santa Cruz, Teneriffe, Feb. 26.—Prince Casimir Sapieha-Kodenski of a noted Austrian line was drowned off here on Wednesday. He was heir to great estates in Galicia. Two brothers were rescued.

had felt that Harbert's condemning gaze had never left him. Apparently listening to the others, he found himself wondering what Harbert's trip to Chicago signified. Gradually it dawned upon him that his old time foe was not through with his fighting. The look in Rigby's eyes meant something, after all, and Rigby was Graydon's best friend! Harbert was in Chicago to act—and to act first! This thought shot into the man's brain like burning metal. It set every nerve afire. His Nemesis had already begun his work. Before he left the Cable home that night he would be asking his host and hostess what they knew of one James Bansemer's past.

As Bansemer arose to say good night to the others Harbert's eyes met his with deadly directness.

"Where are your offices, Mr. Bansemer?" asked the New Yorker. There was something significant in the question.

"Mr. Rigby and I have offices in the same building," he replied. "Will you come in and see me?"

"I shall try," said the other.

To have saved his life Bansemer could not meet David Cable's questioning eyes as he shook hands with him. Cable's hands were like ice.

Outside the house, in the whirling gale, the tall lawyer breathed easier, but not securely. His brain was clogged with doubts, fears, prophecies—all whirling like mad around the ominous figure of Denis Harbert.

Suddenly he stopped stockstill, the bitter scowl deepening in his eyes. With an oath he turned abruptly and hurried in the opposite direction. The time had come to make ready for battle. A few minutes later, he was writing the note which created so much commotion in the home of Elias Droom.

CHAPTER XIII.

IT was not until the hurrying Bansemer entered the door of Rector's that the apprehension of having committed a senseless blunder came to him.

"Good heavens!" he muttered, stopping short. "What a fool I'm getting to be—meeting old Elias, in a place like this! The theater crowds—everybody in town will be here by 11! Curse me, for a hopeless ass! I must get him away at once!"

Grumbling at himself, he passed into the restaurant. Gabe offered him the choice of various tables. He selected one which commanded a view of the entrances and ordered a perfunctory "Scotch." Nervous and anxious, he was more troubled than he cared to admit even to himself. Fortunately there were not many people in the cafe, and his gaze wandering about the place soon halted before the small alcove in the east end containing a table with wine glasses, in waiting, set for a large party. The clock, back of the cigar stand, said it was five minutes after 11.

Bansemer impatiently watched the two doors leading to the street and was beginning to wonder whether the message had reached the old clerk when presently the uncouth shape of Droom appeared slinking through the so called ladies' entrance with the shrinking attitude of one unaccustomed to fashionable restaurants and doubtful of his reception. Bansemer motioned to him.

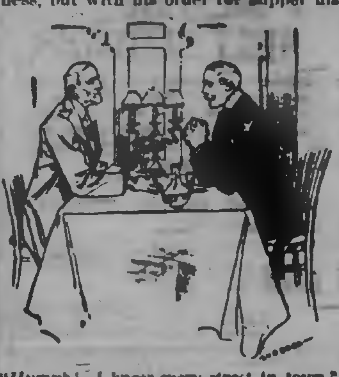
"Just as soon as I can get my check," he was saying, at the same time beckoning to a waiter, "we'll move out of this. It will be crowded in— I never thought, a stall at Chapin & Gore's will be better. Here, waiter, my check! I'm in a hurry! The devil!"

As the exclamation burst from his lips there came down the narrow steps and through a door quickly thrown open by a waiter a number of gay, fashionably dressed people, all smiling and trembling with the cold. Immediately this party attracted the attention of the room. Waiters rushed hither and thither relieving the ladies of their costly lace and fur wraps and the men of their heavy overcoats. Of the expected theater comers these were the first to arrive, but presently others followed, and soon the quiet cafe of the early evening became transformed into one of bustle and excitement by the eager, animated throng. With dismay Bansemer noticed that those to whom his attention had been attracted were blocking his way to the doors. Escape was out of the question. Reluctantly he returned to his seat and ordered the clerk to take the one opposite him. Then scanning the party making its passage to the alcove he perceived three or four men whom he knew and presently, to his surprise and consternation, his son. The recognition was mutual, Graydon making his way around a small table in order to affectionately greet him. As he approached his eyes fastened themselves on his father's companion. With amazement he recognized the queer figure of the lanky, gangling Droom; but, too kind hearted and well bred to allow his features in the slightest degree to express the astonishment which he felt at sight of such a comic incongruity, the young man voiced a few kindly words to the old man, while from the table in the alcove where the smart little supper party were seating themselves Miss Cable was smiling her cheery recognition to her prospective father-in-law; then Graydon made his way back to his seat by her side.

"Why did you come here?" asked Droom, feeling somewhat akin to the proverbial fish out of water.

"Because I thought—I thought you couldn't find any other place," replied Bansemer confusedly.

The unexpected arrival of his son and party had disturbed his usual coolness, but with his order for supper his equilibrium returned, and he went on to explain:



"Humph! I know every street in town."

"I supposed you knew only two streets in town—Wells and South Water."

"Humph! I know every street in town," Droom resented, drawing himself up in his chair, and then bluntly, "What's happened?"

"Not so loud! Harbert's here, but"—

"Oho! Here?"

"In Chicago, yes—we'll talk about it later."

The present genial environment and convivial atmosphere were producing a most inspiriting effect on the lawyer. The delightful consciousness that the people with whom his son was supping were of the smartest set in town for the moment had banished all fears of exposure. From time to time he glanced proudly across to the alcove table where the men were engaged in unfolding their napkins and toying with their glasses, in lively anticipation of the enjoyment to come; while the women, with the hope of eliciting admiration for their hands and the sparkle of their rings, were taking off their gloves and spreading out their fingers on the tablecloth.

"Graydon seems to be right in the swim, eh, Droom?" he said. The irony of it all appealed strongly to his sense of humor. "I don't suppose you know those swells?" he added patronizingly. Droom was listening intently to the bursts of merriment which were enlivening the restaurant. Like a small boy at a circus who fears that something will happen that he will not see, he was continually turning his head and letting his eyes travel critically over the company at the neighboring table.

At this speech of Bansemer's the eyes of the old clerk returned. They expressed no little resentment at the inference.

"Certainly I do," and, leaning over the table and covertly indicating with his long, bony finger the man at the head of the table, he answered succinctly, "That's Fernmore; he's"—

A particularly loud burst of laughter cut him short. At the adjoining tables conversation had abruptly ceased; heads were turned and inquisitive eyes were fastened on the brilliant coterie at the alcove table.

Few men in Chicago were better known or better liked than the stout, florid complexioned, jovial looking Billy Fernmore, the host of this entertainment. His social adventures and the headlong follies in which his fun loving proclivities invariably enmeshed him were only surpassed by his fondness for ridding himself of his unlimited wealth.

Mayor Won't Be Vaccinated.

Kingston, Feb. 26.—At a meeting of the Board of Health, Daniel Couper, mayor of the city, declared that he would not abide by one of the city statutes recently passed. The meeting was held to discuss enforcement of the vaccination bylaw. Dr. Knight, chairman of the board, remarked that Mayor Couper should have the vaccine applied as a good example to other citizens.

"I won't be vaccinated," said Mayor Couper, "and I'll knock down the doctor who attempts it."

Aliens Barred.

TWO WEDDINGS AT HAVELOCK

Cupid Has Been Busy at the Railroad Town

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Feb 25—The marriage of Miss Edna Josephine Denike, to Mr. Norman Stubbs of Ottawa took place on Wednesday evening of last week at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr James A. Denike, Union St. Rev D. Balfour officiated, only the immediate friends of the contracting parties being present. The young couple, who were unattended, are both well known in town. Mrs. Stibbs has resided in Havelock for the past three years, while Mr Stibbs for some time was engaged on the CPR. here but two years ago was transferred to Ottawa.

The many friends of the young couple in town will join in wishing them a very happy married life.

McINTYRE—BURNEY

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday morning at the residence of Mrs. M. Burney, George St, when her daughter Alice Ethel, was united in marriage to Mr Campbell McIntyre, of Moosejaw, Sask, but formerly of this town, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J A G Stirling.

The young couple who have both resided in town until recently. Mr. McIntyre, went west, left on Wednesday afternoon for a short honeymoon with friends in Toronto and Hamilton.

On returning from their honeymoon they will spend a short time in Havelock and then leave for Moosejaw, where they will reside.

BAND at Street Railway Rink TO-NIGHT.

"FLORADORA" AT THE GRAND

A satisfactory production of "Florodora" was given by the Imperial Opera Company at the Grand last night. It was the first opportunity the theatregoers of Peterborough had of seeing Leslie Stuart's popular comic opera with its wonderfully tuneful sextette number "Tell Me Pretty Maiden." This selection was sung in a captivating way by the double sextette and was easily the musical feature of the piece.

"The Shades of the Palm," "Dolores," "Tact," and "The Queen of the Philippine Isles," were amongst the most cordially received songs. The presenting company was a large one and the chorus was large and capable.

Miss Agnes Cain-Brown was attractive and clever as "Dolores" and Harry Girard made a hit as "Frank Aberwed." Herbert Salinger infused considerable comedy into the role of "Tweedlepunch," his violin specialty provoking a great deal of mirth and applause.

"45 Minutes From Broadway"

Not to permit the interest of your auditors to flag even for a moment is the creed of George M. Cohan, whose greatest and most successful piece "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" direction of Cohan and Harris is to be presented at the Grand next Wednesday, March 3rd. In following out this idea the remarkably successful young actor, author, composer has made it a point to evolve a plot which shall maintain the theatregoers interest and suspense in the unfolding of the story, and in the interim when the interpolated songs like "Mary is a Grand Old Name," and "So long, Mary," interrupt the action of the piece to have the principal and chorus who are assisting in the rendition of the song always in motion. In this way he always has his adherents following the happenings on the stage with the keenest interest and either wildly applauding some witty saying or demanding an encore for some particularly tuneful and melodious song. For "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," (the action of the piece takes place at New Rochelle, NY, which is just three-quarters of an hour's ride from New York City) he has personally selected not only a thoroughly competent acting company headed by Scott Welsh as "Kid Burns," the ex-slangy prize fighter, whose fame as an actor and a singer on both the variety and regular stages has become national in character, and Frances Gordon as "Plain Mary" but an organization that can really sing and dance. They are all real actors and actresses and that means that the play is interpreted in the right manner and not marred in the presentation as so often happens in musical plays.

Not the Author

Peterborough, Ont., Feb. 25.

Dear Sir.—In your issue of the 20th inst. there appeared a letter signed "Anti-Cant." I was rather surprised this morning on being informed that I was being credited with being the author of this letter. I shall just ask permission to intrude sufficiently on your valuable space to say that I have had no part in this matter nor have I anything to do with regard to the controversy over "Salome," and therefore I do not wish to be credited with what does not belong to me.

I might say in conclusion, however, if the motive and desire of the writers has been to reflect the meaning of "Salome," which is according to Cruden, peaceable, perfect, or that rewards, good may result from the controversy.

With thanks.

Sincerely yours,

R. J. TODD.

To-morrow Ends the February

"Mark Down" Sale

Twenty-five Days of Bargains—Saturday the Last

This month has been undoubtedly the winner for the "Mark Down" Sale. The weather and times gave way and allowed us to bring the month up to its standard of last year. Our patrons will remember the February "Mark Down" Sale with Satisfaction and will watch each year for this Annual Selling Event.

Saturday is the last of the Twenty-five days, and we intend to offer such values as will create a stir worthy of this store. Note the following four items and watch the windows.

LEEDS CHORAL UNION MAY VISIT CANADA

The members of the Leeds Choral Union who held their final rehearsal of Elgar's "King Olaf" on Monday night at the Philosophical Hall, received a surprise visit from Dr. Chas. Harriss, of Ottawa, who recently organized the trip of the Sheffield chorus to Canada, and who had travelled specially from Glasgow to hear the Choral union sing. Dr Harriss, in the course of a short speech said that if the Leeds choir could see their way to organize a Canadian trip he would do all he could to make it a success. This sentiment, says the Yorkshire Post, was rapturously applauded by the members of the choir. — London Canadian Gazette.

OBITUARY

MRS. A. MORROW

The death occurred at Nicholls hospital at noon today of Mrs. Alexander Morrow, a lady who had many friends here. She was a native of England, her maiden name being Mary Watson. She formerly resided in Barrie and was seventy-four years of age. She was a member of George street Methodist church and took an active part in missionary work and also in the Y.W.C.A. Bright's disease was the cause of death.

The funeral service will be held on Sunday evening at 8.15 at the residence of Mrs W. J. Mason, 60 Murray street and the remains will be taken to Barrie for interment on Monday morning.

Sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary for one evening without judge, jury, inconvenience, loss of time or loss of reputation. Hear Rev. Alfred E. Lowell, B. A., in George Street Church lecture room, Monday evening, March 1st.—10cts.

FIRE TEAM TOOK A SHORT DASH

The fire team after returning from being abod became a little frisky on Aylmer street and got away from the driver. They made a dash for the fire hall, which was only a hundred yards or so distant and stopped in front of it. The team was not attached to any vehicle and the driver lost his footing on the slippery ice.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT BETHANY

Special meetings in Bethany Tabernacle opened last evening. Rev Jas. Lyall of London, England, whose ministry in the Gospel Tabernacle, in New York, a few weeks ago was so blessed in the starting of a revival which is still going on, gave his opening address last evening to an attentive audience. The message was taken from the incident recorded in Luke 5; 4, 5, the failure of the disciples to catch any fish, and the success which followed their obedience to Christ's command. The disappointed disciples confessed that they had toiled all night but had caught nothing; however at the command of Jesus to "launch out into the deep and let down your nets," Simon said "nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net," the result being a great draught of fish.

The speaker said that in the work of the churches throughout Great Britain and America, there is a sad failure in our day to reach and save the masses of the people. The cure recommended for this inability and failure is that Christians should "launch out into the deep."

First, "into the deep" of a better Christian experience.

The majority of Christians in these days are starvlings. They have barely enough to keep their own lives going and the greatest need is a fuller, richer life for the Christian himself.

In the second place, "into a deeper prayer life."

The materialism of the age has ceased to believe that prayers are answered. May not this be the reason why in spite of all our machinery, we have such little result of our toil. God gives nothing in His work that is not prayed down.

In the third place, the church needs "launch out into the deep," in aggressive for the reaching of the lost. In many instances we seem to have gone into "Kippering," rather than fishing. Large numbers of Christians are wailing out "my leanness, my leanness," where they ought to call out "my laziness, my laziness."

The speaker said finally, "the great need of the church, is power, the power of the Divine Spirit," without which nothing can be accomplished or hoped for." God wants "channels," through which He can manifest His power and grace, and those who use faithfully what God gives, shall receive more abundantly.

Mr. Lyall spoke again this afternoon, and will speak this evening, and tomorrow and Sunday. On Saturday and Sunday, the Rev Dr Zimmerman, a former pastor of Bethany Tabernacle will also be present and assist in the meetings.

WILL SING AT THE "CRYSTAL"

FRED SIMPSON
Holder of the world's indoor record for 5 and 10 miles. He will sing at the Crystal on Saturday afternoon.

SPORTING NEWS

KNOX AND ST. ANDREWS WERE WINNERS LAST NIGHT

The senior church league games at Brock street rink last night proved to be the most exciting that have been played this season. Some good, fast and clean hockey was dashed up by the teams and the large number of fans were surprised at the showing George street and Park street made. Neither of these teams have won a game in the league and it was expected that Knox church and St Andrew's would have little trouble in piling up a big score in their games, but the tail enders put up a big fight and it was not until the bell sounded that the Presbyterians felt sure of a victory.

FIRST GAME

Knox church and George street lined up for the first game and it was easily the fastest and most exciting of the two.

Both teams were short a man when the game started, so that there was lots of room for individual work, at whic' George street had a slight advantage The Methodists have never played the same team twice, and have always relied on one man rushes which is mainly responsible for them being at the bottom of the heap. The Presbyterians on the other hand play a good combination but they were checked too hard last night to get it going with any success. They did not seem to be at home on the large rink while George street have always practised there, put up their best game this season. The score at half time was 2-2 with the Methodists having the best of the play.

After the resting period, Knox church who were beginning to feel that they were up against it, began to mix things up a bit, but George street were going strong and after a few minutes fast playing, put one past Crowe.

The pace was becoming too fast and George street began to fade away.

Galley secured the puck from a mix-up and put one past Armstrong, which tied the score, much to the delight of Knox church rooters.

With only a few minutes to play Barclay secured the puck and after a fine exhibition of stick handling, put his team ahead by a pretty shot from the side.

George street were working hard but could not score and the game ended 4-3 with Knox church wearing all the smiles.

Referee Jim Squires had an easy time and kept the teams playing all the time.

The line-up was;

GEORGE STREET—
Goal—Armstrong.
Point—Best.
Cover—Curtis.
Centre—Tisdale.
Right—Godfrey.
Left—Sanderson.

KNOX CHURCH.
Goal—Crowe.

SECOND GAME

St. Andrew's and Park street put up a good exhibition in the second game. A win for the Baptists would have lessened the chances of winning the championship for St Andrew's, but although Park street worked hard, they had no system, and this was mainly responsible for their defeat. On the other hand St Andrew's played a good combination and rushed well and although they were a little off color in shooting, by half time had managed to put one past Killenbeck while Park street could not score.

In the second half the play became faster and Park street had numerous chances for counters, but failed to take advantage of them.

The checking became hard and close and neither teams could get away on many dangerous rushes, although the Presbyterians had the best of it and should have scored. Finally just before the finish Flanagan scored on a nice shot, making the score 2-0, and the game ended with both teams playing hard.

COLLEGIATE BY SINGLE GOAL

Won Close Match From Rough Riders Last Night

The old Rough Riders and the Collegiate put up a fast game of hockey from five to six in Brock street rink last evening. Both teams had strong sevens and the big crowd that was present thoroughly enjoyed the contest. Neither team was able to score in the first half although both nets had close calls. In the second half the Collegiates had a shade the better of the argument and Fortye scored the only tally of the game with a close shot. Brown, of Belleville, refereed and gave good satisfaction.

AUBURNS BEAT BRIDGENORTH

Were Ahead by 6-5 at the Finish and 2-0 at Half Time

The Auburns defeated the Bridgenorth outfit last night by the score of 4—3. Bill Shaw's Pets led at half time by 2—0 but Mike Belleghem's stars got busy and in the second half scored three goals to the Pet's one, and but for the good work of Lilly in goal would have gone home with a win.

Leo Derocher refereed and the teams were;—

RUNNING

Look out, Mr. Onondaga Longboat!

The Ojibway, Simpson, will lift your scalp if you are not a very careful young man.

Yes, he will!

He ran ten miles in 52.30.

That is faster than Tommy Longboat ever galloped 10 miles in his life Longboat's best time for ten miles was 54.50, made in Hamilton, Christmas, 1907, the day he beat W. F. Cumming by 100 yards after running neck-and-neck with him all the way.

The Ojibway's time last night at Riverdale breaks George Adam's much-disputed but properly authenticated 54.59, made outdoors at the Martin Electric road race at St. Kitts, Jan. 1, 1907. It cuts .29 from Adams' record.

Dorando's 10-mile time at Buffalo, the time he and Longboat ran that ding-dong 12 1-2 miles — the race where the Italian quit at 18 miles was 56.31 1-5, and was the American indoor "pro" record. What Simpson did to this was shameful.

A GREAT RUNNER.

Simpson is a real runner now. When people around here heard what Tom Eck had to say about Simpson's wonderful doings they swallowed the tales with salt.

Those who saw Simpson perform will believe them now. Simpson ran like a cyclone. He was on his toes all the way. There was no more of this lazy loafing around in the first few miles that the Ojibway used to indulge in. He went away from the mark like a shot, and was so gingery that Tom Eck had to steady him down. He did not go steadily all the way, but finished like a sprinter.

He did the 5 miles in 25.35. Because of the irregular shape of the track—it was 117 laps 324 feet to the 10 miles by a re-measurement—it was impossible to accurately time the intermediate miles.

Just to show how fast he was going Simpson went on and did the 120 laps—the track was always supposed to be a 12-lap track—in 53.44.

THE TIMEKEEPERS.

The time is vouched for by Tom Flanagan, J. J. McCaffery, P. J. Mulqueen and C. W. Smith. The track was re-measured before the race by Tom Flanagan and was found long, so Simpson ran 117 laps 324 feet, the exact 10 miles.

CONSISTENT TRAINING.

Simpson is an example of a runner who is benefitted by consistent training and relaxation from work. When Simpson is at home he is a farmer-fisherman, guide, hunter, and everything else. When he wants to go to Peterborough, 14 miles away, he runs in. The result was that he grew stiff and lazy in his running. He never forced himself in these Hiawatha to Peterborough stunts, and so became accustomed to a slow pace. Eck has taken this out of him by giving him short distances and chasing him hard all the way. The result is that Simpson has gathered speed and saved his reserve.

"Any surveyor in town is welcome to go over the track and test the measurements, said Tom Eck this morning. when some doubter gave him an argument. "I tell you Simpson is a wonder, and could have gone on and smashed Fred Appleby's world's record time of 1.22 something, if I had said so."

Simpson left thi smorning for a short visit to his wife and family at Hiawatha.

PLAY LAKEFIELD THIS EVENING

The Strathconas will play the second game of the series with Lakefield in that village tonight. Word has been received that the ice is in good condition and great interest is being taken in the game. Both teams will have on their strongest lineup and the fans in clear water town will see a fast exhibition of hockey. The ex-champions have a lead of three goals and are confident of holding their own against the cup holders.

The bus leaves the Post Office at 6.30, and everybody interested is asked to be on hand in good time.

W J Corlock, superintendent of dredging for the Maritime provinces is dead at St John, aged 73.

CURLING

There were eight rinks at the curling rink last night. This was the first game since the mild weather set in and Mr McIntosh had the ice in splendid shape. There were two very good games one was between Skip T F Matthews rink 14. and Skip W G Ferguson 13. The score at the end of the game was 13 and the 13th end had to be played. As 13 is Mr. Matthews' favorite number, he was the victor and got the end shot, making the score 13-14. The other game was between Skip Medd and Skip D Hall. There were 12 ends played and only a total of 13 shots made, making it a very close contest all through although Mr Medd won by a score of 9-4.

The scores were:

Tried to Stab Detective.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—When Antoine Grossie, 37 years of age, living at 307 Manning avenue, was seized by Store Detective Black, in Eaton's, for shoplifting, he pulled a knife and tried to stab the officer. After a tussle he was disarmed and arrested.

Tariff For Revenue Only.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The Democratic Senators are going to be divided when the tariff bill reaches them next session as to the best policy to be pursued. They are a unit on the general principle that the tariff should be based on the demands of the Government for revenue, rather than on protection.

Chatham Is In Darkness.

Chatham, Feb. 24.—The City Council have decided to advertise for tenders for the installation of either a magnetite or an alternating system at the local civic electric light plant.

The dynamos at the local plant all went to pieces a few days ago, and Chatham is now in darkness every night.

May Be Earl of Dudley.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—It is unofficially stated here that the Earl of Dudley may succeed Earl Grey as Governor-General of Canada when the latter's term expires next fall. In official circles there is no confirmation of the rumor, although Earl Dudley's appointment is considered as a probability.

Toronto Men Killed.

Winnipeg, Feb. 24.—Two men were killed and one seriously injured in a freight wreck early yesterday on the C.P.R. main line at Ingolf, 90 miles east of here.

Won't Offend Germany.

London, Feb. 26.—The anxiety of the Government not to give offence to Germany is reflected in the decision of the censor of plays, who has refused to sanction the production of a five-minute playlet, consisting of a burlesque of "An Englishman's Home." The humor of the piece turns on the discovery that a large alien population has been in possession of Great Britain for some years.

Brakeman Blown From Car.

Cornwall, Feb. 26.—At an early hour yesterday morning Charles Sams of Brockville, a brakeman on a westbound freight train fell off the train near Summerstown, and was instantly killed. He was not missed till the train had run several miles.

He was apparently blown off the top of a car. He was a large, powerful man, about 45 years of age and leaves a large family.

Theatre In a Church.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 26.—The Universalist Church, one of the largest in the city, is now about to establish its own theatre and its own plays. The movement was begun by the pastor, Rev. B. Dean Ellenwood. "The Servant in the House," will be presented first. The whole ground floor of the church is being converted into a theatre with stage, curtain, footlights, scenery, and all.

Stewart Goes to Asylum.

Hamilton, Feb. 26.—George Stewart, who killed the two Spanhouses in Melancthon Township, will be committed to the Hamilton Asylum. The reports as to his violence, the authorities claim, were much exaggerated, and "beyond violently attacking the bars of his cell and demanding freedom, Stewart has given no trouble." This was a special report made to the Department.

Floods In Essex.

Windsor, Feb. 26.—The centre portion of Essex County is badly flooded and the W. E. & L. S. Railway, and also the Windsor & Tecumseh Electric Railroad are experiencing difficulty owing to the tracks being flooded with water at many points. The land in this vicinity is quite flat and the heavy rains and recent thaw has caused the trouble.

Pelletier Party Safe.

Winnipeg, Feb. 26.—Inspector Pelletier and the party of the Northwest Mounted Police, who were thought to have been lost in the northern wilds, arrived in Churchill safe and well in January, according to word just received here.

A team hitched to a bus in Kingston ran away and the horses were killed and the passengers had a narrow escape.

Shrubb Beats Dorando.

HAVELOCK

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Feb. 25.—An installation of Havelock Lodge, A.F. & A.M., took place on Monday night by Wor. Bro. Elias Williams. The following officers were installed;—

J.P.M.—Wor. Bro. W. W. Herrington.
W.M.—Wor. Bro. Jas. R. Beatty.
J.W.—Wor. Bro. John H. Boylan.
J.W.—Peter Haig.
Chaplain—W. B. Ritchie.
Treas.—H. W. Roche.
Secy.—Ward Patterson.
S.D.—Wm. Mathison.
J.D.—Art. Mathison.
D. of C.—Jas. Knox.
Stewards—G. Dart and John Howe.
Organist—Henry Pacy.
I.G.—Jas. Scott.
Tyler—J. H. Belleghem.

Mr. John McLaren of Lanark, formerly of the Sovereign Bank staff here, was in town on Thursday and Friday last.

Miss Hunter, who has been the guest of Miss Stella Armstrong, has returned to her home in Lakefield.

Mr. Bryce of Peterborough, was in town on Wednesday.

Messrs. A. Curry and A. Rose were in Campbellford on Thursday.

Miss Bessie Rose was in Lindsay on Tuesday.

Mr. E. Gladney of Marmora, spent Sunday with friends here.

Miss Hampton has returned to her home in Belleville after visiting with Mrs. A. E. Barrett.

The final touch was put on the filling of Swift & Co's ice house here this week when the whole top of the ice was covered with marsh hay so as to preserve it. It took about three weeks to fill the ice house this year, about 20 men being employed. The ice this year is of an excellent quality and should be a good keeper. The ice is not packed tightly together but separated, and about every third tier is made tight to bind it. The last layer is packed very tight to exclude all air and marsh hay is placed upon it. The doorways are packed with sawdust and the congealed moisture is in proper condition to keep through the summer months until needed.

Reeve Knox, of town, and Russel, of Belmont, accompanied the deputation from the County Council to Ottawa to as kaid from the Government for new bridges.

Mr. W. B. Ritchie has returned from a business trip to Montreal.

Mrs. Weir of Norwood, was in town on Monday last.

An exceptionally good programme greeted the audience of the Presbyterian concert in the opera house on Monday night and the people of town seem to have acknowledged the treat by coming out in such large numbers that the receipts amounted to over $80.00. The excellent readings of Miss Toint of Belleville, delighted the audience, as well as a one-act comedy by local talent. Master Stanley McGuire, of Toronto, Miss Jean Robson, of Norwood; Miss Tuck, of Peterborough; Miss B. Rose and Dr. Kindred, of town, were heard to good advantage in solo numbers as was Miss Flo Howe in an instrumental solo. A very catchy chorus by several local artists was well received. Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., of town, acted as chairman. The members of the Ladies' Aid under whose auspices the concert was held, are highly praised.

Companion Court Princess of Wales I.O.F., held a very successful concert and supper in the opera house on Tuesday evening last. Local artists gave an excellent programme afterwhich an oyster supper was served in the basement and dancing indulged in the rest of the evening.

A number of young people from Norwood attended the concert in the opera house on Monday night.

Miss Flegg has returned to her home in Smith's Falls, after visiting Miss Loretta Bennett.

Rev. Mr. Holdsworth of Roseneath preached to large congregations in St. John's church on Sunday last at both morning and evening services.

Mr. Fred. Linton, of Campbellford, was in town on Sunday.

Mr. F. J. Squires is having the brick wall that was torn down by the wind some time ago replaced.

Mr. G. A. Ghent represented St. John's church at the recent Synod meeting in Toronto, when a bishop was selected.

M. C. Smith a rancher near Pincher Creek fell from a train near Fernie and was killed.

THE REVIEW CONTEST HAS THE WHOLE COUNTY GOING

Fine Work Being Done in All Lists—Late Entrants Making Great Strides—New Leaders in Both City Divisions — Another Busy Day.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

Any one of a dozen in the list look like sure winners to their friends and this insures a hard fought battle to the finish. The list contains but few weak candidates. Anyone at the bottom today may be seen at the top tomorrow;

The leaders today;—

HIGH VOTE

Miss Rose P. Moore.

FIRSTS

Miss Rose P. Moore.
Miss Maude Adams.
Sidney A. Smithson.
Herb McMillan

SECONDS

Miss Birdie Dawson.
Miss Lila Finlay.
W. G. Rundle.
P. G. Towns.

The score published yesterday showed a gain of 55,000 over the day before. After such a shower of votes there is generally a lull. Therefore the heavy voting of yesterday came as a surprise, 40,000 votes being added to the scores of the various candidates.

District No 1, has new leaders in both divisions today. Miss Adams has first place, 700 votes ahead of Miss Dawson. Miss Perry is a strong third. Mrs W A Jones was the heaviest individual voter in this list, passing the 10,000 mark.

Herb McMillan who entered the contest on Monday is now leading the men's list in the city. The race is on in earnest among the city men, and the "going" will be watched with interest.

Miss Moore increased her lead in first place, although there are little more than 2000 votes separating the county and the city. Miss Lila Finlay moves back into second place in District No 2, replacing Miss Holcombe.

The contest is warming up immensely in the men's list in the country. A week ago,— outside of the excellent work being done by Mr Smithson—it was so quiet in this list one could hear a pin drop a block away. It is different now. First Mr Strickland got busy. Then Mr Towns came into the contest and in less than a week stepped into second place, and is making a serious onslaught on first place. Mr Towns voted exactly 10,500 since yesterday. Bert Cunningham also improved his score.

To win this contest isn't going to cost you any money. It is going to demand that you give it a little time and attention. The majority of people can see practically all of their friends within a period of three weeks. That is why it is not too late to go after the prizes in earnest. Get everybody who is interested in you and anxious for your success to get out and do something for you. Make all your intimate friends pledge you so many votes in addition to their own subscription. You are going to need every vote you can land and you are going to need the help of every friend you have. It will be the ones who fully realise this and are governed accordingly who will win the trip abroad or wear these diamond rings and watches.

When you ask for a subscription to the Review do not lose sight of the fact that they are getting full value for their money. Candidates are doing the propective subscriber a real favor by putting the best newspaper in Peterborough and vicinity in his home, and he will soon be made aware of that. You get them and the Review will hold them.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number scheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD HELD REGULAR MEETING

A special general meeting of the Separate School Board was held last evening, there being present, Mr. Hickey chairman, presiding, and Messrs Carveth, Lynch, Burns, Collins, Primeau, Goselin and Murty. Rev. Father McColl, Superintendent of Schools was also in attendance.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were received from the Kearns Ink Co., The American Penman and the E. A. Meyer Co., and from the principals of the several schools asking for supplies; from Miss O'Connell asking to be appointed on the Board of Entrance Examiners.

On motion of Mr. Murty, seconded by Mr Collins, Miss O'Connell was appointed associate examiner on the Board for the Entrance Examinations.

ATTENDANCE.

Reports of attendance for January;—[illegible]

St. Peter's school—On roll, 285; average 246.

Sacred Heart School—On roll, 214; average 219.

Total on roll 760; total ave., 645.

ACCOUNTS.

Accounts were received from;—The Peterborough Typewriter Co. $20.00; W. E. Blake & Son, $10.38; M. McFadden, $6.00; Peterborough Fuel & Cartage Co., $6.50; A. H. Stratton & Co., $16.79; L. Mowry, $2.00; W. Stocker, $1.50; Garden Printery, $2.50.

These were referred to the Finance Committee.

It was moved by Mr. Lynch, seconded by Mr. Carveth, that the City Council be requested to collect eight thousand six hundred and thirty-three dollars as taxes for the current year and that the request formerly submitted be cancelled.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

PETERBOROUGH MAN HAS AN ACCIDENT AT LINDSAY

Lindsay, Feb. 25.—Mr. Wm. Crowley, an employee of the Machine Telephone Co. fell from the top of a twenty-five foot pole this morning between nine and ten o'clock and dislocated his knee.

Mr. Crowley lives in Peterborough, and is a nephew of Mr. Wm. Crowley the well-known cattle dealer in Downeyville. He came to Lindsay from Peterborough on Friday last and commenced to work for the Machine Co. putting up wires for their system which it is expected will be completed this summer.

The accident occurred at the corner of Elgin and William streets, while Crowley was at the top of the pole. He did not have his strap on but had a rope around himself and around the messenger wire that he was stringing. The cause of the accident was due to a guy wire which broke and as it connected this pole to another near by, the sudden jar when the guy wire broke knocked Crowley off the pole, and he fell to the hard ground below, dislocating his knee. He tried to hold on with his spurs, but the jar was too great and he had to go. He did not come down very fast as the rope that he had around his body and around the messenger wire held him back. Had it not been for the rope around his body he might have been killed as he would have fallen the twenty-five feet to the hard ground below, without anything to check the fall.

Mr. Crowley will be confined to his room for some weeks, and will go to his home in Peterborough as soon as he is able to get around again.

SEED FAIR WILL BE HELD IN PETERBOROUGH NEXT YEAR

Arrangements are being made for holding a seed fair in Peterborough early next winter. It will be held under the auspices of the Agricultural Society which will co-operate with the Government. The object of the seed fair is to encourage farmers to grow better and cleaner grain and seed.

Seed fairs are annual events in many towns and cities in the Dominion.

YOUNG MAN'S PLUCKY WORK IN STOPPING RUNAWAY TEAM

A young man named Roy Kingsbury an employee of the Best Stove Company did a plucky piece of work in stopping a runaway team on George street at noon today. The team belonged to R Hicks and Company and behind them was a sleigh loaded with coal. They started to run away near Smith street and came down George street at a lively clip. In front of the YMCA. Mr Kingsbury, by standing in the road, was able to get the team to slacken their speed and as the sleigh passed he jumped on. The lines were flying loose around the whiffle-trees but the young man reached over near the horses' heels picked them up and got the animals to a standstill near Cox's butcher shop. It was a clever bit of work.

The damage was very little. Some coal was spilled along the street.

Talk of Appeal.

Simcoe, Feb. 26.—Although Malone's lawyer has announced an intention of appealing to a higher court to quash the conviction and the life sentence imposed on Wednesday on the ex-chief of police, it is not believed that this step will be taken.

Provincial Detective Miller left for Toronto yesterday, after having spent the last three weeks in preparing the crown's case. So thoroughly was this done that he had secured actual measurements of the town, that assisted materially in the work of the prosecutor.

Insane Woman Threatens Mayor.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 26. Declaring that she would kill Mayor Reyburn unless he gave her $9 to pay her fare to Buffalo, an insane woman yesterday afternoon created a disturbance in the City Hall.

Churches to Pay Taxes.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 26.—The City Council yesterday decided that churches must pay taxes on 25 per cent. of assessment. In recent years churches have been exempt.

Conservation Conference.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—Hon. Sydney Fisher, who has been in Washington for a week as member of the Canadian Commons to the International Conservation Conference, was in the city yesterday on the way to Ottawa.

He stated that it would be impossible to say anything about the conclusions of the conference, which was a round table affair behind closed doors, until its recommendations had been transmitted to the Government and to His Excellency, the Governor-General. He expected to perform that duty immediately, and it was possible that the recommendations would be available for publication to-day. In Washington, the President was transmitting them to Congress with a special letter, and the same course would be pursued by the representatives of Newfoundland and Mexico.

Public Ownership Pays.

Belleville, Feb. 26.—The Belleville waterworks, a municipal enterprise, made a gross profit last year of $15,973, and net profit, after paying all interest and sinking fund, of $4,822. There are 1,620 services, of which 94 were installed last year.

"Busy Man's" For March

The March number of Busy Man's Magazine is filled with an unusually choice number of bright and entertaining articles which cannot fail to be of great help and benefit to all its readers. Each succeeding issue is evidently more instructive and attractive than its predecessor and affords a wider selection in the effort to cater to the taste of all classes. The contributions dealing with System and Business, Political and Commercial Affairs, the Life Life Stories of Successful People and clever fiction, as well as many other good things, is evidenced by a glance at the table of contents. The original sketches and the selections from the leading magazines and periodicals of the world are all handsomely illustrated. The range of subjects may be guaged by the character of the titles. Among the latter are "Revolutionizing an Industry," "The Virtue of Thrift," "Who Owns the United States," "The Romance of the Rothschilds" "From Apprentice to Baronet." Jim Hill as a Cain Raiser

(Kaslo Kootenian.)

With a great blare of trumpets and bang of cymbals the Vancouver press has announced that Jim Hill is going to connect up a number of stray railroad links from Galveston to Vancouver, put on a five day passenger service between these cities and make the latter a cotton export point. Oh, yes. Jim Hill is always going to raise Cain. It is Jim Hill who is always planning to put on a limited train between St. Paul and the Pacific Coast that will knock all existing speed records into a cocked hat. It is Jim Hill who is going to collar the trans-Pacific trade with a huge fleet of oceangoing steamships. Some years ago when the Kaslo & Slocan Railway as added to the Great Northern, it was predicted that the line would be standard gauged and extended from Sandon to Slocan City by way of New Denver and Silverton. The projected programme was not only not carried out but the original Kaslo & Slocan has been lopped in two and the service cut down to tri-weekly. Yet it was Jim Hill who was going to make a great line for traffic between the Kootenays and Spokane, out of the Kootenay Valley line, extending from Bonner's Ferry to Kootenay Landing. The service on that is now a tri-weekly one also. Jim Hill was going to push the V. V. & E. through to the coast in record order and smash all existing freight rates to Gehenna, open up the Similkameen and develop the country thereabouts. Just now the people of that neighborhood are wondering whether the crack of doom or the V. V. & E. will come along first, but are now beginning to suspect that it will be the former.

DAMAGE CLAIMS WERE NOT GRANTED BY THE COMMITTEE

A meeting of the Legal Committee was held last night when several claims for damages were considered.

Those present were;—Ald. Turner, chairman; Ald. Duffus and Ald. Metheral and Mayor Rush.

The first claim taken up was that of John Holland, who had paid taxes on a lot for three years, 1906, '07, '08. The lot is on Inverlea street and has a frontage of 45 feet while he only owns 37 feet. He asked to have the overcharge refunded and the assessment fixed for this year.

The matter was reported on by the solicitor, Mr. Hall, who stated that the city could not refund the taxes. Mr. Holland should have gone to the court of appeal and when he did not it must be presumed that he was satisfied with the assessment.

On motion of Ald. Metheral and Ald. Duffus, no action was taken.

The next claim was that of Wm. Stock & Son, one of whose drivers met with an accident. The horse and rig through the formation of the road, was participated into the ditch. The horse was injured and the rig damaged.

The city engineer reported that the horse was not tied and the driver left it not under control. Street Commissioner Fitzgerald saw the accident and stated that it was negligence on the part of the driver.

In face of this report the city solicitor stated that there was no claim for damages.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and Ald. Metheral no action was taken on the strength of the report of the engineer and upon the advice of the city solicitor.

The claim of Mrs. Meehan, of George street, was next taken up. Mrs. Meehan fell into a grating and was injured last fall. The grating into which the lady fell was over a cellar window, and Mr. Overend, who owned the building, had not had the grates put in. The areas were narrow and close up to the building and were not considered dangerous.

On motion the Council will be recommended to give the committee authority to settle.

In reference to Mr. Kennedy's claim for damages for his accident through falling on the sidewalk in front of the Review Office, it was decided that the city was not liable and no action was taken.

Police Constable Adams' claim for $20 was again mentioned, but the committee previously decided that no action should be taken. The city solicitor was also to look into the matter further but he said that he had nothing more to add.

The committee therefore decided to stay by their original recommendation and if Constable Adams wishes to press for the money the city would make a test case of it.

OMISSION OF WORD CAUSED ARGUMENT

Douro Election Protest Came up Before Judge Weller This Morning — Mr. Peck's Objections — Hearing Resumed This Afternoon.

"In the County Court of the County of Peterborough, province of Ontario, County of Peterborough.

Be it remembered that on the 13th day of February AD 1909, before one Charles Alexander Weller, Judge of the County Court of the County of Peterborough cometh Dennis Moloney of the township of Douro in the said County of Peterborough farmer, and John P. Leahy of the said township, farmer, and Daniel Moloney, and acknowledged themselves severally and respectively to our Sovereign Lord, the King, as follows, that is to say, the said Dennis Moloney, the sum of two hundred dollars and the said John P. Leahy and Daniel Moloney the sum of one hundred dollars (each)—the word each was left out of the recognizance by the stenographer who wrote from the draft prepared.

That little word being omitted was the cause of an objection by Mr. E. A. Peck, the counsel for Mr Daniel Moher, reeve of Douro, in the protest of the election for reeveship of that township, the protest being made by Mr Dennis Moloney, Mr Moher's opponent.

The hearing in connection with the protest opened this morning at 11 o'clock in the county council chambers before His Honor Judge Weller. Deep interest has been taken in the matter by the ratepayers throughout the county and especially in Douro, and a very large audience of interested spectators was in attendance. None of the evidence was taken however, the entire morning being devoted to the consideration of the objections of Mr Peck on what he considered irregularities and the contra arguments of Mr. R. F. McWilliams, who appeared on behalf of the relator. His Honor, after hearing both decided to go on with the case subject to the objections and it was enlarged until 2.30 this afternoon.

MR. PECK'S OBJECTIONS

Mr. Peck said he had exceptions to make to the proceedings. The notice of motion did not contain sufficient particulars, he said, on the grounds on which the relator proposed to take exception to the election.

It was simply stated that Mr Moher himself or through his agents had been guilty of bribery at the municipal elections in Douro.

Mr Peck submitted grounds of complaint were entirely too indefinite. Particulars should have been given the defendant in connection with the charges. The statutes call for the defendant in any case being given the definite grounds on which a charge is laid a reasonable time before the charge is brought to court. It is not sufficient to state in a general way that a party has been guilty of bribery and definite particulars of the charge should have been given the defendant in the present instance.

His Honor wanted to know if there was any rule if called for the giving of particulars. Mr Peck thought there was and said it was the regular method of procedure to do so.

"The notice of motion," said Mr. Peck, "is not framed in accordance with the act."

He read the special section of the act to bear out his contention in this respect. It read that it should state specifically all the grounds of objection.

His Honor asked if the grounds had not been specifically stated.

Mr. Peck said with the indefinite information to hand it had made it impossible for him to be prepared for cross examination or for getting ready his defence.

"I really feel insecure on going to trial where such meagre particulars are disclosed," said Mr Peck. "I have two other objections to make which refer to the matter as a whole and on these other grounds I will ask your honor to dismiss the charge altogether. I submit that the material submitted to your honor does not disclose sufficient grounds for holding that the election was not legal."

Mr. Peck submitted that except for two clauses the affidavit of Mr Moloney was based simply on grounds of belief and was therefore secondary evidence and secondary evidence was not admissable in any court.

The sections calls for a complainant getting a fiat from a judge in order that the application may be granted only when warranted and not on meagre or unsubstantial grounds. In the present instance no grounds were stated, the relator simply stating he was informed and believed.

The deponent should also fyle a suitable recognizance in two sureties. The recognizance should be of two sureties, each in the sum of $200.

Mr Moloney's recognisance was regular but the other surety was only for $100 instead of $200. in sureties of $100 each.

Thus the bond of the relator was $300 instead of $400.

On the last two grounds Mr. Peck urged that the matter should be entirely dismissed.

MR. McWILLIAMS REPLIES

Mr. McWilliams argued that the objections offered were not sufficient to affect the case and that anyway they could not be dealt with at the court before which the complaint was being heard. Mr McWilliams cited authorities to prove his stand. These were for the purpose of showing that a county judge had no jurisdiction to set aside, on account of an irregularity, a case such as the one being heard, after the case had been brought to court.

Mr. McWilliams dealt with the individual objections given by Mr Peck and said that he did not think that the grounds could have been more specifically stated without giving the evidence. He thought that the plaintiff had fully complied with the requirements of the statute. Where the charge is corrupt practices the plaintiff is not required to give the specific grounds, but to simply name the charge or charges and to give the names of the witnesses. This had been done.

All that he had been required to do was to submit enough evidence to lead the judge to decide that there were reasonable grounds for believing that the election was not properly conducted. He had set out every thing as nearly as the facts could be gotten at.

The affidavit was required to be filed and presumably for the very purpose of giving the defendant access to it. Mr. McWilliams stated that as the defendant's counsel had apepared before his Honor in chambers and had not voiced his objections at that time, which, under the circumstances he should have done, he had waived his right of doing so. His Honor did not concur with counsel, ever, in this contention.

Mr. McWilliams also submitted the recognizance had been regularly made. According to the wording the recognizance made for Mr. Moloney by his two bondsmen, stated that they were responsible for sureties to the extent of $100, instead of two sureties at $100 each. Mr. McWilliams said that as the County Judge had allowed the matter to go on, the irregularity, if there was one, could not be objected to.

He further stated that the protesting candidate would not know of of his own knowledge of deeds of bribery and corruption. All that could be expected of him was for him to secure information reasonably strong for basing the charges upon.

THAT IMPORTANT "EACH."

"I'm very doubtful about this recognizance," said his Honor in discussing the value of the word each, which had been left out.

Mr. McWilliams did considerable arguing to prove that although the word each was left out it was neverless explicitly explained by the wording of recognizance that each one would be responsible for the sum of $100.

His Honor decided, taking the objections into consideration, it would be the best method of procedure to go on with the case.

Mr. Peck claimed that he should have the particulars before the case was proceeded with.

"A great question is the matter of the costs," said his Honor, "a great many witnesses have been brought here, especially by the relator, to prove his case."

He stated that the solicitor for the defendant should have asked for particulars before the day of trial. If a delay was caused the defendant should be responsible for costs accurred by reason of counsels' neglect in not demanding particulars at an earlier date.

"I will hear the case on the merits," said his Honor, "subject to the objections."

Mr Peck said he could not in justice to his client, go on with the case without the particulars being furnished him.

The court told Mr. Peck that he would not be confronted with any surprises without being given an opportunity to meet them. The case was then enlarged until 2.30 in the afternoon.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY TO MEET IN THIS CITY

The Presbytery of Peterborough was to have met at Port Hope on March 9th, but in view of the reported epidemic there, the place of meeting has been changed to Peterborough, and accordingly the Presbytery will meet in St. Andrew's church on Tuesday, March 9th, at 9 o'clock.

The clerk of the Presbytery reports that St. Andrew's church, Campbellford, has extended a call to Rev. G. A. Brown, of Burk's Falls, and the call will be considered at the meeting of the Presbytery here. St. Andrew's church has been without a regular minister, since the removal of Rev. G. A. Reeves to Moose Jaw.

THE EXTENSION IS LIKELY TO BE MADE THIS SUMMER

Mr. J. H. Larmouth, manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company has returned from Chicago, after a business visit there, during which he was in consultation with prominent officials of the Company concerning the extension of the railway to Lakefield.

Mr. Larmouth told a Review representative to-day that nothing had been definitely decided in connection with the construction of the road. The directors have taken the matter up very seriously, though, and are hopeful of being able to have the extension made this summer.

MASON & RISCH PIANO

Will be used at the Toronto Symphony Club's Recital next Friday evening

Mr. Frank S. Welsman, musical composer and leader of the Toronto Symphony Club writes of the Mason & Risch Piano as follows:

The Mason & Risch Piano Co.

Gentlemen: Allow me to thank you for the Grand Pianos you have supplied for my recitals during the past season. The instruments have very materially assisted me in interpreting to my own satisfaction the compositions my programmes have called for. Not only have your instruments a large volume of tone, but have what I might call a pervading quality which I found in no other piano.

The lightness and perfect repetition of the Action permits one to bring out the tonal qualities referred to above with such ease that it is with the greatest of pleasure I have used the Mason & Risch Piano.

It is gratifying to find that it is not necessary to go outside our own country to secure an instrument of the highest excellence.

Yours sincerely,

FRANK S. WELSMAN.

Mr. Welsman is the young musician who has made such a sensation in Toronto for some seasons past with his Symphony Orchestra.

BIG PRICE ON THE MURDERER'S HEAD

Rewards of $2,000 for Detection of Hamilton Girl's Slayer—Mystery no Nearer Solution Man Was no Common Tramp.

Hamilton, Feb. 27.—There are now three rewards aggregating $2,000 for evidence leading to the detention of the murderer of Miss Ethel Kinrade. The family are offering $1,000, and the city and the Government have supplemented with $500 each. Provincial Detective John Miller has been detailed on the case. He arrived in the city yesterday, but did not receive instruction until last night to work on the mystery. The request for Detective Miller's assistance was made to the Attorney-General's Department through Hon. J. S. Hendrie, who last night telephoned Mayor McLaren that the whole of the provincial force was at the disposal of Hamilton, and that all they were waiting for was to be asked.

The bereaved family have denied themselves to reporters. Neither the mother or Miss Florence is in a fit condition physically to be seen. The mother requires the attention of a trained nurse and medical treatment. She had another swooning spell last night, and Dr. James White was hurriedly called.

Speaking of the lodging houses, Relief Officer McMenemy stated last night that even tramps who were given tickets for lodgings were afraid to take advantage of them, returning with statements that as many as six or seven of the lodgers were armed with revolvers.

Mayor McLaren objects to the way he was reported in connection with the case. What he says he said is, "My belief is that it was not the deed of the ordinary tramp."

The police are receiving alarms constantly about tramps answering the description given by the family, but have failed to obtain anything satisfactory. A belated report reached the chief last evening that a tramp bearing resemblance to the supposed murderer had been seen in the east end of the park under the mountain at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The inquest will be held next Wednesday evening, and Chief Smith spoke hopefully last evening of being able to throw important light on the mystery before that time. The detectives who are investigating admit that they are not looking for anyone of the hobo order.

Some speculation is being indulged in as to what Mr. Kinrade had in mind when, yesterday, while his daughter was telling him of the shooting, he said, "Who did it? Was it anybody you met in Virginia?" She replied that it was not, but she would know the man again.

Coroner McNichol, who was called a few minutes after the shooting to give medical aid, and who got the first story of the elder sister, has a different version from those obtained by the police. She told him that when the man entered the house and pointed a revolver at her she backed up in her terror to the rear of the hall, and that her sister came down the back stairs. The man heard her and turned and fired several shots at her.

The police say that they have interviewed every person in the neighborhood of the Kinrade home, and not one of them saw the tramp either entering or leaving the house. The fact that seven bullets were fired has caused considerable comment, but the authorities say that there are such weapons as seven-shooters, though they are considered old-fashioned.

Jesse Linger, caretaker of Christ Cathedral, says that he was threatened by a beggar to whom he refused aid Wednesday morning.

Inspector McMahon says that the mother did not complain to him on Thursday of any particular man, and did not say that there was a man hanging about the house. Her complaint was about the number of men who had called at her home with tickets from the lodging-houses, and about a man, not of the tramp order, who was loafing about the house last Sunday night, and who raised his umbrella and hid his face when they tried to get a look at him.

PROVINCE HAS A SURPLUS BALANCE IS A TIDY ONE

Ontario's Books Brought Down in the Legislature Make a Fine Showing, Despite Treasurer's Rigorous Exclusion of Extras From Capital Account.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—With a net cash balance of $45,838.36 Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, brought down the public accounts in the Legislature yesterday.

The total receipts are placed at $8,602,902.96 and the total expenditure at $8,557,064.60.

The amount at special deposit at the end of 1907 was $1,561,881.61; at the end of 1908, $2,924,278. The amounts at current account respectively were $112,202.44 and $147,858.50. The Government is therefore better supplied with cash on hand than a year ago.

The smaller balance is due to the falling off in receipts from the Lands Department, the lumber men having been a less productive source of revenue than was anticipated.

A sum of $2,304,980.60 advanced to the T. N.O. Railway may be regarded as a first-class asset of the Government.

It has always been a vexed question among politicians what items of expenditure should be charged to capital account, and what to current expenditure. Col. Matheson has been very consistent during his tenure of office in charging all expenditures to current revenue, so long as the revenue would stand the charge. The practice of the former Liberal Governments was to charge everything to capital account that could possibly be included therein, and thus to exhibit swollen balances.

In other respects the public accounts show the province in a most favorable financial position. The Dominion debt has been wiped off. The Soo guarantee is disposed of. All the estimated revenues but that for crown lands were exceeded.

The fluctuating sources of revenue may be enumerated. From the Dominion a total of $2,128,772 was received; from lands, forests and mines, $2,430,429; licenses, $577,771; law stamps, $95,695; Algoma taxes, $1,105; education, $50,960; Provincial Secretary's Department, licenses, etc., $172,980; game and fisheries, $101,054; agriculture, $87,722; supplementary revenue act, $695,482; succession duty, $1,134,890, casual revenue, $105,790; public institutions, $238,248; T. & N.O. Railway, $350,000.

Grants to education have grown from $949,806 in 1904 to $1,564,567; to agriculture, from $446,481 to $534,325; hospitals and charities, from $236,592 to $317,774; colonization roads, from $175,620 to $459,894.

Among the miscellaneous items of expenditure are $24,351 for enforcement of the liquor license law; $16,896 for wolf bounties; expenses of elections, $119,562; hydro-electric power commission, $52,139; sundry investigations, $3,378.

Besides the tabling of the public accounts only a brief program of business was transacted.

W. H. Hoyle, in presenting the report of the standing orders committee, stated that members who had not their private bills in process of presentation might take notice that it would be impossible for them to get them through this session, as it was the intention to adhere strictly to the rules throughout the present session of Parliament.

Several bills were read a first time.

TO START WORK COMING SUMMER

Street Railway to Commence Extension to Stony Lake—Several Extensions Will Also be Made in the City.

Moved by Ald. Morrow and seconded by Ald. Butler,

"That the city Council support the application of the Street Railway Co. for an extension of time on the distinct understanding that the company proceed with the work of extension during the year."

This resolution was passed at a meeting of the whole Council last night when Mr. J. H. Larmonth, manager of the Radial Railway Company, who has just returned from Chicago, outlined the company's plans. Mr. Larmonth has been in Chicago taking the matter up with the head officials of the company and supplied the Council with some information of public interest.

Those present at the meeting were Mayor Rush, Alderman Morgan, Duncan, Metheral, Morrow, Butler, Bradburn, Turner, Gillespie, Duffus and Phelan.

Mr. Larmonth stated that he had visited Chicago for the special purpose of securing information regarding the street railway situation. The officials at Chicago would not state definitely that anything could be done here before May 14th. The company intend raising $400,000 for the extension of the street railway lines. Besides the line to Young's Point they intend building new lines in Peterborough, which will cost $30,000. One of these lines will be the C.G.E. "red" line, south to Albert street, west to the boundary and then south past St Peter's cemetery. The other line in prospect is on McDonnel street to Reid, north Reid to Aberdeen avenue, to accommodate the Normal school students and then south by a street which has not yet been considered. Mr. Stuart is now trying to secure a market for his bonds, as he does not wish to take all the money for the work from his own pocket.

Mr Larmonth further stated that that it was practically assured that work would be commenced this summer, but an extension of at least a year was necessary. The company were interested in the welfare of Peterborough and it would be better to have the present company extend their lines than have outsiders coming in. It was very necessary to have the extension for one year and it was in perfect good faith that the extra time was asked for. Their attitude in the past, Mr. Larmonth said, had shown that the company wanted to cooperate with the city. The present system had cost from 50 to 75 per cent. more than the engineers had estimated owing to the old rails,which were expected to be of use proving to be of less value than expected.

Ald. Gillespie asked what the company intended doing regarding extending to Ashburnham.

The drawback regarding an Ashburnham line, Mr. Larmonth said, was the lack of a bridge. They did not consider the Smith street route as it would hardly allow a sufficiently rapid service.

Ald Bradburn suggested a compromise as there seemed to be a difference of opinion. His idea was that the city support the application for extension for one year, provided the present company would not block any other company if they found they themselves could not proceed with the work.

This proposition was not taken up.

After some discussion the motion given at the beginning of this article was carried.

ANOTHER MATTER.

Ald. Phelan read a letter from Mr. J. H. Larmonth regarding the replacing of a number of poles on Simcoe street east of George street, to supply power to the Peterborough Cereal Company.

METHODISTS IN A WRANGLE

Rev. Dr. Carman Has Stirred up a Heresy Argument---Ministers in a Controversy.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—As a result of the letter sent by Rev. Dr. Carman of the Methodist Church to The Globe attacking Rev. George Jackson of Sherbourne Street Church for his so-called heterodoxy, there is a controversial tempest in this city and in ecclesiastical circles throughout the country.

In an address before the Y.M.C.A., Rev. Mr. Jackson expressed the belief that the story of the creation in Genesis was a legend, a mythical way of expressing great truths.

Dr. Carman replied that the story of the creation was to be taken literally, and proceeded to attack Rev. Mr. Jackson, who comes under the control of the British Wesleyan Conference, for lack of gratitude for the hospitality shown him in Canada.

Not only the belief involved but Dr. Carman's brutal attack on Mr. Jackson have aroused the ire of prominent clerics and laymen.

The pulpit supply committee of Sherbourne Street Church have replied to Dr. Carman with a unanimous resolution supporting their pastor, and one of their number, J. W. Flavelle, in this morning's Globe addressed a scathing open letter to the head of Methodism in Canada, condemning his lack of charity. In part Mr. Flavelle says:

"Without having had any communication with him you assail a brother minister in a manner from which a man in the ordinary walk of life, among those whom you would term Godless people, would be protected by the instinct of good breeding, untempered by the grace of religious profession. You have shocked and distressed men of every communion in the spirit of cruel spite displayed, and the bitter spirit of the heresy-hunter which is found in every part of your communication."

DOURO PROTEST CASE ADJOURNED

Yesterday afternoon at 2.30 His Honor Judge Weller continued the sittings of the County Court for the hearing of the evidence in protest of the Douro election.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for the relator, L. Moloney, and Mr. E. A. Peck for the respondent, Reeve Moher.

There were close contests between Mr. Moloney and Mr. Moher during the last three or four years.

Mr. Peck asked that this witness stand aside until Reeve Moher, the respondent, got back from Ottawa. —Allowed.

Mairice O'Brien called;—Supported Mr. Moher. Went on election day to fetch Wm. White, sr. and jr. Did not pay money to either. James Welsh was with me. Not together all the time. Did not know of Welsh paying or promising anything. Denied all complicity or knowledge.

Mr. McWilliams—Do you know anything about Mr. White getting $2.00 for his vote?

O'Brien—No.

This completed the evidence taken on this charge and it was allowed to stand. The judge stated that nothing had been proved.

Mr Ed. Welsh was called. He said that before the last election he was a supporter of Mr. Moloney, who was successful a year ago. Mr. Moher knew witness to be a supporter of Mr. Moloney. Moher canvassed him the day after the nomination. It took place in his house and his wife and other members of the family were present. There was a little money passed between witness and Moher. Witness said he had been asked to act as scrutineer at the last Provincial election. Witness did act and Moher wanted to know if he had been paid. He replied no. Moher asked him how much it was and witness said he did not know. Moher then gave him a $5 bill and asked for $2.00 change. He had never spoken to or heard from Mr. Moher in reference to being paid and had no expectation of being paid. Moher again asked witness to vote for him and witness replied that it would be all right. He lives about a mile from Mr. Moher. They attend the same church.

Mrs Ed. Welsh, wife of last witness was called and gave evidence of Mr Moher coming to the house and canvassing Mr. Welsh.

Mr John Welsh, son of the previous witness, was called, and he corroborated the evidence of his father and mother.

Mr. Martin McManus of Douro, was called. He stated that on election day he had a team driving for Mr Moher but it had not been hired. Mr. Moher had, however, given him 50 cents to pay his railway fare to Lakefield but he said he had given that back fearing that there might be some trouble.

FOUND DEAD ON STEPS OF HOUSE

Stratford, Feb. 27.—Alexander Sutherland of East Zorra was found dead at the rear door of the residence occupied by Mr. and Mrs. A. Guerin, 512 Brunswick street.

He came to the city Thursday night from Tavistock, where he has been employed, and was driven to the house. The stories of the Guerins vary as to what occurred, but they state that he left the house early in the evening, and did not, to their knowledge, return.

An inquest was opened last evening. The evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Guerin was taken, but the latter's story was so contradictory that the coroner refused to continue his examination until she was in a fit condition to be placed in the witness-box.

An external examination by a physician failed to produce any signs of violence on Sutherland, except a slight abrasion of the forehead, not sufficient to cause death. The inquest was adjourned till Tuesday night.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Fire did $5,000 damage to the Medbury Building, Windsor.

Diphtheria is epidemic at Fonthill. The school is closed, and the churches will likely be closed as well.

An immigration hall, to cost $35,000, will be erected at Wainwright, Alta., by the Dominion Government.

Manitoba grain growers presented a petition of 10,000, asking the Legislature to take up the question of Government ownership of grain elevators.

Mrs. Martine Egeatine, 45 years old, was fatally burned at her home at Niagara Falls, N.Y., by an explosion of gasoline which she was pouring into a kitchen range to start a fire.

The Canadian South African Service Association, which represents a score of affiliated South African Veterans' Associations, in Canada, will hold its annual meeting in Ottawa to-day.

The code to regulate naval warfare, to draft which the London conference was summoned, will be published simultaneously in the capital of each country represented on March 20.

ABUSING THE PRIVILEGES

Grit Members on Carpet for Excessive Use of Franks---Robbing the Country it is Said.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—Dr. Daniels yesterday brought up the question of the use of the mails for the free distribution of partisan literature. Some 8,000 copies of the election pamphlet of his opponent in the last election had been sent free through the mails for Ottawa. David Henderson, Dr. Barr and others told of tons of franked literature being sent to their ridings, and George Taylor pointed out that this literature was not franked through the Ottawa city postoffice, so that the postmaster was directly responsible.

Mr. Lemieux said franking after the session was wrong. In the case of campaign literature sent to his own County of Gaspe, he had paid the postage out of his own pocket.

In reply to a question he said that even Ministers of the crown had no right to transfer their frank to other parties. He promised to have the whole matter investigated.

"What would the Postmaster-General say to a Minister franking out for other people," asked Mr. Perley.

"I would severely censure the Minister," said Mr. Lemieux amidst laughter.

Mr. Taylor (New Westminster) brought up another instance of abuse of the franking privilege, which he regarded as nothing less than a piece of "petty graft." For three or four years some 30 or 40 weekly letters containing scurrilous abuse of the Conservative party and leaders were being sent to Liberal newspapers in British Columbia, franked "J.B., Solicitor-General."

Hon. Mr. Bureau replied that he had no apology to make whatever. The practice had been in vogue for years under both Governments.

Mr. Gordon of Nipissing said that enormous quantities of Liberal campaign literature had been poured into

THE YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

Tonight will be held the third session of the mock parliament which has aroused such general interest amongst the members of the club. Some excellent speakers are coming to the fore. All members of the club and all Conservatives who wish to become members are especially invited to attend this evening. The first and most important event of the evening will take place promptly at eight o'clock.

ASSAULT ON YOUNG LADY WAS A DASTARDLY ACT

Last evening as some of the Normal School teachers and pupils in training were proceeding northward two tramps who had been previously observed hanging about during the earlier part of the evening, drew up alongside and one of them deliberately drew up his arm and slapped one of the young ladies across the face, following his contemptible act with a shout of laughter. This sort of thing usually in more cowardly form has been rife in the province although not in Peterborough but if there is any likelihood of further manifestations in this respect every care should be taken that such characters are put not on the new fashionable parole but behind the bars at hard labor with a few lashes added by way of a reminder.

NO SCARLET FEVER IN CITY SINCE LAST SATURDAY

The police authorities report that there have been no fresh cases of scarlet fever since last Saturday.

The Central School where the outbreak occurred last week, has been disinfected and, as a full week has elapsed with any further cases those pupils who have been remaining away from school through fear might now, with reasonable safety, return to their school work.

The teachers are doing their utmost to prevent any further outbreak of the disease.

FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS CITY HAS A BIG CONTRACT

Mr. John Moore, accompanied by Mrs. Moore, has arrived in Peterborough from Winnipeg where they have spent the past three years. Mr. Moore left this city for Winnipeg on February 19th 1906 and left Winnipeg on February 19th, 1909, the coincidence in the dates being somewhat interesting.

Mr Moore states that Winnipeg will have one of the busiest seasons in its history during the coming summer Already hundreds of building permits have been taken out and the real estate business in also very active.

A former Peterborough boy, Mr. George Mitchell who is in partnership with Mr Peter Lyall, has the contract for the building at Winnipeg of the new Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern union station, which will cost over $4,000,000.

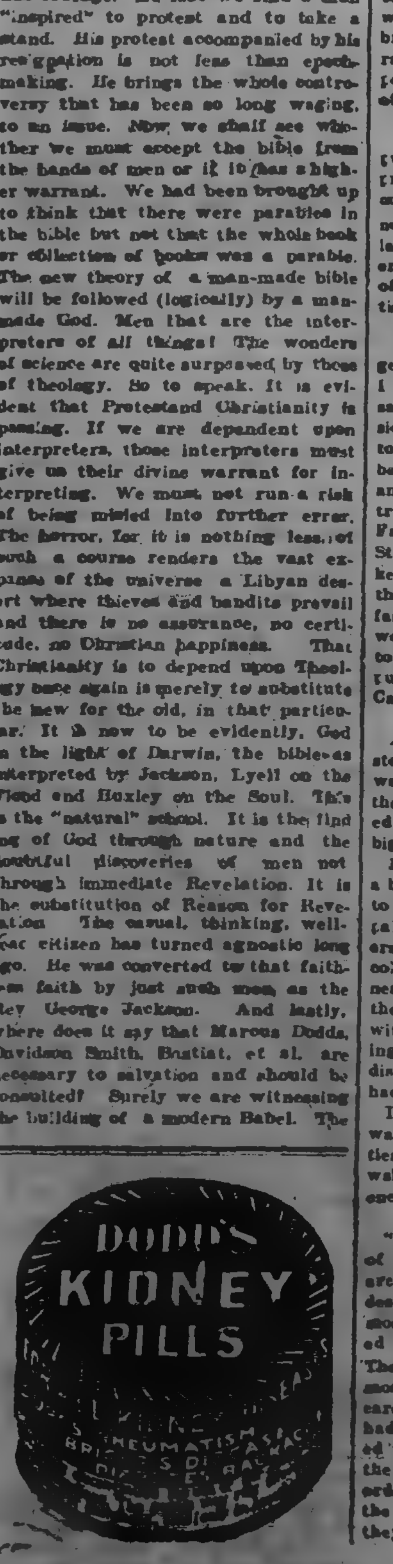
MR. MASON'S LETTER

Mr. Frank Mason's letter published today is surely a timely if not too late protest against the prevailing free criticism of "God's word." The value of Mr. Mason's protest lies chiefly in his resignation of membership. He is the first Christian we have seen in action who has not succumbed to the pressure of man-made criticisms. If critics (chiefly theological) can straighten out the tangle into which the Creator is supposed to have got Himself in Genesis then they are superior to God and could possibly have worked out their own salvation. The theory that revelation is gradual and made through the theological student who as he applies himself to study is able to supply mankind with spiritual food is a dry, barren, soulless, nonsensical theory. The attributes of Christianity are those of love, sinlessness, forgiveness, not exactitude according to human standards. How many millions of times have men been mistaken? Why should they undertake to cobble and fill in the Bible. Why do they not let it alone if they do not like it. Who gave them their commission to correct. These men are murdering Christianity. It is merely a hollow semblance of what it once was—a ghastly mockery dependent from day to day forsooth upon the Rev. George Jackson and the like. That Christianity itself is a mere allegory and the crucifixion a masque is the next step. Mr. Mason has courage. At last we find a man "inspired" to protest and to take a stand. His protest accompanied by his resignation is not less than epoch-making. He brings the whole controversy that has been so long waging, to an issue. Now we shall see whether we must accept the bible from the hands of men or if it has a higher warrant. We had been brought up to think that there were parables in the bible but not that the whole book or collection of books was a parable. The new theory of a man-made bible will be followed (logically) by a man-made God. Men that are the interpreters of all things! The wonders of science are quite surpassed by those of theology. So to speak. It is evident that Protestant Christianity is passing. If we are dependent upon interpreters, those interpreters must give us their divine warrant for interpreting. We must not run a risk of being misled into further error. The horror, for it is nothing less, of such a course renders the vast expanse of the universe a Libyan desert where thieves and bandits prevail and there is no assurance, no certitude, no Christian happiness. That Christianity is to depend upon Theology once again is merely to substitute the new for the old, in that particular. It is now to be evidently, God in the light of Darwin, the bible as interpreted by Jackson, Lyell on the Flood and Huxley on the Soul. This is the "natural" school. It is the finding of God through nature and the doubtful discoveries of men not through immediate Revelation. It is the substitution of Reason for Revelation. The casual, thinking, well-read citizen has turned agnostic long ago. He was converted to that faithless faith by just such men as the Rev George Jackson. And lastly, where does it say that Marcus Dodds, Davidson Smith, Bastiat, et al. are necessary to salvation and should be consulted? Surely we are witnessing the building of a modern Babel. The glory of the terrestial is one thing, but the glory of the celestial is ANOTHER. It is to be hoped that Mr. Mason's action will not be passed over with a smile or rendered harmless by a "discreet" silence respecting it. We can assure his critics that he speaks for a vast number who stand amazed. His mission is as important as any layman's yet devised.



THE T. V. C. ATTACKED

The attempt to discredit the T.V.C. as recorded in the report of the proceedings in parliament at Ottawa published in another column in this issue is such as to shock those in this district who had hoped that Liberals were as much in earnest as they seemed to be in this matter. BUT WHY WAS NOT ONE WORD SPOKEN IN ITS DEFENCE? It is such omissions as these that make the struggle to get the T.V.C. completed a hard one. Loud talk on the hustings will not make up for lack of faithfulness at the post of duty. We want our internal waterways and highways aided for the general benefit of our own hardworking people. Let the schemes for the spending of our hard-earned money on other and far away people rest for a while. There is a screw loose somewhere in such an administration.

LATE-COMERS

Paderewski's recital in Montreal the other evening was spoiled by the ignorant selfishness of late-comers. The confusion produced by a lot of late-comers squeezing into seats led to the annoyance of the artist. Canadians are selfish in this respect. The streets are lined with people on Sundays hurrying to church from 5 to 15 minutes late. It is likely that the only preventive measure that will put a stop to these interruptions in the future will be a calling-down for offenders such as Paderewski gave expression to.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The running on skis in Sweden where competitors did forty miles and more at eight miles and a half an hour across country ought to quiet some of the boosters who acclaim Longboat, etc., so persistently.

As the Toronto News points out, there seems to be no excuse for the Government's maintaining its rate of interest on deposits at 3 per cent. It is simply a capitulation to the banks, corporations, etc., of the Laurier Government.

It is said that the Minister of Railways and Canals did not give any hope to the deputation which went to Ottawa asking for a subsidy towards the building of the Bald Lake bridge. The Laurier policy is to build railways to the moon, not to help people who carved rural Canada out of the wilderness.

"A united Canada and integrity in public affairs have been the guiding principles of the Liberal party of his country from its earliest days until now," said the Hon. R. F. Sutherland, M.P., in a capital address delivered last night at the annual meeting of the East Toronto Liberal Association."—The Globe.

"To explain the meaning of Indulgences would require more space than I have at my disposal. Still I may say that an Indulgence is a remission of the temporal punishment due to sin after the guilt of the sin has been removed. The merits of Christ and His Saints constitute a spiritual treasure in the Church. The Holy Father, the Pope, the Successor to St. Peter, the Key-holder, holds the key of the treasure and dispenses these treasures or merits to the faithful when they perform certain works. These merits are offered to take the place of the temporal punishment due to sin."—"Lector" in Catholic Register.

A grotesque echo of the ice palace storming was given at the Paderewski concert when the efforts of the great pianist were almost drowned at times by the coughing of a big audience.

Fully fifty thousand people braved a blinding snowstorm on Friday night to see the final storming of the ice palace, and evidently the music lovers were amongst those who caught cold as a result. Their coughing nearly wrecked the concert, while their efforts were aided by a child with a well-developed case of whooping cough which furnished so much distraction that ultimately the child had to be removed.

It is a long time since a concert was given there under such difficulties and the result was that Paderewski's genius was a good deal dampened.—Witness.

"After all the unrecognised efforts of the Holy Father, the Italian Hierarchy and the clergy on behalf of the destitute earthquake victims their most cherished work is to be thwarted in great measure, if not entirely. The work in which they felt the most conscientious duty was in the care of the orphans, and this they had organized in a manner calculated to bring the best results. But now the government officials step in and order, those in charge to relinquish the care of these precious souls whom they wished to train up for eternity as well as for this life. They have refused Abbe Santol's offer to provide for one thousand of them. The committee in charge have been dissolved and the case of those already sufficiently tortured little ones has been entrusted to the direction of three women, a Jewess, a Waldensian and a Socialist. As a result sixty of them were the other day handed over to a Waldensian congregation in Florence. And more than probably the same will be the fate of all. In body they will be surely no better off than they would have been under the guardianship of ministers of religion. I fear, much worse; but as to the soul there can be no doubt. To bring them up sufficiently anti-clerical for modern ideas they must be despoiled of their choicest possession; which no earthquake could take from them, the saving faith of their fathers and taught fragments of rubbish in its place."—Rome correspondence of the Catholic Register.

ENTERTAINED THEIR FRIENDS

Pleasant Function Last Night at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pearson

An enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr and Mrs. Harry Pearson, North Smith, on Thursday evening, when about one hundred guests were entertained. Excellent music for dancing was supplied by an orchestra and Mr H McIlmoyle acted as floor manager.

A number of Peterborough and Lakefield friends were in attendance. The guests sat down to a more bountiful spread and Mr and Mrs. Pearson are to be complimented on the excellent way in which they entertained the happy gathering. The party broke up in the wee sma hours.

TOO LITTLE BLOOD

Responsible for Nearly all of the Misery Women Endure

Anaemia is written on the features of ninety women out of a hundred. Unmistakable are the signs of "too little blood." The weaker sex is assailed at all stages by the evils resulting from bloodlessness; from the girl who is weak and languid with dull eyes, pale lips, fitful appetite, and palpitating heart, to the woman who feels "never well," with pains in the back and across the shoulders, fainting fits and aching limbs. And later at life's turning point, nervous disorders and heart troubles make rest calls on a woman's strength.

At all ages Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are especially valuable to the female sex, for they alone possess the power of making in abundance the rich, red blood of health. They fill the starved veins with new blood, so that enfeebled bodies are strengthened, weak nerves are fortified, and robust health is restored.

Mrs. E. Smith, Windsor, N.S., says: "A few years ago my health began to fail. I suffered greatly from inward troubles and in about a year's time my whole system was almost a wreck. My blood had turned to water, and my heart had become so badly effected that I could scarcely go about. In fact life had almost become a burden, and there seemed little hope for me. One day a friend asked me if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and told me that she had been in almost the same condition I was and that the Pills had restored her to her present splendid health. I took courage from what my friend told me and began to take the Pills. I took them regularly for several months, constantly growing stronger, and the internal troubles from which I had been afflicted were disappearing and my whole system seemed to have gained new strength. I wanted to make certain that there would be no return of the trouble, and I continued to take the Pills for a time after I had really recovered. Since I have proved for myself what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do I have recommended them to a number of suffering people, and those who have given them a fair trial have proved with me that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what they are recommended to be."

DEATH OF AN EMILY PIONEER

One of the oldest residents of Emily, in the person of Mr. Leonard McAuliffe passed away at the family residence on Thursday. Deceased was widely known and universally respected. He had been ailing for about three months past.

The late Mr. McAuliffe is survived by a wife and five children and one sister and five brothers. The sister is Miss Ellen of Kansas, and the brothers are Peter of Emily: John, Pat and Wm., of Kansas, and Michael of San Francisco. Deceased was a faithful attendant of St. Martin's church Ennismore.

The funeral will take place from the late residence at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, and proceed to St. Martin's church, where mass will be sung and interment will take place in St. Martin's cemetery.

CANADA LIFE'S BANNER BUSINESS

Well Known Company Has Splendid Report for 1908—One of the Best in Company's History

The 62nd report of the Canada Life shows that applications received in 1908 amounted to $11,875,000, and the total business in force now exceeds $120,629,000. While these figures show a satisfactory growth, the address of the president emphasizes rather the gains in those features which indicate greater strength and earning power. During the year the expenses were less than in 1907 though the aggregate business was greater, the ratio of the decrease to premiums received being 2 per cent. At the same time the rate of interest earned was increased, and there was a substantial saving in mortality. All these features will combine to increase the profits paid to policyholders.

In discussing the investment policy of the Company, the president pointed out that full advantage had been taken of the abnormally low prices of long-term securities during the past year or two, and the benefit of the interest earnings of these would be enjoyed for many years to come.

The Canada Life assets were increased by $2,410,000 and now stand at $36,713,000 although in the year, cash payments of $1,979,000 were made to policyholders and beneficiaries.

Considering the substantial gains in those features which count most, the report of the Canada Life for 1908, may be considered one of the most satisfactory in its whole history.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

Pushing the Work

The enthusiasm shown by the ladies last Sunday over the local option fight now under way in Peterborough, as evidenced at the meeting held in the Crystal, is considered to be an encouraging feature of the campaign. The members of the men's committee, who have had charge of the work of securing signatures to the petition to the city council, asking that a vote on local option shall be held next January, are hard at work preparing the lists for presentation to the council. The names on the lists are being carefully scrutinized and typewritten copies are being prepared. The list will be an imposing one when it is presented.

"Indian List."

There are women in Peterborough to-day, who have husbands and sons who are rapidly becoming victims to the drink habit. To these women, who are praying for the carrying of local option next January, the time that must elapse before it will come into effect seems very long. For their information, it might be well to draw attention to the legislation passed recently by the Ontario Legislature concerning what is called the "Indian List." Any husband or wife, mother or father, or child over 21 years of age, or employer can have a husband or wife, or son or daughter, or father or mother, or an employee, who is addicted to the liquor habit, placed on what is called the "Indian List," by consulting the license inspector for the city. In Peterborough, the license inspector is Mr. Joseph Stewart, Bell Telephone No. 670L. The license inspector then notifies every hotel, all shops where liquor is sold and breweries, that liquor must not be sold to the person whose name has been placed on the list.

The person is seen by the license inspector and informed that if found under the influence of liquor, they will be fined or sent to jail and that if they do not give the name of the person who supplied them with the liquor, the fine or term of imprisonment will be increased. Already, there are between forty and fifty people in Peterborough on the "Indian List." It is reported to be working very sucessfully. Some hotel men have been fined for selling liquor to people on this list, with the result that they are now very careful. This law may help to keep some people in Peterborough safe until local option can be carried.

Owen Sound and Local Option

Before the people of Owen Sound voted last January, in favour of retaining local option, the liquor interests proclaimed loudly, by means of advertisements published in papers all through the province, that local option was proving a failure in Owen Sound. Even since last January, the temperance workers in Peterborough have been told that local option is a failure in Owen Sound. At a meeting held recently in Brantford, where the local option fight is now well under way, Alderman John McQuaker, of Owen Sound, gave some interesting information about the situation in that city. His remarks are reported as follows by the Brantford Expositor:

"He dealt with the letter which appeared in the press last December, declaring that local option was a failure in Owen Sound, and said that the later was not only grossly inaccurate in its fact, but was a back number, having been doing service for the last two years—this in spite of the fact that its mis-statements had been exposed.

However, the letter did good, as it aroused the resentment of decent people in Owen Sound, who resented its representations and reflections on the fair name of the town.

"One of the men who signed the famous round robin had been described by the liquor interests as being a prominent banker, though he was really a shaver of notes. Some time after Local Option came into force, he told a thresher that Local Option was spoiling the business of the town. In particular his own business had suffered. His sheaf of chattel mortgages had been cut down about one half."

"The statement had been circulated that the farmers were leaving Owen Sound market and going to Midland, Wiarton, Chesley, and elsewhere. This was not the case. The speaker knew the farming community for twenty miles around Owen Sound better than any other man in the place. He could testify that the farmers were as thick as ever on the streets. On the 4th of January last, the men from the country showed very clearly how deeply they resented the statements of the liquor men. Not less than one hundred and fifty of them came in with their rigs to help get out the Local Option vote. Of course, all of them could not be used, but not a few obtained the privilege of carrying at least one voter to he polls. Then they put their rigs in the sheds and stables and waited to join in the cheering. Waited with confidence, too, for the bad temper of the other side showed, for two weeks before election day, that they knew they were already defeated.

Come Off the Fence.

The home and the saloon are out,
  There's bound to be a fight;
And some are for the wrong
  And some are for the right,
And some are neither wet nor dry
  In spite of common sense,
But try to find an easy seat
  A sittin' on the fence.

I'd rather be a polywog,
  A lizard or a snail,
Than wear a double face and sit
  A roostin' on the rail.
I'd rather join the whiskey side.
  And take the consequence.
Than be a dummy stuffed with straw
  A-straddle of the fence.

I'd rather be a jelly fish,
  The tide has washed ashore,
Than have to make apologies
  When all the war is o'er.
I'd rather take my chances now
  Than make a false pretence,
And bye and bye when truth has won
  Come sneaking off the fence.

To-morrow's Meeting.

The meeting in the Crystal tomorrow, will be presided over by Ex-Alderman Batten. The main address will be deivered by Sheriff Hall. It is expected that Rev. Dr. Talling, of Toronto, will also speak. Special music will be given. The meeting should prove an unusually interesting one and, as usual, a large attendance is expected. These meetings are helping the local option campaign in Peterborough wonderfully.

To Label Patent Medicines.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—An order-in-council has been passed, defining regulations for the sale of patent medicines under the act of last session.

They provide that the special stamps to be provided by the Department for goods in stock at the time the act comes into force will be supplied upon application being made to the Department between March 1 and April 1.

The charge for the stamps will be at the rate of 2 cents for 100 stamps. These stamps are to be attached to the wrapper of each individual bottle, box or package in such manner as to seal the package. No medicines containing cocaine shall have attached thereto these Departmental stamps.

For Taft's Inaugural.

Washington, Feb. 27.—In preparation for the inaugural ball on the evening of March 4, the transformation began yesterday of the big, barnlike court of the pension building, the largest brick building, it is said, in the world into a veritable fairyland.

The decorations for the ball alone will cost about $20,000, exclusive of the framework. There will be between 7,000 and 10,000 incandescent electric lights needed and miles of wire. In the floral scheme there will be used 2,000 blooming plants and hundreds of growing American beauties and crimson rambler plants, in addition to hundreds of dozens of cut flowers.

Diver Is New President.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Fred Diver, proprietor of the Central Press Agency, was elected president of the Master Printers' and Bookbinders' Association for 1909 yesterday.

For the last thirty years Mr. Diver has been owner of the Central Press Agency, and has been brought in touch with the newspaper fraternity of nearly every Canadian city and town.

The occasion on which Mr. Diver was yesterday chosen to this important position was the annual meeting and benquet of the association, at which W. P. Gundy, past president, presided.

Planned Huge Swindle.

New York, Feb. 27.—Word was received at police headquarters of the arrest in Milan, Italy, of four men accused of forging travelers' checks of the American Express Co., amounting in all to $2,400,000. It is charged that they planned to circulate the checks, simultaneously in London, Paris and Berlin.

The End of the Universe.

Boston, Feb. 27.—"A collision of an unknown dark planet with the sun will terminate life on the earth," said Prof. Percival Lowell, director of the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., in a lecture before the students of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"The events will be prophesied fourteen years before the catastrophe occurs," continued the astronomer, "and chaotic confusion will reign in the world during the days preceding the calamity."

Duck Shooting at Rice Lake.

Keene, Feb. 27.—A petition is being circulated in the Rice Lake district, asking the Ontario Government to so change the law that wild ducks may be shot over decoys in the rice beds. It is claimed by sportsmen that the recently adopted law, which went into force last fall, has practically spoiled the duck shooting at the lake, where it is difficult to get a shot at the ducks in the rice beds unless it is done from a concealed canoe.

Says He Is the Thief.

Chatham, Feb. 27.—William Riley, New York, has written to people here, stating that he stole the horses of Dr. MacFarlane of Dover, not Geo. Yott, who is serving a seven-year term at Kingston for this offence. The authorities here consider the letter only a bluff.

Tried to Burn a Church.

Oshawa, Ont., Feb. 27.—Geo. Hunt, of this town, was on Thursday sentenced to three years in the Kingston Penitentiary with hard labor by Police Magistrate L. K. Murton, for attempting to set fire to the Oshawa Christian Church at an early hour Thursday.

Two Firemen Hurt.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Two firemen were injured by a falling wall during a fire which destroyed the Albert Dickinson seed warehouse yesterday. Three girls were knocked down in the rush of fifty others for the stairway, but were rescued by policemen. Loss $150,000.

Would Exclude All Asiatics.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 27.—The Senate by a vote of 28 to 7 passed a resolution favoring the exclusion of all Asiatics from the United States.

Several Senators expressed surprise when the Asiatic immigration question came up.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.

The great Uterine Tonic, and only safe effectual Monthly Regulator on which women can depend. Sold in three degrees of strength—No. 1, $1; No. 2, 10 degrees stronger, $3; No. 3, for special cases, $5 per box. Sold by all druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of price. Free pamphlet. Address: The Cook Medicine Co. Toronto, Ont. (formerly Windsor)

New Jap Naval Base.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 27.—That a strongly fortified naval base, with an extensive harbor, is being made by the Japanese Government at Keelung, in Northeast Formosa, was the report made by the American ship Ellwell, which reached Esquimalt last night.

Case Fell Through.

Kingston, Feb. 27.—Charles G. Clark, bailiff, accused by the Metropolitan Manufacturing Co., Limited, Toronto, of converting goods to his own use, was honorably acquitted.

Cashier $19,500 Short.

Woodsville, N.H., Feb. 27.—A shortage of $19,500 in the accounts of H. W. Allen, cashier of the Woodsville National Bank, was announced yesterday.

Battle Won In England.

New York, Feb. 27.—Lady Cook, prominent in the advocacy of the cause of woman suffrage here and in England, arrived here yesterday from Europe. She declared that woman's battle for the suffrage was already won. Only the working out of minor details was left, she asserted, the principle having been established.

She said her work here would be principally in giving advice in the suffragette movement and aiding in administering its affairs.

Gave His Sons a Cigarette.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Because he divided a cigarette among his three sons, all under 16 years of age, Alfred Strong was charged in the Police Court with giving minors tobacco which is contrary to the criminal code.

"It's funny a father can't give his own sons what he pleases," said the magistrate. "I'll adjourn the case till to-morrow as it is under the criminal code, and the crown attorney should be present."

Woe to Cigarette Smokers.

New York, Feb. 27.—The proposed increase in the price of cigarettes announced on Thursday will not be more than a cent or two per package.

According to official Government figures 55,402,330,113 cigarettes were manufactured in the United States last year. In round numbers this means 5,500,000,000 packages. An increase of one cent a package would mean an additional tax of $55,000,000 on cigarette smokers.

Deprived of Estate.

New York, Feb. 27.—Wm. Cooke, after 22 years' absence, has returned from Alameda, Calif., and unearths a forgery depriving him of his sister's estate.

Cooke formerly lived in Toronto, Portland and Seattle.

New York to Montreal by Water.

New York, Feb. 27.—At the Lake Champlain Association dinner last night, Hon. Mr. Devlin of Quebec prophesied a line of steamers from New York to Montreal via Hudson river, Lake Champlain and the Richelieu river.

Fire In Essex School.

Essex, Feb. 27.—The public school here took fire at 11.40 yesterday morning while school was in session, but the pupils all retired in perfect order without one of them suffering damage or injury. Fire loss was not heavy.

Gravenhurst Carries Bylaw.

Gravenhurst, Feb. 27.—The bylaw to raise $15,000 for the purpose of completing the expenditure undertaken in the construction of the hydro-electric power plant at South Falls was carried by a majority of 73 votes.

Undesirables.

Welland, Feb. 27.—Two liquor detectives who were found in town got the "cold shoulder" all round, having to spend part of the night in the town hall. The hotels refused them accommodation.

Must Wait a Year.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Wireless telegraphy on shipboard will have to wait until another session, so far as legislation is concerned.

Berlin Ripper Caught.

Berlin, Feb. 27.—The man who, during the past fortnight, has been delivering a series of attacks on women on the streets of Berlin, was captured yesterday.

He made an attempt to stab a woman on the Freidrich Strasse, one of the crowded shopping streets of the city. She screamed and her assailant fled into a house on an adjoining street, where he was at once seized. He is a young man.

Yesterday's attempt was the thirty-sixth "ripper" case since the beginning of the outrages.

Premier Claims Libel.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Feb. 27.—Premier Hassard is taking an action for libel against The Examiner, for the publication of an article, stating: "It may be that the Premier holds his position only as the results of acts which, practiced in the ordinary course of everyday business, would land the perpetrator behind prison bars."

The Examiner publishes its article for the third time, denies that it was libellous and refuses an apology.

War Office Cotracts.

London, Feb. 27.—Right Hon. Mr. Haldane, Secretary for War, stated in the House of Commons yesterday, regarding the contract for canned meat for the British army, placed in the United States, that orders are not given to contractors outside of the Empire unless the goods required cannot be satisfactorily or economically obtained from British sources.

Hotelkeeper Fined.

Cobourg, Feb. 27.—Geo. Cockburn, hotelkeeper, of Baltimore, four miles from here, in a local option district, was yesterday fined $50 and costs by Magistrate Holland for having liquor for sale on the premises. It was a second offence.

Inspector Ayearst's men found fifty ale and port wine bottles in the bar and some ale in the cellar.

Once Rich; Dies a Pauper.

Los Angeles, Feb. 27.—Portius B. Weare, at one time a power in the business world of Chicago, and later a factor in business in the northwest, is dead here. At the time of his death he was virtually penniless.

NO MORE HEADACHES

Suffered From Constant Headaches—Cured by "Fruit-a-tives" When Doctors Failed.

"I was a sufferer from fearful headaches for over two years, sometimes they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I took all kinds of medicines, was treated by physicians, and yet the headaches persisted. I was rarely free from headache. A short time ago I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and I did so with, I must confess, very little faith, but after I had taken them for three days my headaches were easier and in a week they left me. After I had taken a box of the tablets my headaches were quite cured. My appetite was always poor and my stomach bad, and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion is excellent. I had become thin and weak from the constant headaches, but now not only have I been cured of all these awful headaches, but my strength is growing up once more, and I feel like a new man. I have taken in all three boxes of "Fruit-a-tives." I am exceedingly grateful to "Fruit-a-tives" for curing me, and I give this unsolicited testimonial with great pleasure, as I hope thereby some other sufferer of headaches will be induced to try "Fruit-a-tives" and will be cured."

An Address on "Education" Was Given by Mr. J. A. McKone

Last night being literary evening an address was given by Mr J. A. McKone, on "Education and its advantages." The speaker urged those attending school to stay on, get a good education as it would prove useful to them in the future. The wages of the educated and uneducated men were compared, and it was shown that the latter received the much smaller wage More attention in the classes, and less tricks to the teacher was emphasized. Many other hints and good advice was given by given by Mr McKone. The small attendance of boys was regretted. A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker for his interesting lecture. A reading was given by Mr A E Davenport. Next meeting is a social gathering, March 5th.

MR. LAYFIELD REMEMBERED PRESENTATIONS WERE MADE

Works Accountant of C. G. E. Honored by Presentations and Addresses—Given Gold Watch and Chain and Locket Prior to Departure for Toronto Office

The general high esteem in which Mr. R. E. Layfield, works accountant of the Canadian General Electric Company, is held at the works was shown by the addresses and presentations made to him to-day, noon at the office of the C.G.E. In the presence of all the foremen and the office staff. Mr. Layfield, who has been promoted to the Toronto office, was honored by the foremen and office staff the C.G.E. Angling Club, and the C.G.E. Benefit Society, the respective addresses being read and presentations made by Messrs. R. E. Harding and F. Shannon, A. W. Paterson and J. Wilson, and W. H. G. Armstrong. Mr. Layfield received a beautiful gold watch and chain from the foremen and staff, a handsome locket from the Anglers and an appreciative address from the Benefit Society.

Mr. Layfield, in reply, expressed his sincere gratitude to those who had so thoughtfully remembered him. He spoke of the harmonious relations he had had with the foremen and staff, and regretted exceedingly to sever his connection with the Peterborough branch.

The address from the Angling Club was one of immense size and of grotesque design. It's originality of construction and design caused considerable amusement.

THE ADDRESSES.

The addresses read are given below;—

STAFF AND OFFICE

Mr R E Layfield,

Dear Sir,—Upon hearing of your promotion to the head office we feel that we could not let the opportunity pass without expressing to you our appreciation of your many excellent qualities of both head and heart. Having been associated with the work from its earliest days your knowledge has often been of great value to many employees and we have always found you ready to promote anything that was for our welfare or pleasure.

The fact that you have been called by the management to take a higher and more responsible position is sufficient proof of your ability, and while we shall miss your counsel and presence in many of our gatherings we wish to congratulate you on your promotion and ask you to accept this watch and chain as a token of our esteem. When you look upon its face of truth never changing, remember your many friends in Peterborough, who, as the hands of time go on will not forget you.

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY

Mr R E Layfield,
Peterborough, Ont.,

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the Canadian General Electric Company Mutual Benefit Society permit us to express on the eve of your departure from amongst us, our appreciation of the many services which you have always so willingly and so efficiently rendered to us. We remember the enthusiastic manner in which you have labored in the interests of our society from the time of its inception over six years ago till the present, the untiring energy which you have on all occasions put forth in originating means whereby our members were brought into more social intercourse and mutually benefited. We also recognise the fact that it is owing largely to your zeal and splendid executive ability that the CGE. Co. Mutual Benefit Society stands today on such a sound financial basis and has been enabled during the past six and a half years to serve such a commendable purpose.

It is therefore a matter of regret that we are to lose the services of one whose ability and worth have thus been demonstrated, and that the friendship and social relationship, which have existed so long between us are now to be severed. Such farewells are, however, sometimes inevitable and we must reconcile ourselves to them.

We beg to congratulate you on your promotion to a more important position in the service of the company which you have so faithfully served for upwards of eighteen years and hope that in the "Queen City of the west," your ability and unswerving devotion to duty will receive still further recognition in the future.

Respectfully yours

F A SHANNON,
Secretary.
R MORRISON.
President.

FROM THE ANGLING CLUB.

Mr. R. E. Layfield;

Dear Sir.—It is with feelings of deepest regret that we, your associates of the C.G.E. Angling Club, meet together on this occasion to bid you farewell and wish you God-speed. We feel that we sustain a very great loss by reason of your departure but we hope and believe that although you are leaving us you will not sever your connections with the C.G.E. Angling Club and that on occasions of your visits to our city we will have the pleasure of your company at our outings to help us out in our efforts to harvest the "finny crop." During the years that you have been associated with us you have always taken an active interest in the welfare of our club and our success has been in a great measure due to your efforts.

We feel that we cannot let this opportunity pass without expressing in a tangible way, our appreciation of your good qualities and will ask you to accept this locket as a small token of our esteem and best wishes. In the years to come it may help to remind you of the happy hours we have spent together in our cottage home.

COUNTY COUNCIL DEPUTATION HAS RETURNED FROM OTTAWA

Government Promised Careful Consideration of Request Made—Whatthe Deputation Asked for.

The following report of the trip of the County Council to Ottawa has been handed the Review;

County Council, Harvey Council and members of the Board of Trade visited the capital on Wednesday and Thursday, 24th and 25th, for the purpose of interviewing the Government with reference to the following.

The widening of the approaches to the new Buckhorn bridge recently built by the Government over their new dam and soon to be assumed by the county upon conditions previously agreed upon by the Government and and County Council.

The bridge having been built by the Government at a cost so far as traffic provision is concerned, of $13,000, the county paying $5,000, but due to extremely wide conveyances, it is necessary that the approaches be wider. The matter will now be dealt with by the Government at a further cost of $1,000.

The swing over the canal will be moved, from over the locks to the entrance channel thereby doing away with any delay to public highway traffic.

The deputation also strongly urged upon the Government their duty in providing for the Indians a bridge from their reservation to the Ennismore shore, of which plans will soon be prepared and the matter looked into.

The Government also promised to consider a bridge from North to South Harvey to shorten the distance to the shipping point by 10 to 15 miles for a great number of the ratepayers of the county. The proposition is favorably looked upon by the Dominion Government is the province will also assist. The deputation also drew the attention of the Government to the extension of the new Lakefield wharf thereby doing away with cartage from station to steamboats, the G.T.R. to continue their line a couple of hundred yards for the purpose.

The deputation were highly pleased with the reception and promises made by the Government, and cannot express themselves in too energetic a manner upon the interest and trouble taken by their representatives while in Ottawa Messrs. Stratton and Sexsmith looking after their interests in a most efficient manner.

Be at the Box Office early Monday morning if you want seats for "45 Minutes From Broadway".

SERMONS ABOUT OUR OWN CITY

Special Series Being Preached at Mark St. Church by Rev. Mr. Coon

Rev C. H Coon of Mark St. church is preaching a special series of Sunday evening sermons dealing with the welfare of the city. Last Sunday he preached on "The Devil, his personality and power," and tomorrow evening his token will be "The City where Christ and satan met." A week from tomorrow the subject will be "Our city if Christ should leave it to Satan." The next will be "Our city if Satan were cast out," and the final sermon will be based on the subject "In what lies the hope of our city."

The sermons are attracting much interest.

Sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary for one evening without judge, jury, inconvenience, loss of time or loss of reputation. Hear Rev. Alfred E. Lowell, B. A., in George Street Church lecture room. Monday evening. March 1st.—10cts.

ALL SAINTS' CHAMPIONS

Of Junior Church League—Murray Street Defaulted Final Game.

All Saints' won the Junior Church League championship last night by default. Murray street failed to show up with a full team at Knox church rink and as a consequence the game was given to All Saints', who were all on the ice ready to play. Murray street picked up two men and the teams played an exhibition game, All Saints' winning by 4—2. Both teams claim that each have the better team and the argument will be settled as soon as Murray street can get their full team out to play.

THE CUBS AND THE TIGERS

Porter's Men and Kelly's Seven Will Battle on Friday

Lovers of hockey will have a chance to see a rare tit-bit in that line on Friday evening next at five o'clock, when Porter's Cubs and Kelly's Tigers hook up at the Brock street rink arena. The articles for the match were agreed upon last evening, and both teams are getting into shape. It is rumored that several dark horses will make their initial appearance on the night of the combat and preparations are being made to handle a Stanley cup crowd.

WERE DEFEATED AT LAKEFIELD

Strathconas Beaten 13—6---Banquetted After the Game

The Strathconas journeyed up to Lakefield last night and were defeated by 13—6 and 14—10 on the round. The teams put up a good exhibition of hockey and the 400 spectators who were packed into the rink enjoyed the contest. The local team were up against a big disadvantage on the small rink, but played a fast game. The score at half time was 10—2 in favor of Lakefield, but they playedt together better in the second period which ended 4—3 in their favor. Jack Murdock refereed and gave splendid satisfaction. After the game the Strathconas were banqueted by the champions, at which speeches were made by members of both teams, and an enjoyable time was spent. Owing to lack of space a fuller account of the game cannot be given today.

STANDING IN TRENT VALLEY

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Feb 26—In the Trent Valley Hockey League, in district No 1, consisting of Keene, Norwood, and Warkworth, Norwood has won out, while in district No 2, consisting of Havelock, Madoc, Marmora, and Stirling, it is a three cornered tie between the last three teams.

CURLING

The Grits and Tories made a big noise at the curling rink last night. Seven rinks took part and the score ended a tie 75 all. The games were very interesting and exciting.

OBITUARY

GEORGE SCOTT.

The death occurred at Nicholls hospital this morning of Mr Geo Scott of Smith township. He was eighty-seven years of age and was one of the best known residents of the township.

Mr. Scott was the father of Dr. Scott of Peterborough.

A more extended obituary notice will appear on Monday.

The funeral will take place Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

CHARLES JOHNSTON.

The death of Charles Johnston well known in this city, occurred in Toronto yesterday, at the home of his mother, Mrs. T. H. Johnston, 133 Carlaw Avenue. The deceased was a brother of Mr. Arthur T. Johnston, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel and was in the employ of the hotel last year. He had been suffering from lung trouble for the past three years and his demise was not unexpected. Deceased was 26 years of age.

He is survived by his mother four sisters and brothers, two of whom, Frank and Percy are known in Peterborough, Frank having visited there, and Percy was employed for a year on the lumbering contract when the new Collegiate Institute was being constructed.

Mr Arthur Johnston left for Toronto yesterday to attend his brother's funeral, which takes place on Monday afternoon from the family residence to the Necropolis cemetery.

PRESENTATION TO MR. D. WEDGEWOOD

Master Mechanic of Auburn Woollen Mills Who is Leaving City Was Honored — Last Evening

On Friday evening Mr. David Wedgewood who has been master mechanic at the Auburn Woollen mills for a number of years, and who is leaving the employment of the above company to accept a position in Toronto, was called into the office and as there met by the representatives of the management and heads of the several departments and presented with an address and a handsome parlour clock, the address being read by Mr. Wm. Hartley and the presentation made by Mr. Robt. Mann. Mr. Wedgewood although taken completely by surprise, replied in a few well chosen words, thanking his friends for their kind expression of their good will. He assured them that he would always look back to the years of his life as he had always found it a pleasure to work with a body of men where everything had went along as smooth and pleasant as it had done during the years he had been in the employment of the Auburn Woollen Company. In conclusion he wished to thank them all for the uniform kindness shown to him by all since he had come to work among them.

The address was as follows:

Peterborough, Feb, 26th, 1909.

Mr David Wedgewood;

Dear Mr. Wedlewood.—We have recently learned that you are about to sever your connection with the Auburn Woollen Co., in order to assume a responsible position in a neighboring city, we have therefore met this evening to express our regret that you have found it necessary to depart from amongst us and as a token of our appreciation of the many kindness which you have shown to us your fellow workmen, during the number of years that you have so ably discharged your duties as master mechanic of this company in behalf of the management and your fellow employees we ask you to accept this clock as a memento of the pleasant relation that have always existed between us.

Signed on behalf of the management and heads of the several department;

Jas. Kendrey, managing director.

TO THE POLICYHOLDERS

OF THE

CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY

While the year 1908 has been in some respects an uneventful one in life insurance generally, the Report and Balance Sheet shows that in all that goes to make for stability, strength and permanent progress, the Company has enjoyed a large measure of prosperity.

The three outstanding features of the Report for the year have been a decrease in the rate expenses, a decrease in the rate of mortality, and an increase in the rate of interest, all combining to bring about a very gratifying gain in surplus.

THE YEAR'S BUSINESS

The number of applications received during the year was 5,445 for new assurances, amounting to $11,875,383. The policies issued (including revivals) were for $11,226,040.

It is very gratifying that the Canadian new business paid for exceeded that of the previous year. The paid-for new business from Great Britoin and Ireland was about the same as the satisfactory amount obtained in 1907. Owing to the disturbed financial conditions prevailing throughout the United States during the Presidental election year, and also to the fact that the Company had less territory under agency contract, the new business from the United States was somewhat less than in the previous year.

The business in force upon the Company's books at the close of the year was $120,629,360.50, upon 56,937 policies. It may be of interest to point out that this amount includes over $3,400,000 which has been added from time by the Company to the sums assured of those policyholders who elected to apply their profits to increase the face of their policies.

RECEIPTS AND PAYMENTS

A survey of the income and disbursements shows that the cash received for premiums and annuity considerations was $3,746,541.44, while the income from interest, rents, etc., amounted to the very satisfactory sum of $1,589,501.10, making a total income of $5,336,042.54. This represents an increase of $355,602.63 over the corresponding figures of the previous year. The payments to policyholders and annuitants during the year amounted to $1,979,249.59, including $1,348,361.46 for death claims, $317,153.29 for matured endowments, and $313,734.84 for cash profits, surrender values and other benefits.

THE EXPENSES

A substantial reduction in the amount of expenses of management has again been effected.

THE ASSETS

During the year the ledger assets increased by $2,410,193.66, exclusive of the appreciation in market values, and the total assets, as shown by the balance sheet, now stand at $36,713,115.24. In view of the large payments made to policyholders, the Directors consider this increase very satisfactory.

THE ACTUARIAL VALUATION

A detailed valuation of the assurance and annunity contracts of the Company has been made as at 31st December last, the basis of valuation being as follows: For all participating assurances issued after 31st December, 1899, the Hm. 3 per cent. basis; for all other assurances, Hm. 3 1-2 per cent., and for the annuity contracts the British Government Annuity Experience Table, with interest at 3 per cent. and 3 1-2 per cent. After providing for the above liabilities, and for outstanding claims, miscellaneous liabilities and capital stock, the balance sheet shows a surplus over all liabilities of $2,127,639.27, which, of course, includes the unalloted profits on policies that will be distributed to policyholders from time to time.

GROWTH OF THE CANADA LIFE

The table hereunder shows the steady, solid progress that has been made in building up one of the strongest, soundest and most useful institutions in Canada:

Year.	Income	Assets	Business in Force
1878	$ 698,482	$ 3,348,702	$ 18,603,975
1888	1,691,379	8,954,064	43,975,251

THE T.V.C. ATTACKED NOT A WORD IN ITS DEFENCE

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—The House soon got into committee of supply and took up the canal estimates. A vote of $1,000,000 was asked for the Trent canal. Major Currie (N. Simcoe) inquired whether or no any part of this vote would go to the Newmarket canal.

Mr. Graham was not very definite in his reply. He said that out of the Trent canal vote for the current year $852,188 had been expended upon the Ontario and Rice Lake division and $118,785 upon the Holland River division. He assumed that the million now asked for would be distributed in about the same proportions.

Capt. Tom Wallace (C. York) made his maiden speech. He denounced the canal as a farce and appealed to the Minister not to throw away any more public money in this impossible and ridiculous undertaking.

Mr. Sharpe (N. Ontario) made a strong speech, being quite familiar with the subject. He said that not a single fair-minded Liberal in North York but would privately admit that this so-called canal should never have been attempted and ought now to be abandoned.

PROF. CHANT'S COMPREHENSIVE AND INTERESTING LECTURE

Illustrated Address on "The Universe of Stars" Last Night —A Thoroughly Practical and Instructive Treatment of the Subject.

The lecture last evening by Prof. Chant at the Collegiate Institute under the auspices of the local centre of the Royal Astronomical Society proved extremely interesting. Illustrated throughout by limelight views the subject was made as intelligible to the most amateur as to the advanced student of Astronomy.

Dr. Chant prefaced his lecture by comments on the general misconception prevalent regarding the stars. Most people seem to know that the stars you see one month are not the same as those seen a few months later; and again do not know that they move across the sky in the same apparent manner as the moon and sun. In the twelve months journey of the earth round the sun we are brought month after month to a new part of the heavens and the panorama is continually changing accordingly during that period.

Some men have worked very faithfully to count the stars as far as the naked eye could tell. Only about 2000 stars is the record. With the aid of the great telescope at Lick Observatory under careful calculation about 100 million stars will come within the range of vision. However with the aid of the photographic plate more than double this number appear. Truly the stars are numberless.

Light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles a second or equal to over seven times around the earth. It requires about eight minutes for light from the sun to reach us. In the Old Testament appears the statement "I will take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts, etc." This the lecturer explained as undoubtedly referring to the wings of light, the streamers of the rising sun. Thus the traveller would proceed at the tremendous pace of travelling light. Still at this rate he would require some four hours to reach the limit of our solar system, the planet Neptune. Arriving at Neptune he would be surprised to find the stars appear just as far distant as on the start. Selecting however, the very nearest star the traveller would set out for it. To his surprise he finds that four years are consumed before he arrives. To most of the stars it would require eight or ten years and thousands of years to reach some of the great suns shining in our heavens. It is remarkable to think that the stars you see tonight, the light left over four years ago.

Body sensations travel at the rate of about 100 feet per second. It takes this time for the nerves to inform the brain that something has happened to the body in some particular spot. At this rate if a remarkable giant could reach the sun from our earth he could live for more than 140 years, die and not know that he had burned his fingers.

Great Britain pays every day $390,000 interest on her national debt. We in Canada pay about $30,000. This statement showed the extent of the debt. To buy a ticket for a journey to the nearest star at the rate of 100 miles for 2 cents, it would require 100 million pounds more than the national debt of Great Britain.

The professor threw upon the screen beautiful photographs of many wonderful nebula or masses of burning gas. These bore testimony to the belief the stars, suns and worlds were developed therefrom. As most of the nebula were of spiral form it evidenced motion and as the nucleus seemed to be of the nature of a star it was quite conclusive that the development was progressing to that end.

The variability in stars was then covered. Many stars which are bright today fade and possibly then again come into prominence later. Other stars are born to vanish in but a few days.

After one of the most interesting lectures ever given in this city, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker on motion of Rev. G. W. Henderson, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay.

MacGREGOR AND REID NOW OCCUPY FINE NEW PREMISES

Since moving to their new store, at 432 George street, McGregor & Reid electricians, have been busily engaged remodelling and fitting up the premises on all three flats, and have now about completed the arrangements in both store and show parlors upstairs.

Before commencing the fitting up a visit was paid to the leading establishments of the kind in Toronto, and the result is a set of show and and sales rooms equal to the best to be seen anywhere. The upstairs show rooms are sumptuously fitted up, the floors covered with rugs, a piano installed in order to show the styles of piano lamps and panelled walls covered with all the newest styles of wall brackets. Many new and exclusive designs in chandeliers are shown each of which has no duplicate and the designs are the newest on the market.

In addition to these show rooms a show bath room has been elaborately fitted, the bath alone costing $300.00, made of Alexandra porcelain. The firm are doing quite an extensive wholesale business particularly in Watt lamps and shades. They are representatives for the Watt lamps and have the agency for the steel structural material made by Reid and Brown of Toronto.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to visit and inspect the the public to visit and inspect the

HE LOST HIS MONEY AND THOUGHT HE WAS ROBBED

Smith Comingo a Roseneath Indian, and George Chamberlain and Wm. Giles, of Lindsay, found themselves in trouble this morning at the police station. Comingo was charged with being drunk and disorderly and the other two were charged with stealing $25.10, the property of Comingo. The three prisoners elected to be tried summarily by the Magistrate, and Comingo was called to the witness box. He stated that his home was in Roseneath, but he had been working for a lumber company in Huntsville, and had left there last Wednesday morning, had met the other two prisoners in Lindsay, and all three arrived in Peterborough last last night. He had bought a flask of whiskey and paid $1.25 for it, and all three had several drinks on the train. Prisoner admitted that he was "pretty full" and did not have a very clear recollection of what happened until he found himself in the cells, except that he had $26 when he landed in Peterborough.

P.C. Newhall was called, and stated that he had noticed the prisoners near Mr. James Stevenson's, while he was on duty at 11.45 last night. Comingo seemed to be very drunk and was being led by the other two. When near the New Oxford Hotel they turned into an archway but the prisoner got away from them and went over to George street, but was caught again and taken into the lane-way at the rear of the Peterborough Hardware Co. premises. Some men came along at this stage of the game and the prisoners left Comingo and went to the corner of Water and Simcoe streets and waited until they passed. Then they took him into the lane-way at the rear of the Bank of Montreal, and a struggle took place. P.C. Newhall came along then and the two left Comingo and ran towards the post office. He took the prisoner to the cells, and with P.C. Meagher went out to look for the other two men, who were found by P.C. Meagher and taken to the police station. Both denied having been with the prisoner, but later Giles admitted that all three had come down from Lindsay together. When searched Chamberlain had 123 cents and a gold watch, a chain, while Giles only had 25 cents in his possession. Chamberlain had said that he got the jewellery in Buffalo, but later that he found it on a street in Lindsay. This was all the evidence taken.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for Chamberlain and stated that the prisoner had always borne a good reputation and had never been in trouble before. The Magistrate did not think there was evidence enough to warrant a conviction and the three men were discharged, Comingo was given some good advice and as he had considerable money was told to take good care of it and not spend it on whiskey.

LADIES, WHY NOT PRESERVE YOUR YOUTH AND BEAUTY?

Parisian Sage, the quick acting hair restorer, is now for sale in Peterborough, at the drug store of W. Madill, and is sold with a rigid guarantee at 50 cents a bottle.

Parisian Sage has an immense sale and here are the reasons:

It is safe and harmless.

It cures dandruff in two weeks by killing the dandruff germ.

It stops falling hair.

It promptly stops itching of the scalp.

It makes the hair soft and luxuriant.

It gives life and beauty to the hair.

It is not sticky or greasy.

It is the daintiest perfumed hair tonic made.

It is the best, the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Fight shy of the druggist who offers you a substitute; he is unworthy of your confidence.

THE PICTURE POST CARDS ARE LOSING POPULARITY

Peterborough dealers say that the souvenir postal has taken a terrible slump within the past few months. Especially is the decline of the flippant little picture post card noticeable just now. On St. Valentine's day last year the valentine postal was one of the most popular love missives. This year the sales didn't amount to much.

By next summer, it is almost safe to say tourists will be scribbling their messages on ordinary postals, a liberal supply of which they will carry in their grips. The souvenir postal fad has reached its height and now the pendulum is swinging in the other direction.

"The big houses are not importing anything like the number of postals they did last year," said a clerk in a local store to-day. "Postal clerks are of course, glad to hear of the decline of the fad. In some parts of the country, during certain parts of the year, souvenir postals have almost doubled the work of the postal departments. Perhaps in no other city of similar size are souvenir postals in greater demand than they are in Peterborough during the tourist season. Thousands are sent east and south during July, August and September."

WOULD DISPENSE SUMMARY JUSTICE TO MURDERER

Mr Charles Banks of the Banks' Sporting goods store has returned to the city after a weeks visit to Hamilton, Galt, Berlin and Toronto. Mr Banks took much interest in the automobile show held in Toronto and says the exhibit was a very fine one.

Mr. Banks was in Hamilton Thursday afternoon when the brutal murder of Ethel Kinrade took place. He says the whole city was in a ferment on account of the atrocious crime and if the murderer is taken into custody and the fact that he is being arrested becomes known to the public there will be great difficulty in getting him to police headquarters. Judging from the tone of the people of Hamilton the more deeply incensed of them will be anxious to give summary justice to the prisoner if he is captured and they can possibly get their hands on him.

Mr. Banks says all Hamilton is shocked and horrified by the horrible crime.

NOT THIS SUMMER

A Montreal despatch says;—"Arrangements are under way for the coming summer which will practically put Toronto on the main line of the Canadian Pacific for the Western States as well as for Vancouver. Ever since the new Sudbury line has been completed there has been a fast daily train over it between Toronto and Winnipeg which makes close connections with the through transcontinental from Montreal so that the trains are practically through main line trains for and from Toronto. During the summer a new arrangement will be made which will make very close connections between Toronto and Minneapolis the trains leaving Toronto at such time as to make very close connections at Sudbury with the Soo trains so that Toronto passengers will practically get through connection with the Twin Cities which will be a great improvement upon the present service under which the Toronto people travel by the Grand Trunk to North Bay and catch the Soo trains there.

"It had been reported from Toronto that one of the new transcontinentals for the summer would run via Toronto but this will not be done, as the Queen City is too far out of the way, and is already well served with the daily trains to Winnipeg over the Sudbury route."

FAT AND THE DIRECTOIRE

The coming season will be a hard one for fat ladies. The directoire mode endorsers already lift scornful eyebrows at such a plebeianism as bulgy hips. Fat, in short, wheresoever it may be deposited has merited great condemnation and is anathema. In Chicagoese, it is got to go.

Many minds —many methods. 1. Exercise. 2 Dieting. 3 Worrying. 4 Tight lacing. 5 Marmola. All these are suggested but not all should be adopted. For instance, 1 and 2 are not easy, while 3 and 4 are not hygienic. Thus we set them on one side and consider Marmola.

What is it. A harmless powder obtainable of any good druggist, which when mixed with 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 4 3-4 ounces peppermint water and taken after meals and at bedtime will, without causing any inner disturbances or outward flesh wrinklings, reduce the excess flesh proportionately and uniformly, 12 to 16 ounces a day.

HE IS BACK AT WORK AGAIN

Abraham Garand's Rheumatism Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

He Suffered for Five Years and Was Four Months Off Work, But Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

Alfred Station, Ont, Feb 26—Special—After being laid off work for four months by kidney disease and rheumatism, from which he had been a sufferer for five years, Abraham Garand, a section man on the railway here is back at work again and he gives all the credit for his cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I am forty-one years old," Mr. Garand said when asked about his cure. "And have been sectionman here for ten years. For five years I suffered from kidney disease and rheumatism, also sciatica in my right hip, which descended to my feet. For four months I could not work. Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to try them. I used nine boxes in all and today I am advising all who suffer from rheumatism to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Rheumatism and sciatica are caused by diseased kidneys failing to strain the uric acid out of the blood. Cure the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and they will strain the uric acid of the blood. Then you can not have rheumatism.

THEY ARE AT REST

They are at rest:
We may not stir the heaven of their repose
With loud-voiced grief or passionate request.
Or selfish plaint for those
Who in the mountain grots of Eden lie
And hear the fourfold river as it hurries by.

They hear it sweep
In distance down the dark and savage vale;
But they at eddying pool or current deep
Shall never more grow pale;
They hear and meekly muse as fain to know
How long untired, unspent, that giant stream shall flow.

And soothing sounds
Blend with the neighboring waters as they glide;
Posted along the haunted garden's bounds
Angelic forms abide Echoing as words of watch o'er lawn and grove
The verses of that hymn which Seraphs chant above.

HAS SCIENCE DISPLACED INSPIRATION? THE CRISIS IS FAST APPROACHING

Protestant Christianity on the Verge—Mr. F. Mason Resigns From the Official Board of George Street Methodist Church—Writes Letter Giving an Explanation.

Those who are at all abreast of the times and of the rapidly approaching crisis in Methodist and other evangelical churches will appreciate the timely protest of Mr Mason and the clarion-call of Rev Dr Carman.

MR. MASON'S ATTITUDE

TOWARDS THE REV. G. J. JACKSON'S LECTURE

I can assure my brethren that I am not fond of controversy on religious matters. But when such erroneous utterances as those made by Rev. George Jackson of the Sherbourne street Methodist church, Toronto, and who is expected shortly to be connected with Victoria College, as one of the teachers, I cannot do otherwise than protest against the preaching of such doctrine by any of our ministers. I brought this matter before the Official Board of our church and in my simplicity expected a unanimous vote of censure passed upon those utterances, but to my utter amazement not a voice was raised in condemnation, but was told by a prominent member of the Board that all learned men believed as Rev. Geo. Jackson does, and I was asked if I believed the whole Bible. Yes, I said, I do believe the whole of it from Genesis to Revelations, inclusive.

There was a dozen of the brethren present, including two Methodist ministers, and not one of the members stood by me or upheld my views in condemning the minister in question. Now with heavy heart I send in my resignation as member of the Official Board, as a member of the church and as class leader, and in closing would give some references from New Testament bearing on above matter, which to my mind corroborate the truthfulness of the Book of Genesis. I sincerely wish my brethren to carefully go over these references and see if the conclusion of the whole matter is not "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God."

Your Brother in Christ,

F. MASON

We must accept the book of Genesis or reject the whole Bible, because Jesus refers to its teachings — John 8.56-57-58. Luke 11.51. Luke 17, 26-27-28-29-32

Paul also—Gal. 3, 6-7-8-9, and Romans 4, 1-2-3- (II. Tim. 3-16), 20-21-22, 1. Tim. 2, 13-14, Hebrews 2, 16, Hebrews 5, 16-20, Hebrews 6, 13-14- 20, Hebrews 7, 1-2-3-4-6-9-10-15-17, Hebrews 11, 3-4-5-6-7-8-11-17-18- 9-20 21-23.

Peter also. I. Peter 3, 6. Read Matt. 10, 15 and 11, 23-24. And as to rejecting the first chapter of Genesis we cannot do that, either, as Paul refers to Gen. 2, 2 in Hebrews 4, 4, and to the first chapter of Genesis in Hebrews 11,3. Peter referred to the flood in I. Peter, 3, 20 and II. Peter 2, 5-6-7, Jude 7, 11-14, I. John 3, 12. John 1, 1-2-3.

But we tread on dangerous ground, indeed, if we deny the account of the Flood as given in Genesis 6 to 8, for we read in Luke 17. 26, 27 these words; "In the days of Noah. . . They ate, they drank. . . until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all." Who uttered these words? Let us say it softly—the Son of the living God, the Christ whose name we bear.

Now, just for a moment let us follow to its logical conclusion the statement of Mr. Jackson, that "the early chapters of Genesis contain no sober summary of the real beginning of things," and, briefly stated, it will read thus, (1) Genesis' account "false." Therefore (2) Romans, Hebrews, Timothy false. Therefore (3) the Son of God, who was given not only as our sin-bearer, but our example, speaks falsely when He declared that the flood destroyed all who were not in the ark.

CREATION STORY A MYTH

REV. GEORGE JACKSON LECTURES ON GENESIS

Narratives of Creation, Fall and Flood Neither Historic Nor Scientific—Collection of Legends Having Deep Religious Meaning

Not in their historic or scientific sense, but in their deep religious meaning, lies the value of the early chapters of Genesis. Summarized, this was the opinion expressed by the Rev. George Jackson of the Sherbourne Street Methodist Church, who will shortly take up a professorship in connection with Victoria College, in the course of a lecture at the Central Y.M.C.A. last evening. In opening, his address he admitted that to those who had been brought up in the traditional interpretation of Scripture, and at the same time had some acquaintance with the results of modern science, there were parts of the Bible which presented insuperable difficulties. "It is," he said, "hardly less than cruel to allow young men and women to grow up in the belief that the early chapters of the Genesis are literal history, and afterwards send them to a university. There are doubtless many who manage, with more or less stress, and storm, happily to readjust the old faith to the new; others again are content to let the old and the new lie together in their minds side by side, but unstated, while yet others are never troubled because they never think. But besides these there are multitudes who have felt themselves driven silently and sadly to surrender the faith of their fathers because that faith has always been presented to them bound up with doctrine concerning man and the universe which they now hold to be false. If therefore, the Church is to have any Gospel for such as these, if she is to keep the sons she has and recover those whom she has lost, she must learn to restate her faith in terms which do not clash with that wider knowledge into which the Author of all truth is to-day leading men."

It had to be made plain that those earlier chapters of Genesis were not science and were not history and consequently the students must not be surprised to find in them that with which neither science nor history could agree. "A precise theory of the origin of the universe and of man," said Mr. Jackson, "and of sin, is surely no essential part of the Christian faith." The early chapters of Genesis contained no sober summary of the real beginnings of things. If they could lay aside their theological prepossessions they would never accept the story of the creation of man and the fall as a record of actual fact, but say, it was myth, legend or allegory. Similarly in the light of science they could not accept the story of the flood as a universal deluge, of which Noah and his progeny were the only survivors. The records showed that Babylonian civilization was in existence at the date when the flood was supposed to have occurred. The creation and the flood narratives were reproductions of traditions and modes of thought common to a large division of the human race. They were part of the heritage of thought which Israel brought with it from its cradle in the East. But if that were all, they might well ask why the Bible should be loaded with antiquarian timber. If that were all the common sense of mankind would have made short work of these narratives centuries ago. The answer was to be found in their supreme religious worth. It was their religious value; their expression of truth concerning God. To some minds it would seem incredible that God should have made use of myths in making His will known to mankind. At one point in a people's intellectual delevopment myths constituted their intellectual stock, and why, then, should it be surprising to find a universal phenomenon utilised as a vehicle of Divine truth? The modern interpretation of the Old Testament did away with the need of apologists, and cut the ground away from beneath the feet of the scoffer. It was significant that neither Bradlaugh nor Ingersoll had had successors, and they never would, because a changed method of interpretation had robbed them of their miserable stock in trade.

CRITIZES REV. MR. JACKSON

English Divine Takes Exception to a Recent Address

"With all its great organization and the money spent in the best possible training for preachers and and lay workers, the great cry of the Church today is the dearth of conversions," said Rev. James Lyall of London, Eng., last night in the second address of a series he is giving in the Queen Street West Mission, Northcote ave., and Queen street. "In England during the past year some of the leading denominations have not only made no progress, but have lost thousands of members. And it is no wonder when we read articles in the daily press like those reporting the address of the Rev. George Jackson the other evening.

"When a man denies any part of the Bible," continued Mr. Lyall, "especially from a Christian platform, he is undermining the faith of the masses. Men are not coming to churches to hear of myths and fables, and this kind of unbelief is murdering the Church of God and paralysing her aggressive campaign for the redemption of man."

Rev. Elmore Harris Challenges Him to Name More Than One Pastor

WHO WILL AGREE WITH HIM

In His Views of Genesis—Matter of Faith and Faith Rests on Fact

My first remark would be, and I write in all kindness but with appropriate firmness that the statements of Mr. Jackson are, first of all, infidel in their character. We do not wish to be misunderstood in making a statement of this kind. It is not affirmed that the speaker in question is an infidel but that his statements regarding these early parts of the Bible are those of such infidels as Paine, Bradlaugh, and Ingersoll. These objections to the Scripture have been made over and over again in the history of the past century. Hon. W. E. Gladstone and Father Lambert and others have effectively disposed of them. That these men have had no successors as the lecturer affirmed is due to the fact that their sentiments are disseminated through the so-called Christian forces. There is, therefore, no need in these days for their propaganda as the lecturer so frankly states.

The statements regarding the mythical, legendary, and unreliable character of the narratives in question were presented to the audience present without the slightest attempt at the

PRODUCTION OF PROOF

The statement made by the lecturer to your reporter that his views of the early chapters of Genesis are taught to the theological students in all of our colleges in this city" would be sad enough if it were true but there are some of us who will not believe this statement of Mr. Jackson's unless it is substantiated by the leaders of those colleges themselves. It is to be hoped that such leaders will either affirm or repudiate the statements of the lecturer. He also intimated to the reporter that the large majority of Methodist ministers hold the same views as himself, but felt it incumbent upon them to hold them in reserve.

As one who has had a very great opportunity of meeting with the ministers of the Methodist Church in our country, I can confidently affirm that the overwhelming majority of them utterly repudiate the statements of Mr. Jackson regarding the early narrative of Genesis. I do not believe that Mr. Jackson can name more than one single minister in the active pastoral service of his own denomination in the city of Toronto who will endorse his position regarding this part of the Old Testament Scriptures.

THE MYSTERIOUS OPERATIONS OF THE RUSSIAN POLICE

Startling Stories in Paris Papers—A "Mercenary Monster" is the Term Applied—Excites Comment of European Press.

The wildest and most fantastic inventions of Eugene Sue Alexandre Dumas or Gaboriau have been eclipsed by the disclosures recently made in the Paris papers with regard to the "hideous" and "mysterious" operations of the Russian police. We have there revealed "a mercenary monster" declared to be unparalleled in depravity by any of the dark and sinister figures which have recently passed over the stage of Russian history.

As detailed in the European press the circumstances of this strange case are as follows;—A member of the Russian Socialist Union of that extreme class who look upon violence as the most powerful instrument of reform and aim at assassinating powerful members of the bureaucracy, has recently denounced another member as an agent provocateur of the police. The agent provocateur is a man who incites his comrades to deeds of violence and then delivers them into the hands of the authorities. The treacherous spy in this instance is a civil engineer named Eugene Phillipovitch Azeff. "These fighting revolutionists ever ready with the bomb the pistol, and the knife," says Mr. Jaures in the Humanitt (Paris) "have been obliged to ask themselves in the terrible question—'Had not their party for seven years been a mere puppet in the hands of the police officers of the Czar and an involuntary instrument of the criminal coterie who create and sustain the autocracy?'"

The person who found out the machinations of Azeff is a certain Bourtseff who at last succeeded in bringing Azeff's case before the revolutionary tribunal. Before they could come to a decision Azeff fled and is now believed to be in Russia. According to Bourtseff speaking to a representative of the Humanite

"The part played by this devil incarnate extended to every conspicuous tragedy of our revolution and the number of his victims young men and girls old men and women, dispatched by him to the gallows, the knout or to Siberia, can not be calculated."

Azeff was particular says Bourtseff in procuring the execution as traitors of those miserable creatures who, he thought, were beginning to suspect his real character. Azeff kept the police busy with the contemplated crimes of his party. The assassination of the dictative Plehve, the murder of the Czar's uncle, the Grand Duke Sergius Governor-General of Moscow, the unsuccessful assaults on the Grand Dukes Nicholas and Vladimir on General Trepoff, and on the Czar himself were engineered by Azeff says his accuser Bourtseff and of course made known beforehand to the police.

The same witness affirmed that "the greatest agent provocateur of his age" was set to work for the death of Alexis because the court faction to which the Grand Duke belonged were plotting the dethronement of the Czar as a man "too weak" and "too liberal" in dealing with the revolutionary crisis. According to the Intransigeant (Paris) every Russian revolutionist in the French capital declares that Azeff cannot escape the fate of Gapon who played the same role with brief success. Says a Russian "student" and of course a Socialist interviewed by a French journalist:

"The wretched spy"—Azeff — received annually 100,000 francs ($20,000) from the Russian Government. He was a short, fat man with long unkempt hair. He associated with us, and we believed in him. From the first day he came among us this wonderful plotter, this genial schemer, sold his brethren and betrayed women into the hands of jailers and hangmen. He incited us to acts of violence in the interests of the Government."

The Vienna press are inclined to look upon the "revelations" of the Paris papers as little more than canards and the Neue Frie Presse remarks:

"The revelations concerning the agent provocateur Azeff have produced a profound sensation even in Russia, but their indirect consequences are more to be regretted. Not less than seven Russian newspapers which printed these Paris revelations have been suspended and fined from 300 to 1000 rubles. Yet these papers did not print the items as true or even probable. Indeed the greatest caution ought to be observed in accepting these reports of the Parisian papers. The Russian police have too many sins already upon their conscience to warrant our further loading them with imputations of this terrible character. It is to be wished in the interests of pure history that people would leave off perplexing themselves with these dark and enigmatic tales of the Russian revolution."

"ORANGE LILY SAVED MY LIFE"

These words or expesions having the same meaning, are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who have suffered agonies from falling of the womb, others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily, and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leuchorrhœa painfull periods, etc, etc. For all these and other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive scientific never failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial actually proves its merit, I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box worth 35c, sufficient for ten days' treatment, to every suffering woman who will write for it. To his inherited five millions marriage had added the colossal fortune of a beautiful heiress, whose extravagances aggregated less than his own solely through the limitations of her sex. Yet, were it not for the self imposed handicap of adhering strictly to the somewhat old fashioned precept that jewels should be acquired only through affectionate beneficence, Mrs. Fernmore might have succeeded in surpassing the princely prodigalities of her lord and master.

"It was this way," Billy was saying in his own inimitable manner and awake to the realization of having a "good one" to tell. "A few days ago the lady of my house took wings for New York—a little spree of her own, you understand. And, for Billy Fernmore, I kept out of mischief for a time fairly well. After waiting days, lamblike, for her return, restlessness"—and here Fernmore's shameless affectation of the neglected husband became so irresistibly funny that it provoked prolonged laughter from his listeners, even Droom showing his yellow snags and stretching his mouth to the fullest extent of the law as he joined in the general chorus—"restlessness gave way to recklessness, and in desperation I invited a half dozen of the oldest and most distinguished widowers in town to dine with me at the hotel, where they were informed they were to be honored by the presence of a bevy of the season's prettiest debutantes. My stars, but they were a fine collection of old innocents!" Fernmore threw himself back in his chair and roared at the recollection.

"Billy's a wonder when he's wound up!" Medford's whispered aside to the lady on his right met with a simple nod of the head; for, despite Miss Clegg's well feigned interest in Mr. Medford when Rigby was present, on other occasions there was no pretense of enjoyment of his society.

"Among those present—to use the correct phrase," said Billy, after having refreshed himself with sufficient champagne to proceed, "were two retired merchants, a venerable logician, a doddering banker and a half blind college professor. Of course I had to make some excuse for Mrs. Fernmore's absence. For the life of me I cannot now remember what yarn I told them, but they were too anxious to be presented to the gay young women not to swallow it—whole. The old boys fairly swamped the girls with their senile attentions. It was a lively supper party—my word! And they went home unanimously declaring that the debutantes of the present day discounted, at least in dash and go, the charmers of fifty years ago."

Amidst the confusion of peals of merriment which greeted the genial raconteur, Miss Cable, to whom the story did not especially appeal, whispered in awed tones:

"Graydon, who on earth is that queer, spectacular looking man with your father?"

"Oh, that's Droom—isn't he a character? He's been with the governor since I was a child. In those days his looks used to frighten me almost to death. I fancy he's had a sad life, don't you know."

"There is something positively awful in his face," returned the girl, as her eyes faltered and dropped to her plate on unexpectedly meeting those of the subject of her remark.

"Sh-h!" came from Medford, and then, "Come, Billy—what's the point—or the moral, as they say in novels?"

"Fernmore is a rattling good chap at heart," Graydon was saying to Jane, "but I can't stand that Med"—

"Yes, yes; go on, Mr. Fernmore," broke in several voices in eager expectancy.

"The moral?" Billy's eyes were twinkling. "The joke, rather, is on me. When Mrs. Fernmore reached home I thought it wise to say nothing about the affair, but I had completely underestimated the persistency of these rejuvenated venerables. They were not satisfied—wanted to know more about the girls, and the next day in deep but joyous simplicity half a dozen old men asked their married daughters and close friends at the clubs what family of Brown a certain debutante belonged to, who was the father of Miss Jones and how long had the family of Miss Robinson lived in the city, together with a lot of amazing questions. And failing to derive even the remotest satisfaction from the social register, the woman members of their families besieged my innocent wife with more or less shocked inquiries as to an entertainment of mine at which their aged relations were present. Well, the game was up! I owned up—confessed to the girls being actresses and begged for mercy."

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

"And I forgave him," supplemented Mrs. Fernmore smilingly. "Boys will be boys."

"Whew!" whistled Billy, in conclusion. "It was no end of a lark! I would not have missed it for the world; but the old chaps will never, never forgive me."

As the gentleman finished, Bansemer was looking at Droom with amusement. The old clerk was shaking his head in a manner that signified disapproval.

"How's that for doings in swagger society, eh, Droom? If any one but Billy Fernmore had done that he would have been ostracised forever. Nothing like millions"—

"I don't believe true aristocrats would do that," interrupted Droom half angrily.

"These are the aristocrats—money aristocrats; the others have lost the name—forgotten. Come, let's go over yonder. We can talk there."

Bansemer called for the bill and settled it; then, slowly rising, ostentatiously waved his adieus to the alcove and deserted the scene for Chapin & Gore's. Droom meekly followed his employer.

For some time neither spoke. In their stall each was busy with his own thoughts and speculations.

"I think I've made a mess of it with Mrs. Cable," began Bansemer. "She"—

"I wouldn't mention names," cautioned Droom, with a look at the top of the partition.

"She's very likely to fight back, after all."

"What was your demand?"

"Money," said Bansemer quietly.

"Humph!" was Droom's way of saying he lied.

"Harbert has a purpose in coming here, Elias. We must prepare for him."

"We are as well prepared as we can expect to be. I guess it means that we'll have to get out of Chicago."

"Curse him!" snarled Bansemer. "I don't care a rap about myself, but it will be all up with Graydon if anything—er—unpleasant should happen to me," said Bansemer, with a wistful glance at his glass. Then in subdued tones he told of the meeting with Harbert. Droom agreed that the situation looked unpleasant, and all the more so in view of what Eddie Deever had mentioned in connection with the marshal's office. He repeated the story as it had come from the babbling youngster's lips, utterly deceived by the guileless emissary from the office downstairs.

"I'm going to stand my ground," said Bansemer, steadily drumming on the table with his stiff fingers. "They can't prove anything, and the man who makes a charge against me will have to substantiate it. I'll not run a step."

"Then," said Droom coarsely, "you must let Mrs. Cable alone. She is your danger signal. I tell you, Mr. Bansemer, she'll fight if you drive her into a corner. She's not a true aristocrat. She comes of a class that doesn't give up."

"Bah! She's like the rest. If Harbert doesn't get in his nasty work she'll give in like all the others."

"I thought you said you'd do nothing to mar the happiness of Graydon," sneered Droom.

"I don't intend to, you old fool. This affair is between Mrs. Cable and me. If she wins, I'll give up. But understand me, I'm perfectly capable of knowing just when I'm beaten."

"I only know your financial valor," said Elias dryly.

"That's all you're expected to know, sir."

"Then we won't quarrel about it," said the other, with his sweetest grin.

"Umph! Well, pleasantries aside, we must look ourselves over carefully before we see our New York friend. He must not find us with unclean linen. Elias, I'm worried, I'll confess, but I'm not afraid. Is there anything that we have bungled?"

"I have always been afraid of the chorus girl business. I don't like chorus girls." Bansemer at another time would have smiled.

It was past midnight when the two left the stall and started in separate ways for their north side homes. The master felt more secure than when he left the home of David Cable earlier in the night. Elias Droom said at parting:

"I don't like your attitude toward Mrs. C. It's not very manly to make war on a woman."

"My good Elias," said Bansemer, complacently surveying himself in the small mirror across the stall, "all men make war on women one way or another."

He did not see Droom's ugly scowl as he preceded that worthy through the doorway.

The next morning Bansemer walked down the Drive. It was a bright, crisp day, and the snow had been swept from the sidewalks. He felt that a visit from Herbert during the day was not unlikely, and he wanted to be fresh and clear headed. Halfway down he met Jane Cable coming from the home of a friend. He never had seen her looking so beautiful, so full of the joy of living. Her friendly, sparkling smile sent a momentary pang of shame into his calloused heart, but it passed with the buoyant justification of his decision to do nothing in the end that might mar his son's happiness.

She was walking to town and assured him that she rejoiced in his distinguished company. They discussed the play and the supper party.

"Now that I'm engaged to Graydon I'm positively beginning to grow sick of people," Miss Cable declared—and as they all declare at that age and stage.

"Well, you'll soon recover," he smiled. "Marriage is the convalescence of a love affair, you know."

"Oh, but most of the men one meets are so hopelessly silly—tiresome," she went on. "It's strange too. Nearly all of them have gone to college—Yale or Harvard."

"My dear Jane, they are the unfortunate sons of the rich. You can't blame them. All Yale and Harvard men are not tiresome. You should not forget that a large sprinkling of the young men you meet at the pink teas were sent to Yale or Harvard for the sole purpose of becoming Yale and Harvard men; nothing more. Their mothers never expected them to be anything else. The poor man sends his son to be educated; the rich man usually does it to get the boy away from home, so that he won't have to look at him all the time. I'm happy to say that I was quite poor when Graydon got his diploma."

"Oh, Graydon isn't at all like the others. He is a man!" cried Jane, her eyes dancing.

"I don't mean to say that all rich men's sons are failures. Some of them are really worth while. Give credit unlimited to the rich man's son who goes to college and succeeds in life in spite of his environment. I must not forget that Graydon's chief ambition at one time was to hunt Indians."

"He couldn't have got that from his mother," said she accusingly. Bansemer looked at her sharply. He had half expected on meeting her to observe the first sign that the Cable family had discussed him well, but not favorably. Her very brightness convinced him that she at least had not been taken into the consultation.

"I am afraid it came from his horrid father. But Graydon is a good boy. He couldn't long follow the impulses of his father. I dare say he could be a sinner if he tried, too. I hate an imbecile. An imbecile, to my mind, is the fellow without the capacity to err intentionally. God takes care of the fellow who errs constantly. Give me the fellow who is bright enough to do the bad things which might admit him to purgatory in good standing, and I'll trust him to do the good things that will let him into heaven. I often wonder where these chaps go after they die—I mean the Yale and Harvard chaps who bore you. It takes a clever chap to have any standing at all in purgatory. Where do they go, Jane? You are wise for your years and sex. There surely must be a place for the plain asses."

"Oh," said she, "I suppose they have a separate heaven, just as the dogs have."

"No doubt you're right," he agreed, smiling, "but think how bright the dogs are, as a rule."

"Bobby Rigby says a dog is worth more than his master. People will steal a dog, he says."

"I saw him at your house last night. Did you meet Mr. Harbert?"

"No. Mother said he came in with Bobby."

"How is Mrs. Cable this morning? I think she—er—complained of a sick headache last night."

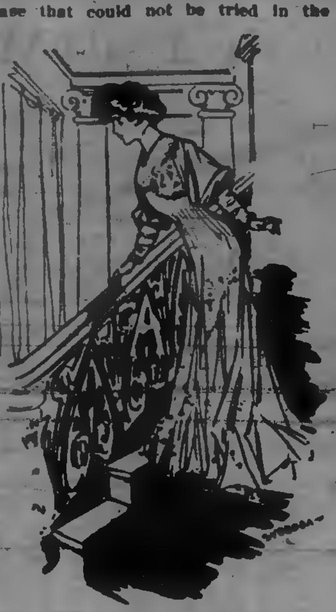
"She has such a frightful headache that she couldn't get up this morning."

"Indeed! Will you carry my respects and sympathy to her?"

"Thank you, yes. But why don't you come in and see us, Mr. Bansemer?"

"In a day or so, gladly."

Bansemer was not approached by Harbert that day nor the next, nor any other day soon, in fact. It was not until after the third day had expired that he heard from Mrs. Cable. Her silence was gratifying and significant; it meant that she was struggling with herself—that she had taken no one as yet into her confidence. He was too wary to feel secure in his position, however. He abandoned every case that could not be tried in the cleanest light, and he destroyed his footprints in those of the past more completely than ever. David Cable was disposed to be agreeable when they met, and Rigby's manner had lost the touch of aloofness. Altogether the situation did not look so dark as it had on the night of the blizzard.



Jane had started downstairs.

He guessed at Mrs. Cable's frame of mind during the three days just past by the tenor of her message over the telephone. She did no more than to ask him to drop in before 5 for a cup of tea, but he saw beyond the depth of her invitation.

He went and had a few minutes alone with her because he was shrewd enough to drop in before 5. No one else came until after that hour had struck. He was studiously reserved and considerate. There was nothing in his manner to indicate that he was there as anything more than the most casual sipper of the beverage that society brews. It was left for her to make the advances.

"We must come to an understanding," she said abruptly. "I cannot endure the suspense, the uncertainty"—

Bansemer raised his brows with grave condescension.

"Then you have not confessed to Mr. Cable?" he asked, with perfect unconcern. "Do you know I was rather hoping that you would have saved me the trouble of doing so."

"It means so much to"—

"Ah, I see you find it hard to lose the ground you have gained socially." He stirred his tea steadily.

"It isn't that. I don't care for that. It's for Jane and David. I can only offer to buy your silence, nothing more," she said with hurried words. "I own shares in the railroad. They're worth $20,000. Will you take them?"

"My dear," he said, leaning quite close to her, "I am not seeking to blackmail you as you seem to imagine. I have only tried to tell you that I love you."

"Oh!" she exclaimed, with a shudder of disgust. His face was quite close to hers. She could feel his warm breath on her cheek, and she drew away quickly. His hand hovered close to hers as it lay in her lap.

There was an eyewitness to this single picture in the brief scene. Jane had started downstairs. From the upper steps she could look into the drawing room below. She could not help seeing Bansemer's fervent attitude. She heard nothing that he said. The girl paused in surprise. A feeling as of dread—she could not explain—crept over her. A chill struck into her heart.

It was as if she had awakened from a sweet sleep to look out upon a bleak, horrid morning.

Involuntarily she shrank back, quite beyond the actual vision, but not free from it. She stood straight and tense and silent at the top of the stairs, her hand clasping the rail. She could hear her heart throb plainly. There was no mistaking the picture as it had burst upon her unsuspecting eyes. A great fear, a dark uncertainty, welled up in her heart.

It was not until the butler admitted other callers that she found the courage to turn her eyes toward the drawing room. Although she succeeded in hiding the fact, it was difficult to approach and greet James Bansemer with the naturalness of the unsuspecting. His manner was beyond reproach, and yet for the first time she saw the real light in his black eyes. She talked to him as if nothing had happened to make her distrustful, but no self control in the world could have checked the growth of that remorseless thing called suspicion. For her own sake, for her mother's, for Graydon's, she tried to put it down. Instead it grew greater and stronger as she looked into his eyes, for in them she saw the light that heretofore had escaped her notice.

And this was the father of the man whom she was to marry, the one whom she loved with all her heart and soul! This the man who would degrade her own mother! Her mother—she looked at her with a new question in her eyes.

Half a dozen people came and went. James Bansemer was the last to leave. He met the girl's tense, inquiring look from time to time, but he could not have felt its meaning. There was nothing in her voice which might have warned him, although it sounded strained and without warmth on her own ears. In spite of herself she wondered how he would act in saying goodby to her mother. Although she tried with all the might of her will to look away, she could not take her eyes from the pair as Bansemer arose to depart.

His manner was most circumspect. The hand clasp was brief, even formal, and there was no look in his eyes to indicate the presence of anything but the most casual emotions. After his departure Mrs. Cable turned to Jane and complained of a frightful headache and went to her room to lie down for awhile before dinner. Jane's gaze followed her steadily as she ascended the stairs. Then she walked to the window and looked out upon the street, a hundred perplexities in her mind.

Her father was standing in the middle of the sidewalk, looking down the darkening street. His cab was turning the corner below, showing that he had been standing there for longer than a minute. She watched him with interest. What had happened in the street to hold his interest so closely? It was Jane who opened the door and let him in. As she kissed his cold cheek she noticed the frown on his brow and caught the strange gleam in his eyes. His greeting was less warm than usual, and he went to his room upstairs without removing his hat or coat below. But not before he sent a quick, keen glance about the drawing room to find if James Bansemer had been the single visitor of the afternoon.

"Where is your mother?" he asked from the stairs, without looking back.

"She has just gone to her room," Jane replied, a chill shooting through her veins. Some strange, unnatural impulse compelled her to add, as if the explanation were just and necessary, "We have had a lot of people in drinking tea, and mother has a headache."

She watched him ascend the steps and turn into his smoking room. The door closed sharply, and a wave of inexplicable relief rushed over her. Her hands were cold. She went to the fireplace and held them out to the blaze. Her ears were alert for sounds from above—alert with a strange fear which choked her with its persistence. She dreaded the opening of her father's door and his footsteps as they crossed to her mother's room. She waited for these sounds, minute after minute, but they did not come. The fire would not give warmth to her hands; the chill seemed to spread. In her new consciousness she felt that a tragedy was just begun.

The Birds' Nests That Men Eat.

The swifts arrive in the Andaman islands toward the end of November, but they take their time in building the nests, which are formed from a gelatinous secretion from the salivary glands of those beautiful members of the swallow tribe. If there has been a wet December, the first crop of nests is generally a poor one, being soiled by the damp and drippings from the roofs of the caves. Collectors, however, begin in January to go around the island to the different caves in an open boat. The best quality resemble pure isinglass and are worth their weight in silver. Afterward there are two other collections. The caves in which the nests are found are scattered about the islands. Some are far inland, others in rocks concealed in mangrove swamps.—London News.

Bogus Antiques.

Old statuary is made in great quantities in Italy. Bohemia and Belgium furnish glass of the middle ages, and every European capital has its makers of antiques. Berlin and Vienna makers are kept busy with the home trade, but Paris, London, Brussels, Rome, Florence, Smyrna and Munich are commercial centers for this class of merchandise. The business has grown to such proportions that Nuremberg, Vienna and Livorno have museums where counterfeit works are exhibited and where their style of manufacture may be studied.—Berlin Post.

Chinese Flat Noses.

"The Chinese mother," the ethnologist explained, "carries her babe in a sack on her back. The babe's nose is pressed against her. Day in and day out, all through its babyhood, the little thing's soft and malleable nose is pressed against its mother's back. Hence it is no wonder, is it, that the Chinese are a flat nosed race?"

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WILL CURE YOUR BABY

If your little ones are subject to colic indigestion, constipation, worms simple fevers, or the other minor ailments of childhood, give them Baby's Own Tablets and see how quickly the trouble will disappear. But better still, an occasional dose of Tablets given to well children will keep these troubles away. Mrs. Allan A. MacDonald, Island River, N.B., says: "My baby suffered greatly from constipation and stomach trouble and Baby's Own Tablets cured him. I always keep the Tablets in the home now." ABUSING THE PRIVILEGES his county franked long after the close of the session. He calculated that in the whole Dominion the revenue of the country had been defrauded out of about $60,000 in this way.

Mr. Maddin argued that what the Solicitor-General had done was a flagrant violation of the law, which the Solicitor-General was paid to enforce.

Mr. Perley produced an envelope which had enclosed literature sent into Argenteuil County free. It was franked "S.A.F., M.A." As the Postmaster-General, said Mr. Perley, had said he would reprimand a colleague guilty of franking campaign stuff outside of the session, let him reprimand Hon. Mr. Fisher before the House.

After some further discussion, the Postmaster-General admitted that a state of affairs had been disclosed which he would not tolerate any longer. His attention had been called to the case of a new member who had franked one thousand circulars offering shares in a mining proposition. Such a practice must be put a stop to.

Mr. Carvell interposed with the observation that the Postmaster-General might send offenders to the Bishop of British Columbia to confess. No doubt the bishop would give assurance that no politician was concerned in it.

Mr. Burrell of Yale-Cariboo reprimanded the last speaker for his undignified style of debate, and for his "cheap jibes."

Somebody had robbed the Treasury and should be punished, said Mr. Foster.

Mr. Fisher's defence was that the Ministers enjoyed the privilege of "franking" out of session.

Mr. Bureau repeated that he had franked out Liberal newspaper letters, but did not consider that warranted Mr. Foster in branding him as a public thief. It was not to save a dollar a week that he had used the frank, but because he knew it had been done for years, and he used it in good faith.

Two suggestion were made yesterday to Hon. Mr. Fielding and Sir Richard Cartwright by E. C. Drury and other members of the Dominion grange for the curbing of combinations in restraint of trade.

One was that an officer or board be appointed by the Government to investigate the combines, and that where these were shown to restrain trade and work hardship on small independent dealers, the tariff should be so lowered so as to compel a return to fair prices, and that in the case of protest or application to have the tariff on certain articles reimposed the onus of proof that the unfair conditions have been removed must be on the party applying.

The other suggestion was that the Government create a commission similar to the Railway Commission to fix prices on commodities.

Mr. Fielding also reminded the delegation that there was an anti-combine clause in the criminal code which any person was free to take advantage of. He thought that it would not facilitate the pursuit of the combines by creating a board. Valuable as had been the Railway Board it very often required weeks and months to reach a conclusion, and what the public wanted was speed in dealing with the combines. However, he promised to lay the views of the deputation before the Government.

Sir Richard Cartwright's idea was that the remedy lay in rooting out the protective system. He had not, however, succeeded in convincing his colleagues of that.

Restrict Morphine Habit.

Shanghai, Feb. 27.—The international opium commission has practically concluded its work here.

Nine resolutions were adopted. One recognized the unswerving sincerity of the Chinese Government's efforts to suppress the opium traffic.

In another resolution the commission finds that unrestricted morphine traffic constitutes a grave danger.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS LEADS CONTEST TO-DAY

Wm. A. Mowry Secures First Place in Men's City List—Many Heavy Voters, but No Other Changes of Standing.

THE CLUB OFFER CLOSES MARCH 8

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

After a week of remarkably heavy voting by nearly all the active candidates—a score or more of as fine hustlers as ever entered a contest—Miss Maude Adams secures first place, replacing Miss Rose P. Moore, who held the post of honor two days. It must be confessed that the pace which has been set is a furious one at this stage of the "game." While the speed is rather rapid, it is not likely to be decreased until the clock strikes eight on the closing night, a little over three weeks hence. Next week is the most important since the contest began on account of the club offer. All the wide-awakes are dreaming of new subscribers at night and gathering them in during the day. Who will get the greatest number of clubs—the extra votes which count so wonderfully at the finish;

The leaders to-day;

HIGH VOTE

One week from next Monday the great club offer for new subscribers closes. It certainly is a very short time, but still it is time sufficient for the leaders and subscribers of the Review to decide upon the persons they consider the most worthy to have the honors and enjoy the splendid awards.

The real work of the contest has just begun and no one at present has any great advantage. It is an even race for all, and the support received by the various candidates during the next three weeks will decide the winners.

Don't think because you have a club or two promised that you have the Review contest cinched. The way to do so it so get them. Don't be too sure. The only way to be sure is to get the subscriptions and keep getting them until the contest is finished.

Over-assurance is deadly—a narcotic which drowses action and alertness. Relaxed energy means an opening for the one behind.

If you fought to get up there's even more reason why you should fight to stay up. Your real antagonist is the hard-hitting, clean-cut people who feel the mood of battle in their blood and bone—who know that they can get anything, provided they fight for it long enough. They'll give no odds and they'll take no quarter. You can't put them down except by keeping ahead of them. The way to keep ahead is to get the subscriptions before the "other fellow" does. Get a "club" or two while you have the chance. strength, your own knowledge of your strength, your own knowledge of friends, your own confidence in your ability constitute the only basis upon which to work successfully.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number scheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

INCREASED INTEREST IN MEETINGS

Attendance is Increasing — Rev. Jas. Lyall Spoke in Afternoon at Bethany Tabernacle

At the afternoon session the Rev. James Lyall spoke on "God in the midst of His people," quoting passages in both Old and New Testaments, where the words "in the midst" are used.

Numbers 14:14 Thou Lord art among this people, thou art seen face to face, thy cloud standeth over them — overshadowing —and thou goest before them. The presence of God insures joy, peace and fulness of blessing to those who trust in Him.

Matthew 18:20 Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. As priest to cleanse for worship. As prophet to teach us and we ought to give heed, obey and let Him use us. As King to reign in our lives, and to lead us in triumph over temptations and difficulties. Hebrews 2; 11-12. In the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee. Praising God in songs of His people. Sing and make melody in your heart to the Lord. John 20; 19 Jesus stood in the midst. In spite of closed doors, or place, or circumstances, always, everywhere present. He gave them peace, and showed them his hands and his side as evidence that it was he who had made peace for those who will believe. He gave them also a commission. "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. He breathed on them and saith receive ye the Holy Spirit. Great gladness of heart was and will always be the result of such personal knowledge and fellowship with Jesus.

The subject of the evening discourse was the "Will of God," and the blessedness and duty of knowing and entering into it. Many said at the close o fthe meeting that the hour had passed too quickly.

This evening both the Rev Mr Lyall and the Rev. Dr Zimmerman will take part in the meeting, and tomorrow morning, afternoon and evening these gentlemen will continue to give stirring messages to hungry and anxious hearts.

TRY THIS RECIPE FOR RHEUMATISM

A Simple Mixture Anyone Can Prepare, Makes the Kidneys Filter Out Acids.

To make up enough of the "Dandelion treatment," which is claimed to be relieving nearly every sufferer who uses it for backache, kidney complaint, sore weak bladder and rheumatism; get from any good prescription pharmacy one ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon and three ounces Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

Those who have tried it claim that it acts gently but thoroughly on the kidneys relieving backache and bladder trouble and urinary difficulties before you realize it. Many cases of rheumatism are known to have been relieved within a few days the pain and swelling diminishing with each dose.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter which cause not only Rheumatism but numerous other diseases. Every man and woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture as it is certain to do much good and may save you from much misery and suffering after a while.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. DEPUTY FIRE CHIEF WAS BADLY INJURED IN BRUTAL ASSAULT

Firemen Craig, Hawes and Chapman Under Arrest---Are Charged With the Assault—Took Place at Fire Hall on Saturday Evening.

Bail Refused Them at This Morning's Police Court---Prisoners Resented Being Registered for Coming in Late---Deputy Chief Grange in Serious Condition---Alleged Assailants Said to Have Been Drinking.

One of the most sensational happenings in the city occurred on Saturday night when Deputy Chief Grange of the local fire department, was brutally assaulted while on duty at the fire hall and he now lies at his home, 502 George street, in a precarious condition. As a result of the assault three ex-firemen, Harry Chapman, Bert Craig and George Hawes are under arrest on the charge of having "assaulted George Grange on Saturday, Feb. 27th, and beat him and ill-treated him, causing him actual bodily harm."

AT POLICE COURT.

The assault occurred shortly after 7.30 on Saturday evening, and Grange was beaten to unconsciousness. There is an interesting story of what transpired that resulted in the assault, some of the firemen resenting Grange's promotion to deputy chief.

At this morning's police court the prisoners were arranged before P.M. Dumble on the the charge mentioned above. No evidence was taken however, and they were remanded for eight days.

wanted bail but this application was opposed by County Crown Attorney Wood and the Magistrate. His Worship said that owing to the serious condition of the injured man he did not feel justified in granting bail, as Grange's injuries might prove fatal for all he could tell and in that case a more serious charge would be laid against the prisoners.

The men appeared in the dock in their uniforms, which they wore when arrested. They did not plead or elect. All seemed to be quite composed, but were much interested while the controversy concerning the bail was going on. When they found it would not be allowed, however, they took the Magistrate's ruling quite complacently.

On their removal to the police station cells they were allowed to remain there until their civilian attire was brought to the station. When they had changed their uniforms they were taken to the gaol. They come up again for hearing on March 9th.

BEGINNING OF TROUBLE.

When ex-deputy Chief Taylor resigned Chief Howard had in mind two men as suitable successors. It was the intention of the chief to place these two men on trial for the position of deputy. Fireman Grange, the injured man, was the first to be placed on probation. He was given the title of foreman. Grange is a man very well known in Peterborough and has the benefit of a splendid military training, being sergeant of the 57th band for a number of years, a position he held with credit to himself and his fellow officers, who were reluctant to grant him a release from the band.

The proposed appointment of Fireman Grange to the position of assistant chief did not meet with the approval of some of the firemen, who are adverse to discipline. They immediately took action and petitioned the Fire, Water and Light Committee to block the appointment. This is a matter that is governed by by-law and entirely in the hands of the chief of the department and therefore the committee took no action.

CRAIG AND HAWES LATE.

Grange proved a strict and impartial deputy, and for enforcing the proper discipline a number of the men showed an antipathy towards him and his methods. On February 17th ex-Fireman Craig was 65 mins. late reporting for duty after his regular leave day. Grange reported him to the Chief, whereupon Craig and some others of the firemen became indignant. On Saturday, 27th of February, ex-Fireman Hawes was 20 minutes late returning from dinner. The chief noticed this and instructed Grange to make a note of the time Hawes arrived and report it in the official way. Grange did as instructed and this further incensed the obstreperous firemen and lead to the brutal assault of Saturday evening.

PLANNED TO COME LATE.

As near as can be learned the three prisoners now awaiting trial planned that the trio should come back late from supper on Saturday night. They left for supper at 6.30 and should have returned to the fire hall at 7.30. Instead of arriving on scheduled time they returned at 7.35, five minutes late. The chief's instructions to the men are that if they come in late they are to promptly

SHOOTS AT DETECTIVE

Unknown Tramp Hiding in the Woods Near Welland---Provincial Detective Clark Twice Fired On.

Welland, March 1.—The Township of Pelham is deeply excited over the attempt made Saturday afternoon to shoot Provincial Detective Clark of Niagara Falls by a man who is supposed to be the murderer of Ethel Kinrade of Hamilton.

The officer had followed a fugitive into a bush, and, when passing through a gully, two shots whizzed past him from a vantage point on the hillside. The neighborhood was at once alarmed and the woods surrounded, but it was too late. The tracks were followed for a considerable distance, but with falling snow and in the darkness, were lost. He was seen at 9 o'clock three miles farther east, but that is the last trace of him.

County Constable Garner has ordered guards to be placed on all the canal bridges to prevent his escape to the frontier.

News of a strange man skulking in the Fenwick, Pelham Centre and Ridgeville district was brought to Welland by Mail Carrier Rice at noon Saturday.

Officer Clark had been deputed by Chief Mains to scour the county, and he at once took the car for Fonthill. Here he was joined by County Constable Jerome Bearss, and the two drove in the direction of Fenwick. John Terriberry informed the officers that he had seen the man cross the road and enter Ward's bush about an hour previous.

Clark started into the bush, leaving Bearss to hold the horse. He had been gone about twenty minutes when Bearss heard two shots fired, and summoned the workmen from Goodville's sawmill nearby. Clarke came running out and told the circumstances of the shooting. He was going through a gulley when two shots came whizzing past him over the hillside.

The bush was at once surrounded, and Clark and two others went back to the spot. They found the tracks where the man had stood on the hillside and were able to trace them to the clearing and into the fields, where, in the coming darkness and falling snow, they were lost.

Those who saw the man describe him as being of medium height and wearing a heavy black moustache. He had a soft felt hat and black overcoat.

RIOTING TAKES PLACE IN LISBON

Murder of King and Prince Re-Enacted in Mockery.

Lisbon, March 1 (via the frontier).—The carnival celebrations held in Lisbon last week resulted in serious rioting and a number of encounters with the police, during which numerous people were more or less injured and about 200 arrests were made.

Precautions by the authorities were successful in preventing demonstrations early in the month on the first anniversary of the assassinations of King Carlos and the crown prince, but the population took advantage of the carnival time to indulge in the manifestations they wanted to hold three weeks ago.

The assassination of Feb. 1, 1908, were repeatedly enacted at various points throughout Lisbon by persons made up to represent King Carlos and the crown prince, Queen Amelie, Prince Manuel and the regicides Costa and Buissa as they were dressed on the day of the tragedy.

Other groups carrying coffins containing skeletons to represent King Carlos and the crown prince gave representations of the funeral processions to an accompaniment of blasphemous songs.

The police were taken by surprise, and when they attempted to stop the scandalous proceedings the lower classes sided with the masqueraders and received the police with volleys of stones.

Women aided by throwing missles from windows. The police finally had to make free use of their revolvers and swords. They charged right and left and a panic followed.

The streets finally were cleared by the military.

HAS A TRAIL OF FORGERIES

Welland, March 1.—Emil Bieber, who came to Welland a year ago to follow his trade as a shoemaker, a short time ago discounted a note at a local bank, and it afterwards turned out to be a forgery. He left town hurriedly and went to Niagara Falls, where two day afterwards he presented at the Royal Bank a note endorsed by a well-known builder. It was found to be a forgery also, and he was arrested.

Last Wednesday Magistrate Fraser found him guilty and gave him eight days to leave the country. He returned to Welland Thursday night to wind up his affairs. Friday morning he went to St. Catharines and called at the home of Henry Kottmeyer, a farmer near by. In the afternoon he presented to William Black, in the city, a check for $12, and asked to have it cashed. The mis-spelling of the name aroused Black's suspicions and he declined. Bieber escaped, and it is now learned that he has added another to his list of forgeries. He has not yet been apprehended.

CAR ALMOST RAN OVER HIM

Young Man Had Narrow Escape on Saturday at Noon—Was Thrown From Sleigh

A young man who was driving a sleigh had a very narrow escape from being run over by a street car at the corner of Smith and George Sts. on Saturday at noon. In making a sharp turn the driver was thrown from the sleigh and fell between the rails of the street railway track. A car was bearing down upon him swiftly but the motorman applied the brakes quickly and stopped the car a few feet from where the unfortunate young man lay.

DISAPPEARS LIKE FATHER

Port Huron, Mich., March 1.—A startling coincidence and one that may link together two tragedies, with a father and daughter as victims, was brought to light when members of the family of Alfred Osborne, 710 Stanton street, notified the police of the disappearance of Mrs. Mary Osborne, aged 53, wife of Alfred, from her home Thursday evening.

Her disappearance is exactly the same as that of her father, Valentine Harrison, who wandered away from his home in Sarnia four years ago Thursday evening, at the very hour that Mrs. Osborne disappeared. Harrison's body was found the following day lying on the doorstep of a cottage near Lake View Cemetery. Members of Mrs. Osborne's family are fearful that a similar fate has overtaken their mother.

THRONGS SEE THE FUNERAL OF THE MURDERED GIRL

Hamilton, March 1.—The funeral of Miss Ethel Kinrade, who was murdered Thursday afternoon, was held from the family residence, 105 Herkimer street, yesterday afternoon, and attracted thousands in addition to the friends of the bereaved family. The streets in the vicinity were jammed by a crowd running up to over 5,000.

Policemen were required to maintain order, and while there was no demonstration of any kind, the officers were not able to handle the crush. The house was besieged, and the front lawn and even the front verandah were crowded with the curious, who tried to peep in the windows when they could not get admittance to the house. The whole of the procession was lined with throngs, and there was the same jam at the cemetery.

The scene when the mother and Miss Florence Kinrade were brought downstairs to the funeral ceremonies was very pathetic. The mother bore up well, but Miss Florence seemed to be in a semi-conscious condition. When she reached the hall at the foot of the stairs she screamed "Etahl," and when she entered the room where the body of her sister lay she called: "Ethel, lock yourself in your room," and swooned. She had to be carried back to her room and given medical attendance.

The officers sent out into the surrounding country by Detective Miller on Saturday have failed to report anything as yet as to having come across any tramp who would fit in with the description Miss Florence Kinrade gave of the assassin.

Yesterday all kinds of rumors were flying around, but they all turned on investigation to be false.

The excitement over the affair appears to be growing. The newspaper and police officers are kept busy answering enquiries as to developments, ad in denying the sensational stories that appear to be in everybody's mouth.

While practically the whole of the police force is more or less engaged in hunting for the murderer, Detectives Bleakley and Coulter are devoting their whole time to it, heartily cooperating with their old comrade, the provincial officer.

Suspect Arrested.

Port Huron, Mich., March 1.—In the arrest of Robert Norton, aged 36, supposedly a tramp, who claims a home in London, Ont., the local officers think they may have the man who is being looked for as the slayer of Ethel Kinrade in Hamilton.

The prisoner answers the description — 5 feet 7 inches in height, dark suit and overcoat, slouch hat and drooping brown moustache — to the letter.

Norton was arrested here on Friday afternoon by Special Officer John Carmody. The man had been put off a northbound Pere Marquette train three times at the different stops in the city limits.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Robert Switzer, arrested for drunkenness, committed suicide in the cells at Midland, cutting his throat with a piece of glass.

Herbert Buttonfield, aged 26, committed suicide by blowing the top of his head off with a shotgun at his ranch to Equamish Valley, B.C.

There were numerous earthquake shocks in Calabria and Sicily on Saturday. At Bagnara several houses collapsed and five persons were killed.

Nine members of the House of Delegates presented a resolution Saturday providing for the confederation of Cuba, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo and Hayti into the West Indian Republic.

Curnothology, the newest thing in the science of character reading, is making its appearance as a fad in London. It is scarcely attractive, since character reading is done from the soles of the boots.

A new Cabinet for Newfoundland is to be announced before next Thursday. It is being formed by Sir Edward Morris, the Opposition leader, in succession to the Bond Government, which resigned Feb. 25.

GOOD POSITION IN MONTREAL

Mr. A. Temple Leaving for That City in a Few Days

Mr. Alfred Temple, who has been manager of the gentlemen's furnishing department at Creasman's for the past two and a half years, has accepted a position as manager of a large gentlemen's furnishing store in Montreal and leaves for that city a week from to-day. Mr. Temple came here from Ottawa and during his residence here has made many friends who will regret to hear of his departure.

ARE VICTIMS OF RED TAPE

New York, March 1.—A cable despatch to The Sun from London says: The writer has refrained as long as possible from calling attention to the utter ineptitude and incompetence of the Italian authorities in administering relief to the earthquake sufferers. The whole world within a few days of the disaster contributed an immense sum for the immediate alleviation of the sufferings of the survivors. The bulk of these subscriptions was sent to a central fund in Rome, where a special commission of prominent men was appointed by the King to undertake the work of administration. It is now two months since the earthquake, and thousands of sufferers are still unfed, unclothed and without shelter. The central commission has expended barely 10 per cent. of the fund at its disposal and this appalling situation is the result.

It should be explained that there is not the slightest suspicion of dishonesty in connection with their work; indeed, it is the absurd, almost incredible, red tape with which they have been striving to make dishonesty impossible that has completely crippled their whole undertaking. They have appeared to regard themselves as possible objects of suspicion and have shown an excess of caution which would be ludicrous if it were not so tragic.

Some of the stories of mismanagement seem to pass belief, yet they are well authenticated. The Times' special correspondent, who arrived at Messina three days after the catastrophe there, and is still on the ground, writes:

"The situation of the villages in the earthquake zone of Sicily is very bad; in the villages of Calabria it is appalling. Even now some places are receiving hardly any assistance and the condition of the inhabitants is terrible.

"Even now, one is continually hearing of places which have been forgotten by the authorities. A village called Sciplio, near Roccalumera, for instance, was neglected until ten days ago, while none of the Italian authorities had been near Camaria, forty minutes' walk from Messina.

"But if the conditions are bad in Sicily, they are far worse in Calabria, where in many places the people are still naked and starving, where women are sleeping with no covering but coats, and children are dying for want of nourishment. If there is no dishonesty there is, I am afraid, a dreadful amount of mismanagement."

MINIATURE RACE WAR IN ESSEX

Windsor, March 1.—A miniature race war has broken out between white and negro school supporters of public section No. 9, a short distance from Puce.

The trouble arose over the hiring of a new teacher to take charge of the school at the beginning of the year. As the result of a previous election the school board is composed of Trustees Walls and Hersey, colored, and Chairman Standish, a white man. The board had several applications, but selected a colored girl from Amherstburg.

Then dissatisfaction broke out among the white supporters. Out of 20 white children registered at the beginning of the year only two or three are in attendance now.

If nothing else can be done they say they are prepared to start a private school.

G.T.R. GATES WON'T WORK TO-DAY

Thaw and Frost Following Each Other Causes Ice to Form

The gates at the G.T.R. crossing on Charlotte street are out of commission to-day. The big thaw of yesterday flooded the street railway track and the grounds in the vicinity of the gates.

The water got into the gates and froze last night, clogging up the mechanism. They will be put in working order as soon as possible.

LATEST NEWS OF HAMILTON MURDER

Lady's Scarf, Blood Stained, Picked Up by Police in Back Yard of the Kinrade Home--Detectives Return From Chase.

Special to the Review.

Hamilton, Ont., March 1.—The latest development in the Kinrade murder is the announcement that a lady's scarf, blood stained, was picked up in the back yard of the Kinrade home when the police first arrived on the scene, a short distance from the back door.

The authorities tried to keep this discovery in the dark, but the news leaked out this morning. Provincial Detective Miller saw Miss Flossie this morning, but the girl broke down and was unable to tell her story. The detectives who were following a man through Brant County returned this morning and stated the man did not answer the description given of the murderer.

MAKE A CHANGE

A New Back for an Old One—How it is Done in Peterboro'

The back aches at times with a dull feeling making you worry and restless, sharp pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, it is agony to bend, stoop or lift. The rubbing of liniments or application of plasters does no good in these cases, they do not reach the cause. To get rid of these symptoms and exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one follow the example of this Peterborough citizen.

Mrs. John Barclay, 583 George street Peterborough, Ont., says;—"My back was weak and tender and a dull grinding pain had settled in the small of it. I could not stoop to lift anything and could scarcely turn in bed. Rheumatism had settled in my hands and shoulders. I was in constant suffering and could find no relief. The urine plainly told the disordered inactive state of the kidneys as it was thick and highly colored and contained a quantity of brick dust sediment. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at the Market Drug Store and I tried them. I found more relief in one box of Booth's Kidney Pills than in all else put together. My back strengthened and the pains left it. Rheumatism disappeared and has not since returned. The urine cleared. I am strong and well and feel like a new person."

CHINA'S GRAND CANAL.

Of some of the crude and outgrown methods used on China's Grand canal a writer in the North China Daily News remarks: "The junction of the real canal with the Wei river was not by means of a lock, but simply a high and steeply sloping mud bank, over which the grain vessels had to be dragged by the force of perhaps many hundreds of men. It should be borne in mind that in China the lock of a canal is not much more like our idea of what that name connotes than it is like a padlock. Amid constant and often serious changes of level, with an uncertain and not infrequently a scanty supply of water, and with a grain fleet which traveled in blocks of some eighty vessels under one officer, it was necessary to devise some way for keeping them together and for transferring them as a consolidated unit with this in view.

"For this reason a Chinese lock on the Grand canal is nothing but a stone gateway into which large boards may be lowered through a groove in the stones, restraining most of the water from its flow, until there is a depth sufficient to float all the craft, when the boards are pulled up and the entire fleet passes through.

"After this the boards are again lowered for another division of the grain boats. In case the water gives out—a by no means unlikely occurrence—there is nothing to do but to wait until more comes from somewhere."

THREE EMPIRES.

Governments That Practically Sprang Into Being Overnight.

Prior to Jan. 18, 1871, the German empire, as we know it today, had no existence. Instead it was a jumble of kingdoms, states, duchies, grand duchies and principalities, all joined together by a like language and common political aspirations, it is true, but otherwise quite separate and distinct.

Then came the historic ceremony in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles. Paris had just been captured by King William of Prussia, and it was held to be a fitting time and place to proclaim him the first German emperor. Never since the dawn of history was an empire born more dramatically.

By a strange irony of fate, too, its birth took place amid the ruins of the French empire, itself the creation of a day, or, rather, to be strictly accurate, of a night. France went to bed on the evening of Dec. 1, 1851, a republic. When it awoke next morning it was an empire. During the hours of darkness Paris had been occupied by troops, and the prince-president had become Napoleon III.

Equally sudden and almost as sensational in its way was the birth of the modern Greek empire. After the yoke of the Turks had been thrown off in the war of independence the country became a republic. But the people soon tired of that democratic form of government and promptly proceeded to assassinate their first and only president. Then they met together, elected a king and settled themselves down to be ruled by him in a quite orderly and contented fashion.

Bishop Farthing's Plans.

Montreal, March 1.—"I hope to see a Moral and Social Reform League in Montreal, working as a unit on purely local questions, in which every organization that is interested in better citizenship should be represented—not only the temperance people and the churches and their societies, but the civic societies and the commercial bodies, if they feel that they have any interest in such matters. And I hope that the Roman Catholic Church would be willing to participate in such work," says Bishop Farthing.

Packing Companies Liable.

Little Rock, Ark., March 1.—Prosecuting Attorney Campbell has filed suits against the Cudahy Packing Co., Morris Packing Co., Jacob Dold Packing Co., Swift & Co., and the Southern Beef & Provision Co., asking penalties aggregating $3,300,000 each for alleged violations of the state anti-trust laws, last week upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case against the Hammond Packing Co.

Bandit Becomes Governor.

Fez, Morocco, March 1.—The Sultan has appointed Raisuli, the former bandit, governor of the Province of Djebala. Raisuli has promised to renounce the ransom paid in behalf of Sir Harry MacLean, the Sultan's adviser, whom Raisuli held as a prisoner in 1907.

The new governor promises to fulfill the duties of the office honestly, and not to oppose Europeans.

Mrs. M. P. Davis Dead.

Child Fatally Burned.

Brantford, March 1.—John Flaherty, a three-year-old son of Alanson Flaherty, received fatal burns from a celluloid comb which caught on fire while the child was playing with it in the kitchen. The infant's face and body was burned.

Chinamen in Fraternity.

Ithaca, N.Y., March 1.—Tonfu Hu of Wu Chengh Sien, China, was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity at Cornell last week. It is the first time a Chinaman was ever elected to the highest honorary society at Cornell.

Painter Ends His Life.

Walkerville, March 1.—Alexander Stevenson, a painter, aged about 30 years, is dead in Sandwich East Township, from the effect of a dose of paris green taken with suicidal intent.

The late Miss Juliet W Doolittle, Hamilton, by her will distributed Iron and Steel shares among charities.

Jane Cable

CHAPTER XIV.

CABLE saw Bansemer leave the house as he drove up to the curb in front. The lawyer did not look back, but turned the nearest corner as if eager to disappear from sight as quickly as possible.

Closing the door of his smoking room behind him, David Cable dropped wearily into a chair without removing his hat or coat. His blood was running cold through his veins, his jaw was set and his eyes had the appearance of one who has been dazed by a blow. For many minutes he sat and stared at the andirons in the ember lit grate. From time to time he swallowed painfully and his jaw twitched. Things began growing black and green before his eyes. He started up, with an oath.

He was consumed by the fires of jealousy and suspicion. The doubt that had found lodging in his mind so recently now became a cruel certainty. Into his grim heart sprang the rage of the man who finds himself deceived, despised, dishonored. He was seeing with his own eyes, no doubt, just what others had seen for months—had seen and had pitied or scorned him as the unfortunate dupe. With the thought of it he actually ground his teeth; tears of rage and mortification sprang to his eyes. He recalled his own feelings in instances where shame had fallen upon other men; he recalled his own easy indifference and the temptation to laugh at the plight of the poor devils. It had never entered his mind that some day he might be the object of like consideration in others more or less fortunate, according to their friends.

By the time dinner was announced he had succeeded in restoring himself to a state of comparative calmness. He did not dress for dinner, as was his custom, nor did he stop to ask Frances Cable if she were ready to go down. He heard Jane playing the piano as he descended. She nodded to him, but did not stop, and he paused near the fireplace to look at her strangely. Somewhere back in his brain there was struggling, unknown to him, the old time thought that this child bore him no likeness whatsoever. He only knew he was crushing down the fear that evil or slander or pain might come to her if he were rash, yet just. He was wondering if he could face his wife without betraying himself.

Jane played softly, lifelessly. She, on the other hand, was wondering what Graydon would think or say if she spoke to him of what she had seen. She wondered if he would blame her mother as she was beginning to blame his father.

"Mother won't be down to dinner," she finally said.

"Is she ill?" he asked after a moment.

"She is lying down. Margaret will take some tea up to her."

Father and daughter had but little to say to each other during the meal. Their efforts at conversation were perfunctory, commonplace, an unusual state of affairs, of which neither took notice.

"You look tired, father. Has it been a hard day?"

"A rather trying one, Jane. We're having some trouble with the blizzards out west. Tying up everything that we are rushing to the Philippines."

"Is it settled that you are to be made president?"

"It looks like it." There followed a long silence. "By the way, I have good news for you. Mr. Clegg told me today that they are going to take Graydon into the firm. Isn't it great? Really, it is quite remarkable. You are not the only person, it seems, who thinks a lot of that boy."

"A partner? Really? Oh, isn't it glorious? I knew he could—I told him he'd be a partner before long." She waited a moment and then added, "His father was here today for a cup of tea." Cable caught the slightly altered tone and looked up. She was trifling with her fork, palpably preoccupied.

"I'm—I'm sorry I missed him," said he, watching her closely.

"You like him very much, don't you, father?"

"Certainly, and I'm sure your mother does." The fork shook in her fingers and then dropped upon the plate. She looked up in confusion. Cable's eyes were bent upon her intently, and she had never been so queer a light in them. Scarcely more than the fraction of a second passed before he lowered his gaze, but the mysterious telegraphy of the mind had shot the message of comprehension from one to the other. He saw with horror that the girl at least suspected the true situation. A moment later he arose abruptly and announced that he would run up to see her mother before settling down to some important work in his den.

"Graydon is coming over tonight," she said. "We'll be very quiet and try not to disturb you. Don't work too hard, daddy dear."

Upstairs Frances Cable was battling with herself in supreme despair. Confession was on her lips a dozen times, but courage failed her. When she heard his footsteps in the hallway she was ready to cry out the truth to him and end the suspense. As he opened the door to enter the spirit of fairness turned frail and fled before the appeal of procrastination. "Wait, wait, wait!" cried the powerful weakness in her heart, and it conquered. She could not tell him then. Tomorrow—the next day, yes, but not then. It was too much to demand of herself, after all.

He came in, but left a few minutes later. She was strangely unresponsive to his tender inquiries. Her thoughts were of another was his quick conclusion as he fled from her presence before the harsh accusations could break from his eyes.

In his den once more, with the door closed, he gave himself up completely to black thoughts. He recalled his words to her, uttered years ago, half in jest and half in earnest. He had horrified her beyond expression by telling her how he would punish a wife if he were the husband she deceived. With a grim, lurid smile he remembered the penalty. He had said he would not kill; he would disfigure the woman frightfully and permit her to live as a moral example to other wives. He now felt less brutal. He might kill, but he would not disfigure. For an hour he sat and wondered what had been the feelings of his old friend George Driscoll just before he deliberately slew his faithless wife. He remembered saying to other friends at the time that Driscoll had "done right."

This night of black shadows—he did not sleep at all—was really the beginning of the end. He forgot the presidency that was to be handed out to him. He forgot everything but the horrid canker that gnawed into his heart and brain.

Day and night he writhed in silent agony, a prey to the savage jealousy that grew and grew until it absorbed all other emotions. Scandal, divorce, dishonor, murder, swept before the mind of this man who had been of the people and who could not condone The people kill.

For a week he waited and watched and suffered. What he knew of men told him that they do not devote themselves to the wives of others with honorable motives behind them. He convinced himself that he knew the world; he had seen so much of it. The man aged years in that single week of jealousy and suspense. His face went haggard; his eyes took on a strange gleam; his manner was that of a man in grave trouble.

Day after day this piteous, frenzied man who swayed thousands with his hand stooped to deal with the smallest movements of one man and one woman. Despite his most intense desire to drive himself into other and higher channels, he found himself skulking and spying and conniving with but one low end in view.

He employed every acute sense in the effort to justify his suspicions. Time and again he went home at unusual hours, fearing all the while that he might incur the pain of finding Bansemer there. He even visited the man in his office, always rejoicing in the fact that he found him there at the time. He watched the mail in the morning; he planned to go out of nights and then hurried home deliberately, but unexpectedly. Through it all he said no word to Frances Cable or Jane. He asked no questions, but he was being beaten down by apprehensions all the while.

His wife's manner convinced him that all was not well with her. She avoided being alone with him, keeping close to her room. He detected a hundred pretexts by which she managed to escape his simplest advances.

At last, overwrought by the strain, he began to resort to cunning—this man who was big enough to have gone from the engine cab to the president's office. It required hours of struggle with his fairer, nobler nature to bring himself low enough to do trickery, but the natal influence mastered. He despised himself for the trick, but he would know the truth.

The late afternoon mail one day brought to Mrs. Cable a brief letter, typewritten both inside and out. David Cable saw her open and read the missive, and he saw her trembling hand go to her throat and then to her temple. Her back was toward him. He could not see her face until she turned, a full minute later. Then it was calm and undisturbed, but her eyes were brilliant. He ground his teeth and tore upstairs without a word. David Cable had stooped low enough to write this letter, and he was paying for it.

To be continued.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

SUNDAY'S MEETING

The auditorium at the Crystal was comfortably filled at the meeting in the cause of temperance yesterday afternoon. A number of hymns were sung as the audience gathered, after which the meeting was taken charge of by ex-Alderman Joseph Hatten chairman for the afternoon. A solo was rendered in excellent voice by Mr. George W. Mulligan, the audience joining heartily in the chorus. The speaker for the afternoon was Sheriff Hall.

The chairman in his remarks expressed his pleasure at having the Sheriff with him. He felt safe with the Sheriff at his side, and was glad to see any strong man engaged in the great and noble cause of temperance. There was some good in the worst of men and it was our duty to help them up, to lift them out of the gutter and tell them of better things. Many had been rescued by kind words and prayer. None are free from danger. The best may be brought down to disgrace. The only safety is to remove altogether the temptation. The women were braver than the men and not afraid to come out and face the evil. Reference was made to a former campaign when the women marched and sang on our streets.

SHERIFF HALL.

Sheriff Hall began his address by asking if there were any present who could not cast their minds back to many who began the race of life with them, but who had fallen by the way, victims of strong drink. He instanced two boys, who were his own seat mates at school. One had died recently full of years and honors while the younger and brighter of the two had been for fifty years in a drunkard's grave. He referred to his class in college, not large in number but fully up to the average in ability, having furnished three Chief Justices, a Presbyterian professor and an Auditor-General. One, the star of the class, was a member of Parliament at 30, a judge at 35 and filling a drunkard's grave before he was 40.

Those who had lived for some time in Peterborough were asked to cast their memories back to two murders in the town, both the result of drink. In one a man, ordinarily loving and gentle, shot his wife, and in the other a hotel keeper shot a drunken patron who threatened his life. The jury declared that he was justified. This evil does not effect men only. A young woman, refined and well educated, had acquired the taste for liquor. She left her room at night and went to a hotel, so strong was her appetite, and in the morning she was found dead at the foot of the stairs.

Such is the work of this curse. Is there a remedy? Can we get rid of it? The men who carry on this business are licensed. When smallpox broke out in a community we shut up the places where it is even if they are hotels, small pox does not kill one for every dozen killed by strong drink. What are we to do? Shut up the bars. It will not be easy, but the people have the matter in their own hands. They can have it done if they want to, but they must want it pretty bad. The politicians are ever on the look-out to know what the people want bad. They give it to them then but not sooner. The temperance workers must take the advice given them by Peter in one of his epistles: "Gird up the loins of your mind" which means briefly, "get to work in earnest." "Be sober," which does not refer to abstinence from drink, but to sober mindedness, self-control, persistence, and steady onward movement "Hope" which counsels to look ahead with confidence that if we do our duty things will work out all right in the end.

Rev. Mr. Potter pronounced the benediction, closing the meeting.

FILLED TEETH OF CROCODILE

Took Seventeen Men to Handle "Big Bill" — Cement Was Used

New York, Feb. 28.—With the aid of seventeen husky men, several lengths of log chain, some strong manila rope, a piece of stout scantling and two stone-boats, there was a neat little dental operation performed yesterday afternoon upon Big Bill in the Bronx Zoo.

Big Bill is a crocodile, eleven feet long, and weighs a quarter of a ton.

Big Bill about three weeks ago had a little personal difficulty with an alligator four feet long and in the heat of the argument took the alligator's head in his mouth and bit two neat round holes in his brain. That alligator was still useful for handbags. Twice he repeated this feat of biting into the brain of his fellows, so his jaws were pried open with a piece of scantling and Dr. Litmars got at his front teeth with a cold chisel, a mallet and a file. He knocked all the points off Big Bill's front teeth and then filled a few cavities in other teeth with Portland cement. Then Big Bill was put back in the tank and all his comrades stood around and laughed at him.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

C.N.R. Mechanics Meet.

Winnipeg, March 1.—A general meeting of representatives of all mechanical departments of Canadian Northern Railway was held Saturday morning. About 50 men were in attendance, 30 from outside points.

All matters pertaining to agreements between employes and company were up for consideration and conference continue throughout the day. Great secrecy is maintained as to the intention of the unions, but it is not anticipated that trouble is brewing. The present working agreements expire May 1.

Chinese Will Fight.

Vancouver, B.C., March 1.—A year ago the City Council of Vancouver passed a bylaw against Chinese market gardeners and in favor of its own city market. Chinese were by this enactment prohibited from peddling around the city before 10 o'clock in the morning. A test case came up in the Police Court, and a Chinese peddler fined $5. He has appealed to a full court, and the Chinese declare they will carry the appeal to the Privy Council, if necessary, on the ground that this is class legislation.

Immigration Agent Dismissed.

Ottawa, March 1.—Nathan B. Miller, Dominion immigration agent at Napanee, has been dismissed "as a result," says Supt. Scott, "to your action in sending in commission claims 1,930 and 8,318, claiming to have placed certain immigrants as farm laborers with G. Deshane and C. Denison, whereas these parties were respectively foreman for the Grand Trunk Railway and groceryman."

Smallpox In Nissouri.

London, March 1.—Three new cases of smallpox has been reported from Nissouri Township, in the village of McMillan.

In the family of W. A. Henderson, Miss Jessie and Miss Martha Henderson are ill, while there is also a case reported in the family of W. McMillan.

Cobalt Lake Mining Co.

Ottawa, March 1.—At the annual meeting on Saturday of the Cobalt Lake Mining Co., the directors were re-elected. The salary of D. B. Rochester, managing director, was reduced from $2,000 per annum to a monthly engagement at $200 a month. The engineer's report was hopeful of striking the McKinley-Darragh vein. Assets were valued at $3,929,166, including $1,070,834 stock in the treasury.

Won't Tell of Escape.

Vancouver, B.C., March 1.—Charles Clarke, the burglar sentenced to a three-year term two years ago, and who escaped with Bill Miner, has been recaptured near Bellingham, and will be extradited. Asked regarding Bill Miner he said: "I will talk of anything but his escape. The truth about it would do no one any good." He says Miner is now in Australia.

Hotel For Kingston.

Kingston, March 1.—Walter Telfer, proprietor of the British American Hotel, has made an offer to the City Council to put up a five-storey building on the present site if the city will guarantee bonds to the extent of $100,000. He offers the city a first mortgage on the property for a guarantee.

He intends using Frontenac Hotel, not in use now, as an annex.

Paardeberg Memorial.

Victoria, B.C., March 1.—In memory of the Battle of Paardeberg, in which five Victorians were killed, a massed parade and drumhead service was held at the drill hall yesterday morning, attended by the naval and military forces, the militia and the cadets of the city and Esquimalt. Bishop Perrin preached a memorial sermon.

Stabbed Their President.

Wheeling, W.Va., March 1.—George Rush, president of Local Union No. 419, United Mine Workers of America, at Bannock, Ohio, near here, was probably fatally stabbed by Italian members of the union.

The local was holding a meeting, when Rush made a ruling that displeased the twenty-five or more Italians present, and in an instant Rush was the target for the stilettos of several of the foreigners.

Great Persian Battle.

Constantinople, March 1.—The Persian central liberal committee here received a telegram Saturday night announcing a great victory of the Tabriz Liberals over the reactionaries.

The latter lost 2,000 killed and wounded and prisoners. The city of Shiraz, it is predicted, will soon be occupied.

Insurance Bill This Week.

Ottawa, March 1.—The principal item of the sessional program, the insurance bill, will be introduced in the House this week by the Minister of Finance. After preliminary discussion it will be referred to the committee on banking and commerce.

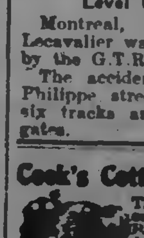
There an opportunity will be given for the various interests concerned to present their views on the proposed measure.

Level Crossing Fatality.

Montreal, March 1.—Mrs. Joseph Lecavalier was killed Saturday night by the G.T.R. express for Toronto.

The accident occurred at the St. Philippe street crossing, which has six tracks and is not protected by gates.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.



The great Uterine Tonic, and only safe effectual Monthly Regulator on which women can depend. Sold in three degrees of strength—No. 1, $1; No. 2, 10 degrees stronger, $3; No. 3, for special cases, $5 per box. Sold by all druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of price. [illegible]

Wireless From Train.

Chicago, Ills., March 1.—Messages were sent Saturday by wireless telegraph between a Lake Shore train moving 60 miles an hour and instruments in other stations. This is the first time that such a feat has ever been accomplished.

Forty miles out of Chicago a truck broke and a special train was called by wireless from Elkhart.

W. J. Daley, general passenger agent of the Lake Shore, said the success of the experiment meant much in eliminating train accidents.

"Our instrument is working in good shape," said Frederic Semmis, Marconi's first assistant, who was on the special train.

New Northern Railroad.

Toronto, March 1.—Mr. Hearst, M.P.P. of Sault Ste. Marie, will introduce a bill in the Legislature to incorporate a new road for Northern Ontario. "The Blind River Colonization Railway." It is proposed to run north from Blind River to a junction of the National Transcontinental, through what are now wholly crown lands, with undeveloped minerals and timber wealth. It will also open up to the tourist many beautiful lakes and rivers.

The town of Blind River has voted $17,000 as a bonus. At present Blind River is connected only with the Soo branch of the C.P.R.

Falls From Gallery.

Philadelphia, March 1.—Plunging headlong from the gallery of the National Theatre during the performance Saturday night, Charles McDevitt of Ninth and Charlton streets, received injuries that will cause his death. He is in the hospital suffering from a fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

That there was not a serious panic was due to the coolness of Dave Genearo, playing the hero in "Tony the Bootblack." He saw McDevitt's body plunging through space and sprang to the centre of the stage and besecched the audience to remain in their seats.

May Sue Toronto.

Ingersoll, March 1.—The civic authorities are discussing the advisability of entering action against the City of Toronto to recover expenses incurred by the town in the case of Jacob Hartley.

When Hartley made application to the mayor and council for assistance, he was ill and penniless. Efforts were made to place Hartley in the Woodstock Hospital, but he was denied admission because of the fact that he was not a resident of the county. The same thing applied to the application to have him placed in the House of Refuge. In view of these circumstances, the question arose: To what municipality did Hartley belong? The man himself claimed that he was a resident of Toronto, stating that he had resided there for three years, had voted, and was recognized as a citizen.

The Toronto authorities, however, refused to grant Hartley any assistance on his arrival there, and he was promptly returned to Ingersoll.

Falls From Ladder; Breaks Neck.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 1.—While repairing the boiler of an engine in the engine house of the Michigan Central Railway at Montrose on Saturday night, James McGregor slipped from a ladder on which he was standing to the cement floor, breaking his neck and fracturing his skull. Workmen, hearing the thud and groans, ran to McGregor's assistance, but he died twenty minutes later. He was a native of Morrow, near St. Thomas, and was 25 years old.

Finds Son In Biograph.

Lafayette, Ind., March 1.—While attending a moving picture show where scenes from a Florida Ostrich Farm were being presented, Mrs. Hannah Mendelsohn recognized her son in the pictures. She had not heard from him for seven years.

She telegraphed him and received a reply saying that he was at the ostrich farm and was employed as its manager.

Father Shoots Captured Negro.

Birmingham, Ala., March 1.—While handcuffed and sitting in the sheriff's office at Bessemer, Jim Brown, a negro, was shot and instantly killed by James Robinson, white, father of the girl whom Brown was accused of molesting on Feb. 15.

The attack occurred without warning.

Alfonso In Accident.

Madrid, March 1.—King Alfonso has had another narrow escape from serious injury. While riding in an automobile near Villa Manrique, the machine skidded and struck a tree. It barely missed toppling over into a deep ravine.

China's Consul-General.

Vancouver, B.C., March 1.—Kung Seu Chew, at present attached to the Chinese embassy in London, and a relative of Lord Li, Chinese ambassador, will be the first Chinese consul-general at Ottawa.

Fined For Printing Tolstoi's Article.

Moscow, March 28.—The newspaper Zhign was fined $1,500 on Saturday for printing Count Tolstoi's latest article against the inflicting of the death penalty, entitled "No Evil Without Good."

Warm Weather In the West.

Macleod, Alta., March 1.—A Chinook has been blowing here for several days, and the land is now bare of snow.

Farmers are getting out their implements, and many of them will commence plowing to-day if the fine weather continues.

Socialists to Have Candidate.

Calgary, Alta., March 1.—George Howell, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, and C. M. O'Brien, Dominion organizer for the Socialists in the province, were selected by the Socialists of Calgary as candidates in [illegible] approaching provincial elections.

Vernon Booth Indicted.

Chicago, March 1.—W. Vernon Booth, president of A. Booth & Co., the so-called fish trust, which went into the hands of a receiver last September, and F. B. Robbins, former assistant treasurer of the company, were indicted Saturday. They, "with others to the grand jury unknown," are charged with entering into a conspiracy by means of which they secured "wilfully, maliciously, feloniously," etc., the sum of $800,000 from the Continental National Bank of Chicago.

W. Vernon Booth inherited from his father what is said to have been the largest fishing business in the world.

The liabilities are estimated at over $6,000,000; the assets have officially been estimated as low as $3,000,000.

Transcontinental Auto Race.

New York, March 1.—The Automobile Club of America has granted a sanction for the proposed trans-continental automobile race which the management of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition propose to hold some time next summer, between some point on the Atlantic seaboard yet to be determined, and Seattle, Wash.

A handsome trophy has been offered for the race by M. Robert Guggenheim, in addition to which substantial cash prizes will be given to drivers.

Contract With Cataract.

Brantford, March 1.—Announcement is made here that the power committee of the City Council has just about completed an agreement with the Cataract Power Co. for the supply of lighting for a short term to this city.

The price for street lighting is close to $47.50 per arc light per annum, and 7 1-2 cents per kilowatt for commercial and industrial lighting.

Three Go Down For Life.

Chicago, Ills., March 1.—Three hold-up men accused of the theft of 46 cents were sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary by a jury in Judge Kerr's court on Saturday.

This sentence was made possible by the passage of a law two years ago providing the severe penalty inflicted for highway robbery committed with the aid of deadly weapons.

WHY C.P.R. IS HOLDING BACK IN CONNECTION WITH THE GRAIN LINE

Montreal, Feb. 28.—It was learned from a source which is in close touch with the C.P.R. policy, that the reason why the proposed new grain line from Victoria Harbor to Peterborough has been hanging fire for the past two years since the surveys were completed is the feeling of uncertainty that prevails in the minds of the executive as to whether the Government will proceed with the construction of the Georgian Bay Ship Canal which, if built, would enable vessels come to Montreal direct by a shorter route than any yet practicable from the upper lakes to the point at which the canal would con- with the St. Lawrence probably at the eastern extremity of the island says the Herald.

Rev. W. Kenner Speaks

To the Editor of the Review.

Mr. Editor,—As Mr. Mason has referred to me in a letter published in your paper on Saturday last, as being one of the ministers who had nothing to say at the George street Methodist quarterly meeting, when he read a statement made by the Rev. G. Jackson of his views on the Book of Genesis as published in the daily papers and protested against such interpretation of Scripture, I beg to say that on account of my defective hearing, I did not know what Mr. Mason was writing of, nor what he was talking about for some time, and then I just caught the word of Jackson. I can assure Mr. Mason and all others that I have no more sympathy with the Rev. G. Jackson's teachings than he has, and am ready to proclaim as earnestly and faithfully my opposition to all such teachings, let it come from what quarter it may. And let me say that there are men in Toronto who will look after the interest of the Methodist church, and the doctrine we have been taught to believe and teach. We have men with equal experience mental grasp, educational attainments, and deep piety and devotedness to God, as the Rev. G. Jackson, who will pronounce his teachings false and misleading.

I regard such teaching good food for skeptics and infidels.

I remember hearing a Methodist minister say in England in one of his sermons when I was but a boy, that "there were mysteries in the Bible, but the infidel had made too much of them." And now, I would say that there are mysteries in the Bible, but some of the ministers and College professors have made too much of them. What church has not had to deal with such men! Dr. Carman's reply to the Rev. G. Jackson, I think, should proclaim to the satisfaction of all Methodist people the safety of the Methodist church. Let it go forth that the Methodist ministry and its College professors believe in the teachings of the Rev. G. Jackson "that the account of creation etc., as given in the first chapter of Genesis is a myth, "a fabulous story" and I will venture to predict that the church will be smitten with weakness from which she will not [illegible] recover.

But that will not be. Dr. Carman has thousands of ministers to strengthen his hands, and tens of thousands of members. God has put His seal upon His Word from Genesis to Revelation, see Rev. 22, 18-19. Nothing is to be added to, nothing is to be taken from.

W. KENNER.

A Word of Approval

Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to see your article in Saturday's paper on Mr. Mason's stand on the question of Rev. G. Jackson's remarkable utterance in Toronto. If Christian people do not stand up for the fundamental principles of Christianity, who will do so. I believe with you we are rapidly approaching a crisis and it behooves every Christian man and woman to stand up for the right even if they seem to be in a small minority. Let Mr. Mason and all who think like him be encouraged in the fact that one with God is a majority.

We are being disturbed and that is reason enough for our protest.

In Favor of Room Rugs

Easy to House-clean—Perfectly Sanitary

IT is generally acceeded that the most sanitary floor-covering to-day is the Rug. The harbor for dirt is done away with when the edges are not fastened down close to the wall; and when dirt and dust are absent the germ is missing, for dirt breeds germs. What is nicer or more in harmony with good taste than to see beautifully polished borders around the outside of any room and a handsome rug in the centre. Of course where the floors are not suitable for self finishing there are many ways (and inexpensive too) for giving the desired effect. You say, "It costs more to have a room finished in this way". Not so, for wood-grained Linoleum is less expensive than carpet to cover the same space. Think of the less labor there is in house-cleaning a room where there is no carpet to stretch and tack down to the floor; simply remove the furniture and roll up the rug.

Let us show you our handsome range of Room Rugs—Rugs for every room in the house from the cheap union to the most expensive Axminster, including Scotch Ayrian Wool, Tapestry, Jute Brussel, Brussels, Velvet, Wilton, etc.

HAVE CANCELLED THE LECTURES

Owing to the commotion which has been caused by Dr. Carman's attack on Mr. Jackson, the directors of the Y.M.C.A. have decided to discontinue the series of lectures of which Mr. Jackson's lecture was one. Rev. Dr. Crummy, of Bathurst street Methodist church, and Rev. Prof. McFadden, of Knox College, were to have been the next two lectures. Their services will be dispensed with.

HERE DIRECT FROM HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE MONTREAL

No more capable or better equipped theatrical organization has been sent on tour this season than the large company which the noted managerial firm of Cohan & Harris are presenting in the brilliant New York, Chicago and Boston success: "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway." Geo. M. Cohan's original play, with music, and Scott Welsh as "Kid Burns," the ex-slangy prize fighter, and Frances Gordon as "Plain Mary," the housemaid, and the original cast, said by many to be the most pretentious effort this industrious and ambitious young actor-author has yet evolved, and which comes to the Grand Opera House next Wednesday, March 3. "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" is in three acts all of the scenes being laid in different parts of the suburban town of New Rochelle which is three-quarters of an hour from Broadway, New York City, hence the title. While it is in no sense a musical comedy, some of the most popular songs that have yet come from the pen of that prolific tireless composer, such as "Mary is a Grand Old Name," and "So Long, Mary," "I Want to be a Popular Millionaire," and several others are rendered during the progress of the action of the play and what is usually termed the "chorus" in this style of entertainment consists in this production of eight young women who in personal beauty, clever dancing and vocal accomplishments atone for any possible lack of numbers.

As is known to some persons interested in the theatre, Mr. Cohan followed no set lines in the writing of "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" but departed radically from conventional lines by combining most effectively in this instance drama, comedy, farce, melodrama and music, with the result of achieving an entertainment as interesting and enjoyable as it is unique and original. The unfolding of the plot requires more novel characters than Mr. Cohan has yet introduced in any of his plays and many of these are types not hitherto presented behind the footlights.

DEPUTY FIRE CHIEF BADLY INJURED

THE ASSAULT.

It is stated that Hawes was the first of the three to enter the fire hall and told Grange in a sneering way that he—Grange—had better report him as being late on account of his fondness for attention to duty in this respect. He also used very abusive language to the deputy-chief.

In a minute or two Hawes was followed by Craig and Chapman who are credited with saying "You had better report us all for being late." and as Grange was marking the time on the black board it is alleged that ex-fireman Craig seized Grange by the throat and dealt him a terrific blow on the side of the head. Grange fell against the radiator and was stunned. He tried once or twice to get on his feet but staggered and fell to the floor.

Besides the disadvantage of having been taken by surprise Grange was weak from a very recent illness.

BRUTAL TREATMENT.

While he was down it is stated that Craig and Chapman kicked him several times in the head and about the back and loins, inflicting injuries that may prove fatal. Large lumps from the severe kicks he received stand out on Grange's head. Fortunately he was not cut or scarred but he is internally injured and it will be some time before the exact extent of these injuries can be entertained.

POLICE CALLED.

A man who was passing the fire hall heard the row and ran in and interfered preventing a continuance of the assault it is said.

A large crowd gathered in front of the fire hall and the police were summoned. P. C's Newhall, Meharry and Meagher responded Craig Hawes and Chapman were placed under arrest and taken to the police station. When they had been locked up they wanted bail but were unable to get it.

TAKEN TO SURGERY.

Willing hands carried Grange to Dr. Greer's where his injuries were looked after. He was unconscious when taken to the doctors office and was not able to be taken home until eleven o'clock at night.

He recovered consciousness long enough to make a statement to P. C. Newhall concerning the assault. What this statement was has not been given out for publication but will be made public in the evidence at the trial.

It is said that when the men made the assault they were under the influence of liquor.

Craig and Hawes are married men and well known in the city. They were in the brigade longer than Chapman. The latter is unmarried.

DOCTOR'S STATEMENT

Dr. Greer was called up by the Review but said as he would be called as a witness in the case that he did not wish to be quoted as giving anything out concerning the injured man's condition. It is learned on the best authority however that he is in a dangerous condition although his recovery is regarded probable. Fears are entertained however that he may be internally injured to quite an extent.

PORT HOPE GUIDE STRONGLY RESENTS MISREPRESENTATION

The Port Hope Guide says that the story about smallpox in Port Hope, published by a local paper, for exaggeration, etc, has everything placed in the shade.

Continuing the Guide says:

Unfortunately the Examiner does not give this traveller's name, otherwise we would watch for him upon his return and place him under strict quarantine. For the benefit of the Examiner we might state that our streets present just as busy an appearance as usual, and that the smallpox tent was not used in any municipal work. This of course is like many of the wild stories which have been circulated without a word of truth. Only the other day we heard from a dozen or more persons that the leading hotel in Peterborough was under quarantine for smallpox. The name of the hotel was given us, but we refused to publish it, believing it was another false rumor. We have since learned that the story was a "make up" and it might be well for the Examiner to become acquainted with the facts of the case, before publishing an article like the above.

Scott Welsh as "Kid Burns," in Geo. M. Cohan's big musical comedy, "45 Minutes from Broadway," at the "Grand" next Wednesday, March 3rd. Plan now open.

"SHAKESPEARE'S WOMEN"

On Friday evening Miss Mamie Thebald read a very interesting paper on "Shakespeare's Women," before the members of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. The essayist handled her subject very creditably and as an introduction she sketched briefly the generalities of Shakespeare's style in drawing portraits of his male and female characters.

The first character discussed was that of Portia in "The Merchant of Venice," an ideal woman, keen witted and brilliant of intellect, a great lover of all things beautiful and possession a disposition of rare humility and sweetness. In connection with this character that of Portia in Julius Caesar, was taken up by a woman with a marked and vigorous personality. No relation of man and woman in the plays of Shakespeare is altogether so noble as that of Portia and her husband, Brutus, and the story of their lives was prettily told. Portia's death, like her life, excludes all common grief and joy. Shakespeare pays a high tribute to her when he says, "Portia, the ideal of moral loveliness, heroic and feminine."

Another beautiful study is that of the character of Juliet, a woman of Italy, whose great beauty seems in harmony with the beauty of the country where she lives. Juliet has been called the embodiment of love itself—the passion is her state of being and out of it she has an existence. The love that is so dignified in Pertier, so constant in Imogen, so devoted in Desdemona is each and all of these in Juliet.

An extreme type along a different line is the character of Lady Macbeth. She has a strong personality and is of a high rank, but in her loveliness she finds herself with lydreams of ambition, but she mistakes the courage of fantasy for the power of bearing the consequences of the realities of guilt. However, all through her strong nerved ambition, the ruling passion of her mind, there is yet a touch of womanhood. She is ambitious less for herself than for her husband. She wishes to see him on the throne the sceptre within his grasp and the strength of her affection helps her on in her schemes.

The essayist also sketched the character of Cordelia, King Lear's daughter, beautiful and loveable, yet shy, reserved and seemingly cold. In strong contrast to her is the portraits drawn of her two sisters, Gonerill and Regan, who were possessed with a very instinct and original impulse of malignity.

The essay closed with a brief review of Shakespear's style and discipline as depicted in the different portraits drawn and his truthfulness in revealing to us what he has grasped from life.

Selection, The Mandolin Club.
Vocal solo, Miss F. Carew.
Recitation, Miss M. Derocher.
Piano solo, Master A. Weatherhead.
God Save the King.

The new car shops of the Preston Car and Coach Company at Preston were blown down by a hurricane.

REUBEN AND HIS SWEETHEART

"Rueben and His Sweetheart," pleased its audience at the Grand on Saturday night. The play was interspersed with many specialties of interest, one of the best received being the singing of "Tattle-Tale," by Rueben and Chick, and the tramp monologue by Bill Taylor in which are introduced many humorous sallies.

The most of the comedy was supplied by Dick Henderson, as Rueben, Dan Malloy as Bill Taylor, and Herb Colburn as Si Cunningham. Hazel Corinne was clever as Chick.

The company carries its own orchestra of six pieces with it.

WHY NOT OWN AN AUTOMOBILE?

If automobiles are needed anywhere at all they are in the country. One of the speakers of the Women's Institute, at Guelph, recently predicted that the time was near at hand when farmer's wives would run their own automobiles. Nor is the prediction a visionary one. Like the telephone and the trolley, the automobile seems destined to add to the comfort of country life, and the cost will not interfere with your buying. We can sell

ONE MINUTE MORE AND GENE WOULD HAVE HAD FORFEIT; STAYED 14 MIN. WITH GOTCH

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—In a great bout at the Star Theatre tonight Gene Hurtubise, the Peterborough heavyweight wrestler stayed fourteen minutes with Champion Frank Gotch, the American panther. A quick and easy victory for Gotch was looked for and the resistance put up by the French-Canadian was a revelation. Several times Gotch had him in close positions, but Hurtubise managed to get away, until at last Gotch clapped a scissors and leg hold on him and saved the forfeit with but a minute to go.

SPORTING TALK

The Lindsay Post published some poetry about the Lindsay hockey team. It was pretty bad. The Peterborough Examiner then took up the theme and published a stanza on the same subject. It was worse than the Lindsay stuff. It looks like a conspiracy between the two papers to make the public suffer.

FINAL GAME ON THURSDAY NIGHT

Knox and St. Andrew's Will Meet to Settle Church League Championship

The final games in the Senior Church League will be pulled off at Brock street rink on Thursday night, when Knox church and St Andrew's play off for the championship. Both teams have gone through the season with but one loss and play good fast hockey.

HOAGLAND WON THIS WALK TOO

Got First Money in Four Night's Event at Auburn

Auburn, NY, Feb 27—The four nights square heel and toe walking match at the armory came to a close tonight and Willard Hoagland, the scratch man succeeded in winning over Brown by five laps. The last hour's racing was good, with frequent sprints. West and Holihan fought hard for third place. The leaders' scores at the finish were; Hoagland, 65 miles 5 laps; Brown, 65 miles; West, 64 miles 11 laps; Holihan, 64 miles, 10 laps.

WRESTLING

Frank Gotch left town last night for Buffalo, but seemed very sure that his unknown would get back the $100 he lost to Yankee Rogers. This unknown has been matched to wrestle Yankee Rogers at the Riverdale rink next Friday night and Gotch claims Rogers will be beaten. He says his man is one of the best men he has ever run up against, and in a match to the finish will make Rogers go some—Toronto World.

The Tame Banties will play the Auburns at Brock street rink tomorrow evening from 7 to 8. The Banties also accept the challenge of the Grafters and if the team is able to go on the ice after the Auburn game will meet them as soon as the ice can be secured.

The St Andrew's hockey team will practice tonight, from seven to eight on Knox rink. All club members are requested to be out so as to give the boys a good practice.

On Thursday at Buckhorn a Lakefield seven defeated the home seven by 3—2 in a very evenly contested game. Buckhorn scored the first goal. The teams played six men a side. Quigley, of Lakefield, officiated as referee.

Converting Gwendolyn.

By MARTHA COBB SANFORD.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

At twenty Gwendolyn Rand was undeniably a personality to be reckoned with.

"I don't see where you get such ways, Gwendolyn," complained her mother. "Why, at your age I"—

"Yes, indeed," corroborated Mr. Rand, "at your age, Gwendolyn, your mother had settled down—she wasn't running around after all the young men in the neighborhood."

"Oh, daddy," remonstrated Gwendolyn. "I think you might be a little more gallant."

"Well, well, the young men weren't all running after her, then," amended Mr. Rand, softening at the hurt look in Gwendolyn's big brown eyes. "But it doesn't look well either way. I can't understand where"—

"Mother was brought up in a convent, you remember. I'm the product of coeducation," ventured Gwendolyn in explanation.

"H'm," reflected Mr. Rand. "That may be the reason, but the remedy is your Aunt Abiatha."

Gwendolyn gave a little gasp of apprehension.

"Yes, my dear," continued Mr. Rand, "your mother and I have decided to send you down to Florida to spend the winter with your Aunt Abiatha."

"She will teach you the things a girl of your age ought to know, daughter," added Gwendolyn's mother dolefully, "things which I have somehow failed to make you take an interest in."

"In other words, I'm to be sent to a convent," exclaimed Gwendolyn as she swished out of the room, her head high in air, but her eyes glistening with unshed tears.

Aunt Abiatha's spacious, old fashioned house merited kinder verdict than Gwendolyn bestowed upon it at first glance. Once up in her cozy bedroom, however, with its chintz covered four poster and French windows opening out on to a little rose covered porch, the girl's heart melted in spite of herself, and she threw both arms around Aunt Abiatha, completely submissive—for the time being.

But after the novelty of dusting, sewing and cooking began to resolve itself into routine Gwendolyn suddenly balked.

"Now I know how to do all these prosaic things, Aunt Abiatha," she argued, "what's the use of doing them day after day? There are so many real live things to do in the world. Let's give a garden party or something, Aunt Abiatha. Are there any male inhabitants in Centerville that we could hire to come, do you think?"

"Gwendolyn, my dear, how you talk! Of course there are," Aunt Abiatha was startled into admitting. "There's young Jack Hayward for one."

"What's he like?"

"Very thoughtful and polite," replied Aunt Abiatha loyally. "He comes of one of our best families."

"Poor thing!" muttered Gwendolyn.

"What did you say, dear?"

"I asked what he does for a living?" prevaricated Gwendolyn unblushingly.

"Why, he manages his father's estate, of course. He's a country gentleman."

"Oh," commented Gwendolyn indifferently, "he must be a very provincial kind of person! I don't think I should like him."

"Well, of all things, Gwendolyn!" bristled Aunt Abiatha. "Of course you'd like him. Every one does. I'll ask him to call."

An afternoon or two later as Gwendolyn was reclining in the hammock on her little porch engrossed in a novel she became suddenly conscious that the front doorbell had been ringing for some time. On the veranda below she could hear Aunt Abiatha rocking to and fro.

"The front doorbell's ringing, Aunt Abiatha!" she called, jumping up. "If it's that 'polite and thoughtful young country gentleman,' please don't disturb me. I'm in the midst of an awfully exciting love story."

A hearty masculine laugh followed Gwendolyn's declaration.

It aroused her curiosity, but also her indignation, and she re-established herself in the hammock, determined not to display the slightest interest, whatever happened.

But the next thing she heard startled her into a sitting posture.

"Now, Aunt Abiatha, will you introduce us?"

Gwendolyn, walking to the rail of the porch, could hardly believe her eyes. There, on the roof of the veranda, not ten feet away from her, sat an extremely good looking young man. And there on the lawn stood Aunt Abiatha, the picture of dismay and disapproval.

"Gwendolyn," she called up, "this is Mr. Heyward. Jack, my niece, Miss Rand. I never saw such goings on in my life. Go right into your room, Gwendolyn!"

Gwendolyn did not budge. She only laughed and laughed, until Aunt Abiatha finally joined in.

But such a triangular situation was not over encouraging, especially since Aunt Abiatha refused to leave her angle of observation, so eventually they all adjourned to the downstairs veranda for afternoon tea.

"So you're a climber, Mr. Heyward?" Gwendolyn observed archly, taking advantage of Aunt Abiatha's absence in the kitchen.

"Given sufficient incentive—yes," Jack answered lightly. "I couldn't stand down there below, you know, and let a fellow in a book get ahead of me."

"Get ahead of you?"

"Well, absorb your interest to the exclusion of a real human being," explained Jack.

"You took an awful risk," laughed Gwendolyn.

"Oh, that was nothing," Jack boasted. "I'm used to all sorts of athletic stunts, you know."

"That isn't the kind of risk I meant exactly," Gwendolyn enlightened him.

"Well, how did you like him?" beamed Aunt Abiatha after the caller's departure.

"Not very well," said Gwendolyn, shaking her head dubiously. "He's so bold and conceited."

"But, my dear," hastily interposed Aunt Abiatha. "You mustn't judge him from first appearances. Jack was a little queer today. I don't know what was the matter with him. But we'll have him in often, and you must be polite to him, Gwendolyn."

And that was how a most audacious courtship came to be carried on right under Aunt Abiatha's eyes.

"Gwendolyn," asked Jack dreamily one sunny morning as they sat together in the fragrant rose garden, "how did you ever happen to come down to this quiet little spot anyhow? I should imagine you'd love all the gay things of life—dances, theaters, dinners and all that, you know. Don't you?"

"No, you're all wrong," answered Gwendolyn slowly, hiding her face in the flowers she had gathered. "I love something quite different."

For a few minutes the birds in the garden had it all to themselves, so suddenly still were the two people who sat there.

"Gwendolyn," Jack finally found himself asking in a husky voice quite unlike his own, "do you really love it down here—the quiet, lazy life we lead?"

Gwendolyn nodded, but did not lift her face.

"Love it enough to stay with me, dearest?"

Gwendolyn nodded again.

"I can't," Gwendolyn protested, blinking. "There's something in my eye."

"A tear, I think," confessed the mischievous Gwendolyn.

Half an hour later Jack sat talking with Aunt Abiatha on the porch. Gwendolyn was scribbling her daily line to her mother.

"Read that, Aunt Abiatha," the girl called suddenly, holding out a sheet of note paper. "It has something about you in it."

> Dearest Mother and Dad—I want you to come down here just as quickly as you can. I am to be married at Aunt Abiatha's two weeks from today. The wedding will be very quiet. Aunt Abiatha fully approves of my engagement—in fact, she has done everything in her power to bring it about. Please bring my trousseau along with you. Your loving

He Liked the Sound.

Mr. Goff has a humor peculiarly his own. He looks at the world in a half amused, half indulgent manner sometimes very annoying to his friends. One day when in town he dropped into a restaurant for lunch. It was a tidy although not a pretentious establishment. After a good meal he called to the waitress and inquired what kind of pie could be had.

"Applepiemincepieraisinpieblueberrypiecustardpiepeachpieandstrawberryshortcake," the young woman repeated glibly.

"Will you please say that again?" he asked, leaning a trifle forward.

The girl went through the list at lightning rate. "Andstrawberryshortcake!" she concluded, with emphasis.

"Would you mind doing it once more?" he said.

The waitress looked her disgust and started in a third time, pronouncing the words in a defiantly clear tone.

"Thank you," he remarked when she had finished. "For the life of me I can't see how you do it. But I like to hear it. It's very interesting, very. Give me apple pie, please, and thank you very much."—Youth's Companion.

A Noiseless City in Friesland.

Fancy a city of 35,000 inhabitants, guiltless of street cars and omnibuses (the steam tram line from Franeker halts discreetly without the town), easily encompassed in an hour, for its singel, its old moat which it has not yet greatly overstepped, is not three miles in extent; a city without great noise or confusion, save upon market days, and clean, quiet streets, lined by low houses with shining windows, peopled by rosy cheeked serving women, capped with gold and lace, and demurely dressed, grave faced citizens. Send red sailed boats to its very heart until masts are jumbled with electric light poles and church towers; plant densely foliaged trees beside its quays and a few iron railed flower beds in its open squares; give it a water girdle thronged with hundreds of boats, crossed by a few bridges and many little hand ferries—and you will see Leeuwarden.—Scribner's Magazine.

"Why?"

"Because then they would have been."

Exploiting the Antique.

A gang of swindlers arrested by the Toulouse police had for stock in trade a beautiful antique cabinet and a considerable stock of audacity. With these they took, for a short lease, a historic chateau near Toulouse, installing a venerable old lady to play the part of owner. Then they found a collector of antiques, persuaded him to visit the chateau and sold him the really valuable cabinet at a good round price. After the bargain was concluded they invited the victim to lunch, and while he was eating the meal the real cabinet was replaced by a perfect imitation, which the victim carried off with him. The swindlers, before their arrest, succeeded in selling their cabinet thirty-three times, at prices varying from $500 to $3,000.

When Animals Are Ill.

Said a prominent veterinarian: "Animals when sick are the most helpless and appreciative of all creatures, and the way of administering relief and medicine in many instances is as novel as it is effective. The most savage and revengeful animals during spells of severe pain are, as a rule, as docile and tractable as a child. Relief must come from a human being, and come quickly, and they seem to know it. The most vicious horse when groaning with pain would allow a mere child to administer relief, and many of the wild animals when in sickness seem to forget their savage instincts."

The Greyhound.

Various explanations have been given of the origin of the term greyhound, some authors claiming that the prefix grey is taken from Gratus, meaning Greek, others that it signifies great, while still others say that it has reference to the color of the animal. In no other breed of hounds is the blue or gray color so prevalent, and consequently the last mentioned derivation seems the most plausible.—London Notes and Queries.

MISS BIRDIE DAWSON HIGH CANDIDATE TO-DAY

Herb McMillan Back in First Place in the Men's City List, Replacing Wm. A. Mowry—P. G. Towns Continues to Gain on Sidney A. Smithson—Murtin Colin ~~a Heavy~~ Voter of Pinks.

THE TOTAL VOTE NEARING 500,000

The Ladies' City List Has Polled 184,000, the Men 79,000—The Ladies' County List 131,000, the Men 56,000—Monday's Vote is a Good One for the First Day of the Week.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

Saturday's leaders in District No. 1 were forced into second place today, but the margin in each case is very small. Admirable generalship is being shown by all the active candidates in the contest. Because a candidate is a few thousand votes lower than the leaders does not at all times indicate they could not lead if they wished; in fact some near the bottom of the score to-day may be at the top to-morrow. A few new subscriptions would work wonders right now. It is not so important to vote high but IT IS important to be able to do so when the right time comes—the finish.

The leaders to-day;

HIGH VOTE
Miss Birdie Dawson.

FIRSTS
Miss Birdie Dawson.
Miss Rose P. Moore.
Herb McMillan
Sidney A Smithson.

SECONDS
Miss Maude Adams.
Miss Lila Finlay.
Wm. A. Mowry.
P. G Towns.

Live candidates have come to the conclusion that time spent in collecting coupons could be much better employed in securing a few subscriptions which will give the contestant more votes in an hour than could be clipped in four days. This point is plain. Gathering coupons is no small job, and the results obtained are so small compared with the same energy expended in a subscription campaign that it is time—and valuable time—wasted. It is going to require work to win this contest, and only those who put forth their very best efforts will have the opportunity to accept congratulations of their friends

Get a few "clubs" while the big offer is on. Don't be satisfied with one. Get all you want.

Five new yearly subscriptions to the Daily Review from five different persons will give you 15 000 votes, to which add the 10 000 special ballot, making 25 000 in all. It is possible to greatly increase the number of votes by having one subscriber take more than one year.

The possibilities are fully as attractive in the Weekly clubs. Including the special ballot, ten years from ten different new subscribers will net 15 000 votes, while five years each from two subscribers will give a total of 23 000 votes—9,000 from each of the two subscribers (18 000) and 5 000 special ballot. "A word to the wise." etc.

Now is the time to call on your friends who have promised you support. Go to these same friends before next Monday evening and show them that it is greatly to your advantage to secure their subscriptions during this special ballot offer. If they are in good faith with you they will give you the subscriptions at once and not put you off until the last day.

TO CANDIDATES IN DISTRICT NO. 2.

Contestants out of the city should send in their subscriptions as soon as received. Please state whether you wish the voting certificates placed in the ballot box or mailed to you to be voted later. The contest man is very busy these days Certificates turned in for out-of-town candidates will be voted when issued unless otherwise instructed, so as to avoid possible complications.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number cheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

Serious Interruptions.

The truly lazy man is not a common figure in this country, and when he does appear he is not treated with proper respect. Ideal laziness is an art as difficult as playing on the violin. A writer in the Washington Star tells of one member of the Sons of Rest who deserves recognition.

"I s'pose John is still taking life easy?" said the woman in the spring wagon.

"Yes," answered the woman who was carrying an armful of wood. "John has only two regrets in life. One is that he has to wake up to eat, and the other is that he has to quit eating to sleep."

Ancestral Pride.

"Do you still want this genealogy?" asked the man who digs up such things.

"Sure, I do. Why not?"

"Well, I've found that your great-great-grandfather was hanged for murder, your great-grandfather was imprisoned for robbery, and your grandfather was tarred and feathered for beating his wife. That's not a very proud record, is it?"

"I should say it is. Shows how my family is getting better each generation. I'm an improvement on the whole bunch—never been in jail yet. Let me have those records. I'm proud of 'em!"

Apple Pie and Melted Cheese.

Bake a pie crust in the bottom and on the side of a pie tin; fill with apple quarters stewed till tender and return to the oven, putting a little cinnamon, sugar and bits of butter over. When it is baked enough to set, draw it out and cover with a thick layer of grated cheese. Return to the fire and let the cheese melt and brown. Serve immediately.—Harper's Bazar.

A Reminder.

"Pa," said Bert, "won't you double my allowance?"

"Why should I, sonny?"

"Oh, I thought if it was bigger it would be more on your mind and you might remember to give it to me sometimes."—London Telegraph.

The intellect is perfected not by knowledge, but by activity.—Aristotle.

Too Much.

"Of course," said the lady with the steel bound glasses, "I expected to be called 'strong minded' after making a speech three hours long in favor of our sex, but to have it misprinted into 'strong winded' was too, too much."

He Traveled Light.

"That hall room boarder moved today."

"I didn't see any trunk go out."

"There was none. I guess he placed his effects in an envelope and mailed 'em to the new address."—Kansas City Journal.

THE MOCK PARLIAMENT IS VERY INTERESTING FEATURE

On Saturday night the mock parliament attracted as usual, a large attendance at the Young Conservative Club.

The Minister of Public Wroks announced that the Provincial Treasurer had been chosen by the party as Prime Minister. He will retain the treasurership. He was heartily congratulated on his assumption of the leadership.

The estimates have not yet been laid on the table, but the Prime Minister promised to have them brought down by the next sitting of the House.

The adjourned debate on the second reading of the Enfranchisement for Women Bill was then resumed by the member from Parry Sound. He strongly arraigned the measure in an able address. After a discussion of the measure in which the Prime Minister, the Minister of Public Works, and the member for East Peterborough took part, a division was taken. The result was that the second reading was carried by a majority of 1. The third reading was also carried, so that the Bill only awaits His Honor's assent to become law.

The Minister of Public Works gave notice of his intention to bring in a Bill to build a canal from Georgian Bay and the Prime Minister gave notice of a Bill to tax bachelors.

These measures will come up before the House at the next session.

As a number of members were for business reasons unable to be present on Saturday evenings it was decided to hold the meetings on Thursday evening for a week or two. The House will therefore meet on Thursday March 4th, at 8 o'clock sharp.

SOON HAD THE NEW FIREMEN

Places of the Three Men Arrested are Filled in Short Order

As a result of the three firemen who assaulted Deputy Chief Grange being arrested, three vacancies were left in the brigade. Chief Howard had three applicants in reserve, however, and acted with expediency and had the places of the men taken into custody, filled on the shortest notice.

PROCEEDS FOR THE DORCAS SOCIETY

Settlers' Trains to the Northwest

The Canadian Pacific Railway will run special trains for settlers going west with live stock and effects, leaving Toronto at 10.15 p.m. every Tuesday in March and April. Colonist cars will be attached and trains run by Canadian Pacific direct time-saving route, no changes, delays or customs examinations. Settlers travelling alone and with their families should use regular passenger trains leaving Toronto at 10.15 p.m. daily. By doing so, and paying a small charge for berths, they will have the added comfort of the journey in a tourist sleeper. "Settlers' Guide" free pamphlet giving full particulars and rates may be obtained of nearest C.P.R. agent, or direct from R. L. Thompson, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

It is proposed to from a miniature rifle club at Brixton parish church institute, Effra road.

MR. LAYFIELD HONORED BY YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

Mr W. E. Layfield, who is leaving for Toronto in a few days, was honored by the Young Conservative Club on Saturday evening. Mr Layfield is a former member of the club and his departure is greatly regretted. There was a large turnout of the members to bid him good bye.

The chairman called upon Mr Peter Gardner the secretary, who read the address, expressive of the very high esteem in which Mr Layfield was held throughout the city and making due acknowledgement of the great service that he had done Conservatives in the county and city of Peterborough in founding the club. On completion of the reading of the address Mr Kendrey, ex-MP, presented Mr Layfield, on behalf of the club, with a handsome case of pipes and accompanied the presentation with a fine tribute to Mr Layfield's worth.

Mr Layfield made a feeling reply. He said that he had conceived the idea of founding the club on the night of Mr Kendrey's defeat five years ago. Hitherto it had been a case in both parties of the 90 per cent being run by the 10 per cent, and he thought that it was time teh tail ceased wagging the dog. If the club had been in existence prior to that election Mr Kendrey would never have been beaten.

The club was a wholly democratic institution under the best sort of auspices and doing well and he could say to all his old comrades that he would bid them a very regretful farewell.

The president of the club, Mr. Burnham then expressed further acknowledgment on behalf of the members and testified to the integrity and fairmindness of Mr Layfield, who had earned a reputation that any man might well envy.

The mock parliament then proceeded to business, passing the Women's Suffrage bill by one vote. The interest in parliamentary matters is keen and the rivalry sharp and effective. Many good speakers are developing.

USEFUL INVENTION BY A FORMER PETERBORO' BOY

Printer and Publisher for February says;—

Canadians generally come to the top when they go abroad and generally manage to get into positions of responsibility which they fill with credit. The latest example of success is C. C. H. Delaney of New York, and a former Peterborough boy. He is a son of the late Hon. J. A. Delaney of North Dakota, head of the firm of Delaney & Sons, who manufactured agricultural implements—1874, to 1879—in Peterborough.

C. C. H. Delaney who was educated at the South Ward (now South Central) school, Peterborough, is a prominent law stenographer of New York, and is making a success with his own invention a new process typewriter matrix paper. That is the letters of the typewriter impressed upon the paper so as to form a matrix from which a casting can be made providing a plate from which an indefinite number of copies can be printed.

His invention has a good deal wider application and it is a pleasure to know that a Canadian has invented a process that seems certain to achieve a world-wide success.

TORONTO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA GAVE DELIGHTFUL CONCERT

Announcement: During the three years the Toronto Symphony Orchestra has been in existence, they have come to the front very rapidly, and the Orchestra now ranks as the leading orchestral organization in the Dominion of Canada. The committee of management feel that in presenting the orchestra to the citizens of Peterborough their efforts will be appreciated and that they may rely upon their patronage and support in making this concert a great success and an encouragement for future appearances in this city.

On account of lack of sufficient space to give as full a report as the concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, given on Friday evening, was entitled to, the following reference was not given in Saturday's issue of the Review:

If any evidence were needed that Toronto is a great musical centre and a theatre of musical development it was furnished by the visit of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra to Peterborough, and the excellent programme presented at the Grand Opera House on Friday night. The high place attained by the now celebrated Mendelssohn choir in the vocal sphere seems to be near at hand for the Symphony orchestra in the domain of orchestral music.

A musical, but not large audience gave the orchestra an appreciative hearing and were very highly delighted with the work of the orchestra, the programme being as well selected to give effect to the artistic versatility of the organization as to cater to the varying musical tastes of the audience.

The concert opened with the beautiful overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which displayed a creditable capability of the several sections of the orchestra. The number began with a theme recited by the basses and taken up successively by the other sections till it engaged the full ensemble. The balance and volume of tone were excellent and the interpretative fidelity to excellent leading of Mr Frank Welsman, the capable conductor, was associated with careful attention to delicacy of nuance and other musical requirements of the selection.

The serving of the first course in the musical feast prepared the hearers for the splendid performance of Schuberts Eighth ("Unfinished") Symphony. The third number, a group of contrasting themes and styles—the Prelude of Kistler to the third act of Kunihild, Elegiac Melody by Greig (for strings only) and a popular number in Moszkowski's most sprightly vein—"Spanish Dances." In this group the orchestra, in a most effective manner measured up to the exacting demands of technical and sympathetic treatment called for.

The Mendelssohn overture, "The Hebrides" received a musicianly reading expressive of intelligent appreciation of its spirit and motive. Similar faithfulness to musical character and consistency marked the playing of the dances from German's Henry VIII.

Altogether the Toronto Symphony Orchestra gave a programme that thoroughly delighted its audience and displayed a musical form and executive capacity reflecting the highest credit upon all of the sixty performers as well as the skill and inspiring influence of their director. Their performance here was indeed a pleasant surprise even to those who expected much of them.

The assisting artists were Miss May Crawford, soprano vocalist, and Miss Lena Drechsler Adamson, of Toronto. Miss Crawford's excellent and carefully trained voice was charmingly employed in the selection "Grand Valse" from the Barber of Seville and with even better advantage in the threefold song group which composed her second number. A hearty recall testified to the approval of the audience.

A genuine musical treat was the performance by Miss Adamson of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, by some regarded as his masterpiece. Technical facility, purity of tone and delicate finish were among the characteristics that gave distinction to her beautifully melodious number. Miss Adamson's excellent work derives greater local interest from the fact of her being a member of the faculty of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music.

To Mr H C Cox, an old Peterborough boy, and youngest son of Hon. Senator Cox are due the thanks of the audience that had so much pleasure from the visit of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

A SONG OF PETERBOROUGH

By John Bell.

Peterborough lies in a valley rare.
  With hills abounding beautiful and fair,
With Otonabee river running through,
  A city destined by nature to grow.

At Peterborough on the Trent Canal,
  There stands the Lift Lock so wonderful tall,
Facing the Little Lake and cemetery,
  As well as the river Otonabee.

The Lift Lock stands east of the Armour hill,
  A monument of engineering skill,
About a half mile from this famous Lock,
  Stands the post office and the city clock.

And the Little Lake with its crescent shape,
  A rare panorama from George street make,
And would be first rate for a skiff boat race,
  From shore there is a view from every place.

And our little creek is awfully pretty,
  Running across the streets of our city
And would be excellent for the main sewer,
  Keeping our city clean, healthy, and pure.

And Jackson Park at the head of Park street,
  Is excellent for a summer retreat,
The little creek pond reflecting the sky,
  And beautiful sights delighting the eye.

The oval park is another resort
  Where many go for their tennis ball sport,
Where Otonabee river proudly flow,
  Through the great city of Peterborough.

Let our City Council and Mayor Bush,
  For railways to the north make a big push,
Tap the Grand Trunk and Pacific railway,
  Push on the line to the Georgian Bay.

THE INTHON BIBLE CLASS

The attendance keeps on increasing in leaps and bounds. Yesterday ninety-six were in attendance.

If it keeps up much longer the Inthons will have to find larger quarters. It looks good to see the room full and we hope it will be the same way every Sunday.

The class motto, "We can if I will" seems to fit in pretty good.

The president, Mr W B Warne, was conspicuous by his absence and not only was he missed but he also missed hearing a very good lesson discussion which was carried on between the teacher, Rev. E A Pearson, and the class.

After the lesson came the reports of the secretary and treasurer which were very gratifying indeed.

The bouquet of flowers which is supplied by the class every Sunday, was sent to Mr Wm Might who is at present very sick. His many friends will regret to learn that he has not improved very much in the last week.

The matter of the Dominion Alliance meeting next Thursday, March 4th, was brought before the class. It was decided to send a delegate. Ex-Ald Johnston was unanimously selected.

The meeting was then brought to a close and after the "Friendly Inthon hand shake the members and visitors dispersed.

AN ATTACK ON WHITNEY BY MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Discusses Florence Mining Co. Case.

Calls Action of Ontario Government "Confiscatory"---Telephone Rates Discussed.

Ottawa, March 2.—"I only trust that the day will never come when they may see reason to regret from personal experience that they (the voters of Ontario) did not condemn at the polls, as it ought to have been condemned, this manifest encroachment upon the rights of property and the right to resort to courts," said Mr. Aylesworth, in concluding a speech yesterday afternoon on a motion of A. H. Clark (Essex) for papers in connection with the request of the Florence Mining Co. for disallowance of the act respecting Cobalt and Kerr Lakes, passed by the Ontario Legislature in 1907.

Mr. Clark declared the act to be a clear violation of the eighth commandment, inasmuch as it not only confiscated private property, but prevented the Florence Mining Co., the prior claimants, from following up their case in the courts. The Florence Mining Co. had appealed in vain to both the Lieutenant-Governor and the governor-in-council at Ottawa to disallow the act, while Justice Riddell had decided that even to the extent of confiscation of private rights, the Legislature was acting within its competence.

The proposition to refer the matter to appeal to decide whether the property was open for exploration was refused. Then the act of 1906 was rushed through, which the Florence Mining Co. believe took from them property worth over a million dollars, without compensation. The company would take the case, if necessary, to the foot of the throne. Independent opinion in the country would be such that the Privy Council uphold the action of the Ontario Legislature, measures should be taken to provide a remedy even if it required an amendment to the B.N.A. Act.

"One of the principal grounds on which the question was rested," said Mr. Aylesworth, in his speech, "was that it affected the revenues of the province. No doubt it did. There was a million dollars hung up before the eyes of the voters of the Province of Ontario, and because the Ontario Government had secured from this operation the magnificent sum of $1,000,000, the voters of the province were asked to ratify what they had done and to say that it was a proper and legitimate transaction.

"I wonder if it occurred to any of my fellow electors that the Government of Ontario could at any time make a good many millions of dollars if they pleased for the revenues of the province by confiscating farms enough, and by legislating these farms into the pockets of anybody willing to pay for them."

Mr. Borden said he regretted the bad taste of Mr. Aylesworth in attacking the Ontario Government. If the refusal of the Ontario Government to permit litigation in respect to the rights of the companies that claim to have been aggrieved was outrageous, he would like to point out that in no less than thirty or forty cases the Government refused to allow a reference to the Exchequer Court of claims against the Postoffice Department.

"Let me ask the Minister of Justice," he said, "to begin his investigations against the Government of which he is a member."

The resolution was passed.

That it has become the duty of the Dominion Government to initiate measures to remove long existing abuses in regard to the telephone service of the people of Canada and secure a rate at least as moderate as in countries where a national telephone service is maintained, was urged by Haughton Lennox, who moved last night a resolution along these lines.

The report of Francis Dagger, who had investigated the question, and the opinion of Sir Wm. Mulock, amply bore out the statement that Canadians were paying 100 per cent. more for telephone service than any other people in the world, he said. While not arguing for Government ownership he maintained that the Government should do something to relieve the people from the heavy burden them were bearing.

SMASHED THE PANE

Peculiar Accident Yesterday Afternoon at George Street Store.

Yesterday afternoon a woman shopper slipped and fell through a pane of the glass in the door of the fruit store kept by Mr. Frank Marino, on George street, opposite the Grand Opera House. The glass in the door was shattered but the lady fortunately was not injured.

There was a light covering of snow in the entrance to the door and the footing was very uncertain.

THE CASHIER IS MISSING

Saskatoon, Sask., March 2.—Considerable astonishment was aroused locally when it was stated yesterday morning that Frank Lee, teller in the Northern Crown Bank here, is missing along with $5,000 in cash.

Lee was a young fellow and well-liked and no one suspected anything wrong. About ten days ago he got leave to visit his mother in the east, who was reported to be dying, and left hurriedly. It is now rumored that along with Lee, a woman from the red light district went on the same train.

Inspector Tule of Winnipeg, and local Manager R. R. Morgan will say nohing other than they look to the bonding company to make good the shortage in his accounts.

In addition to being teller, Lee was also acting accountant, and it would be an easy matter for him to "cook" the books to cover up any shortage.

It is supposed Lee has gone south.

HON. MR. FOY'S BILL TO AMEND THE LIBEL LAW

Toronto, March 2.—Thirty-six third readings were on the order paper of the Legislature yesterday, seven second readings, and one question. The business done consisted of the routine presentation of petitions and the introduction of four new bills, none of the regular orders being touched.

Hon. J. J. Foy introduced another of the statutory revision bills, the present one respecting the actions for libel and slander. The bill, though printed, he said, would not pass in that shape. The proposed changes he thought would be for the benefit of the newspapers and the advantage of the public. The time for issuing a writ, which was now three months from the time of the libel coming to the knowledge of the complainant, might be shortened. It was found in practice that the provisions for consolidating actions brought by one person against several papers did not accomplish the object intended. When exactly the same libel appeared in several papers one paragraph was taken in one paper, a second paragraph in another, another in a third, and so on, and the judges held that this was not within the statute of consolidation. The statute was also sometimes evaded by issuing several writs and only serving one, going on with that and holding the others till the time for consolidation had gone past. The amended act will provide for these and other contingencies.

W. H. Hearst introduced a bill to amend the Unorganized Territory Act, and J. J. Preston (Durham) a bill to incorporate the Ontario Eastern Counties Electric Belt Line Railway Co.

Mr. Fox will introduce a bill to amend the Municipal Waterworks Act.

Mr. Stock will move for a return showing: 1. The names of all the collegiate institutes, high schools and continuation class schools in the province. 2. Which of these schools were classed "approved" in the academic year July, 1907, and July, 1908. 3. The change (if any) made in the classification of each such school since July 1, 1908, to date. 4. The reasons for each such change in classification.

19 1-2 MILLS WILL BE THE TAX RATE

City Council Finally Decide the Question Last Night---Committees Get Some More Money ---Some Wanted 20 Mills.

Nineteen and one half mills will be the tax rate for 1909.

The City Council so decided last night after considerable discussion. One faction held over for twenty mills and another wing of the Council wanted nineteen mills. Finally it was decided to have 19 1-2 mills. All the aldermen voted in favor of the middle rate except Ald. Morgan and Ald. Duffus, who held out for 19 mills.

The Finance Committee held a joint meeting yesterday afternoon with the city Trust Commission and the latter decided to reduce their request on the city for 1909 by $8,500. It was stated by members of the Finance Committee at the meeting of the Council last night that the impression at the meeting in the afternoon when the commission agreed to reduce the amount of their request was that the rate would be nineteen mills. No promise had been made, however.

Ald. Morrow, chairman of the Finance Committee, brought up the matter in committee of the whole and moved, seconded by Ald. Phelan, that the rate be nineteen mills.

Ald. Hicks and Ald. Buller moved and seconded in amendment that the rate be 20 mills.

The vote on the amendment resulted in a tie, 6—6, and Mayor Rush voted in favor of it, carrying the amendment.

Some more discussion ensued and Ald. Duncan, on learning that the Finance Committee had talked a nineteen mill rate with the Commissioners, said he would vote in favor of the nineteen mill rate as he considered the city should not break faith with the commissioners.

Ald. Buller said the appropriation for the Fire, Water and Light Committee had been pared too closely. He would hold out for a 20 mill rate until the appropriation had been increased.

Ald. Bradburn then came to the front with the proposition for a 19 1-2 mill rate.

After some discussion the aldermen swung around to the middle figure. Ald. Buller seconded Ald. Bradburn's motion and it carried, Ald. Morgan and Ald. Duffus holding out against it.

In regular session afterwards the Council passed a by-law fixing the rate at 19 1-2 mills.

The nineteen and a half mill rate will increase the revenue by $4,213 over that raised by the nineteen mill rate.

It was decided to distribute the extra money as follows;

Fire, Water and Light Committee, $1,000.
Board of Works, $1,000.
Property Committee, $300.
Manufacturers' Committee, $500.
Miscellaneous, $1,413.

Ald. Phelan wanted $2,500 for the Board of Works, but a motion to this effect was defeated 10—2.

COMPREHENSIVE SYSTEM FOR THE POLICING OF ONTARIO

New Force for Province is Reported to be in Progress of Organizing Which Will Overcome Present Difficulties in Dealing With Crime—

Toronto, March 2.—The "Ontario Provincial Police" will be designed to insure law-observanve and law-enforcement. Its mission will be to establish and maintain Ontario's good name, at home and abroad—to make this province alike feared by evildoers and respected by the people at large. It will co-operate in the enforcement of the liquor laws, the stamping out of disorderly houses and petty crime.

No official intimation as to the composition or character of the proposed organization has yet been forthcoming from the Government, but it has been learned that the project will probably be a comprehensive and thorough one.

It is unofficially reported that a provisional draft of the proposed organization and equipment of a force of provincial police is now practically in readiness for Government supervision. Under this plan a systematised organization is contemplated. The official head will, it is understood, be the Attorney-General, while immediately under him will be the chief executive officer, who will have supervision over the entire force. Associated with the chief will probably be two divisional superintendents.

In co-operation with the head office will likely be a staff—probably three to five—inspecters of criminal investigation, or secret service men.

The working force will, it is believed, be composed of sergeants and constables. A sergeant will be placed over each county or district. His headquarters will probably be at the county town in the organized parts and at the most central point in unorganized territory. He will be required to keep in constant touch with his men and their work, and with the divisional superintendent.

A strict code of rules will govern the constables. No one will be allowed to enter the force under the age of 21 or over that of 38 years. They may be required to qualify by test or examination, must know thoroughly the country in which they serve and have acquainted themselves with the statutes it is their duty to enforce.

The intention is, it is understood, to have the entire force paid by salary. The retention of fees or the acceptance of commissions will be absolutely prohibited.

MR. J. C. EATON OFFICIALLY DENIES THE RUMOR ABOUT EATON'S LOCATING HERE

Mr J C Eaton, of the T. Eaton Co. was in town yesterday with his beautifully fitted up parlor car the "Eatonia," and was seen by a Review representative concerning the rumors that have been going the rounds for some time to the effect that the Eaton Company would locate a branch here.

"Are you going to establish a branch store in Peterborough" Mr. Eaton was asked.

"No," he replied. "We have no intention of doing so. I am simply here privately with my wife and mother, and my visit has no business import whatever."

"Is there any possibility of the Eaton Company opening a store here in the future."

"No, nothing to that effect has been decided upon at all. You may deny the rumors that the Eaton Company will locate in Peterborough."

WAS IT YOUNG MAN FROM VIRGINIA WHO KILLED GIRL?

This is the Theory That Provincial Detective Miller is Working on—Stranger Bought False Moustache and This May Furnished a Clue.

Special to the Review.

Hamilton, March 2.—It has been discovered that on Saturday, Feb. 26, a stranger went into the store of Madame Mintz and bought a false moustache, intimating he was out for a little fun.

The fact has been unearthed by a Pinkerton detective, who has gone to Richmond, Virginia, to look into that possible end of the Kinrade murder mystery. Miss Flossie Kinrade visited Richmond last summer, and while there was pestered by the attentions of a young man who persisted in forcing himself on her. When she returned home she received some letters from this Virginian, despite the fact that she was engaged to a Montreal student.

She and her sister Ethel had quarreled over this. It is the supposition that the man who purchased the moustache from Madame Mintz was the murderer, and Detective Miller is hotly following that clue.

QUARANTINE IS RAISED

Port Hope, March 1—The quarantine at the Ontario House and American Hotel was raised today and once more the inmates were allowed to breathe the air of liberty after having been closed up for two long weeks. In the opinion of the majority of people this quarantine was quite unnecessary but the regulations called for it and consequently the Board of Health had no alternative. The boys are delighted to be free once more and we are pleased to learn that they are all feeling fine and dandy.

MISS KINRADE HAS ANOTHER STORY OF THE MURDER NOW

Murderer Not a Tramp She States.

Says She Was Fired at Several Times as She Escaped From Window.

Hamilton, March 2.—Miss Florence Kinrade was yesterday morning interrogated by Provincial Detective Miller and City Detectives Bleakley and Coulter. She was in a very nervous and hysterical condition, and told an almost totally different story of the affair from which she first told.

She said that when she was upstairs she heard shots fired, that she ran downstairs past the man and got out of a side window, the man firing several shots after her.

She also said that when she came back into the house she grappled with him, and that when she ran out of the front door to give an alarm he fired several more shots after her.

She said that the murderer was not a tramp, as he was too well dressed. She could not be sure whether she would know him again.

The autopsy has confirmed the fact that seven shots were fired into the body of the murdered girl.

The police deny that they found a blood-stained scarf in the back yard as they were inspecting the premises after the shooting. The found a rag from an apron lying in the bushes, but say that it had no blood stains on it, and they attach no significance to it.

Interest is now being centred on the inquest, which is due for Wednesday night. It is not certain that Miss Kindale will be able to be present to testify, according to her father's opinion last night. It is anticipated, however, that there will be some surprising information from the medical men who made the post-mortem examination.

Meanwhile, everybody has a theory of his own. One prominent military man declares that the shooting must have been done by a strong man, well used to firearms, else the bullets would not all have found their billet, and in such vital region. It is certain some shots were fired while the woman was prostrate.

Another man who has been following the case closely holds to the theory that the shooting was done by someone who knew the family and the house; that Miss Florence realized that her sister was in danger and ran upstairs to tell her to lock herself in her room; that Miss Ethel, in fear, hurried down the backstairs to escape, only to be met by her assailant. He also suggests that the shooting was done some time before Miss Florence notified the neighbors, but that this delay was due to the fact that she likely had swooned in the interval. This theory is supported, in a way, in the statement that the coroner on arrival noted that the dead girl's hand was cold, as though death had taken place some time before; while it would also account for the fact that no man was noticed to leave the house just previous to Miss Kinrade's giving the alarm. Many other theories and stories are in circulation.

Mr. Kinrade has decided to offer the reward of $1,000 for the detection of the murderer. Mrs. Kinrade knows that her daughter came to her death, but has been told that it was the result of an accident.

Mr. Kinrade talks of taking his family away from the scene of the tragedy for a time.

The detectives will interview Miss Florence Kinrade again to-day. They say, in spite of reports to the contrary, that she appeared to be quite calm and collected during their interview yesterday, though laboring under a strain, until they were coming away when she went into hysterics again.

The fact that she has told them four different stories has proved baffling to them. Yesterday she said that when she jumped out of the side window, the man grabbed her and pulled her back into the house again. The police say that there were no indications of a struggle having taken place at the window, and they can find no trace of the bullets she says were fired after her when she jumped out of the window and when she rushed from the house to give the alarm.

The constables who have been out looking for suspicious tramps returned without making any arrests. They claim that they found the surrounding country overrun by armed hoboes.

A False Alarm

At 11.23 last night the fire brigade had a run through a false alarm from box 41 at the corner of London and Park Sts.

TRAMP SCARE

Hoboes Cause Annoyance and Alarm in Peterboro' County.

There are lots of tramps in Peterborough county, and the recently reported depredations of these wanderers have caused the good people in the rural communities to become afraid of the members of the vagrant order. In the county the tramp is particularly bold and annoying for he knows he is not within as easy access for the officers of the law as if he were in the city.

The farmers state that they are afraid to give tramps accommodation in their barns as they are liable to set them on fire through their careless and the women in the country are in a state of terror when hoboes are in the neighborhood. In many instances, of course, there are cases of unfortunate fellows being unable to get work, but it is impossible to distinguish between the deserving tramp with a true story of hard luck and the dangerous "professional hobo."

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Harry Morel, M.P.P. for Nipissing, is seriously ill at his home at Mattawa, with pneumonia.

The three Peterboro firemen who assaulted the deputy chief have been remanded for eight days without bail.

Four letters or documents signed by Washington were sold at auction at Sotheboy's yesterday for $210 to a London dealer.

At Arichat, N.S., two men were moving a house and went under to fix skids. These gave way and the men were crushed to death.

There is not a single case, civil or criminal, to be tried at the Spring Assizes at St. Catharines, which Chief Justice Mulock was to open yesterday.

Engineer George of Findlay, Ohio, was instantly killed, and Fireman Richards was probably fatally injured yesterday, when the boiler of a passenger engine exploded five miles west of that town.

Julien H. Arnold, U. S. consul at Amoy, China, started a shipment of pomelo or grape fruit trees to the farm of the University of California, and the Government experimental station in southern California, for experiment purposes.

BRANTFORD PAPER SAYS THAT THE 38th MAY COME HERE

The Brantford Expositor says:

According to a well defined rumor around the Dufferin Rifles Armories, the regiment is likely to go to Peterborough on Victoria Day. The trip will be the return trip to the Peterborough regiment which visited Brantford a couple of years ago and had a splendid outing. Should the Dufferins complete arrangements to go out of the city on the holiday the plan will forestall military celebrations which has been proposed by the Old Home Week executive. According to the rumor in local military circles, there is a strong feeling prevailing that the regiment ought to make the trip. It was stated today that should the regiment remain in the city there would be a good chance to secure the visit of a couple of strong Western Ontario organizations for the celebration here.

RECEIVES LETTER FROM COMPOSER

The next full rehearsal will be held on Wednesday of next week instead of on Monday as formerly.

Mr Gliddon has received a letter from the composer of "The Little Tycoon," and the latter says he will forward all the orchestra parts. With these and an orchestra of twenty-five the piece will be given a much more satisfactory presentation than it would with a smaller orchestra.

HANDS COVERED WITH ECZEMA

"For three weeks I actually had to be fed like one feeds a baby, because my hands and arms were so covered with eczema that they had to be bound up all the time."

That is the experience of Miss Violet M. McSorley, of 75, Gore Street, Sault Ste. Marie. She adds: "I could not hold spoon nor fork. From finger tips to elbows the dreaded disease spread, my finger nails came off and my flesh was one raw mass. The itching and the pain were almost excruciating. I had three months of this torture and at one time amputation was discussed."

"Zam-Buk alone saved my hands and arms. I persevered with it and in the end had my reward. To-day, I am cured completely of every trace of the dreaded eczema, and I fervently hope that sufferers from skin disease may know of my case and the miracle Zam-Buk has worked."

Zam-Buk is without equal for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, piles, cracked hands, cold sores, chapped places, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for same price. You are warned against dangerous substitutes sometimes offered as "just as good."

THE WIRELESS ON TRAINS

Suddenly there has come into daily use the latest wonder of the age—wireless telegraphy. Trains going at the rate of 60 odd miles an hour catch communications of every kind. As yet the work is in the experimental stage, but when a car breaks a truck and the fact is at once flashed to near and far, warning given and help secured the difficulty of travel seems about to be solved.

THE COLOR QUESTION IN CANADA

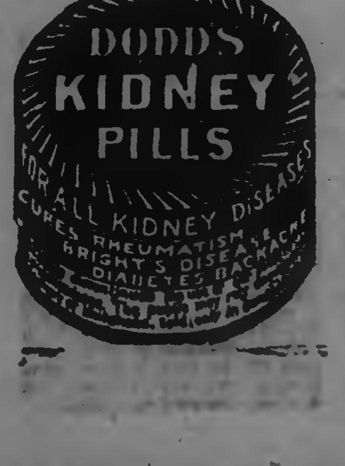
Because the school trustees of Section No. 9, near Amherstburg, appointed a colored teacher, the white children have all been withdrawn from the school. Two of the three trustees are colored.—The Globe.

We see entering here the thin edge of the wedge. It will not be long until we shall have the color question as acute one in Canada. It seems to be impossible for races to mingle as races. Individual cases of attachment may result in marriage etc. but as a whole race will not associate with race, and for that matter nationality with nationality. The more it is sought to check or correct it the more violent do the prejudices become. It is doubtful if they can ever be modified, let alone removed. They mean the gradual extinction of the weaker race by the stronger, and time has shown so far that the white race is the strongest of all races, although, as in the remote past, this statement may be open to revision.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Villars-sur-Ollon, Switzerland, Feb. 27.—The Canadian rink, captained by Jas. McDiarmid, today won the international curling bonspiel here. Fourteen rinks participated. The second prize was won by the Huddersfield rink. McDiarmid is a Winnipeg man.

We always associate flying with speed, and it is gratifying to find that flying-machines are going at a great pace. When the game is on and they get going there will be lively doings. Bandits will escape to Mars and defaulting cashiers to parts even more unknown than those so described at present.



We were the only paper in Peterborough to extend the simplest courtesies of journalism to the Times. We alone recognised it as a brother. We invited it in, spoke kindly to it, and this is what we got:—

"It is little the people of this city realise what they missed last night by an accident which occurred in one of the evening paper offices. The editor who indulges in higher criticisms and the cheavier class of literature generally, prepared some weighty editorial for Monday's issue, but so heavy was it that it broke through the chase and pied at the foreman's feet. In the place of that which was destined to revolutionize the city was placed several columns of boiler plate and the public are not even complaining."—The Times.

London Feb. 28.—The despatch from Australia to the effect that the Commonwealth of Australia had declined to give financial aid to the furtherance of the "All-Red Route" project, will cause no little disappointment to the advocates.

AN ATTACK ON WHITNEY

After eleven months of Government ownership and operation of telephones, the Manitoba Government had a surplus of $38,000 after 1,468 miles long distance had been added and 2,168 new stations established.

A. K. MacLean (Lunenburg) denied that the people of the three western provinces where the Government owns and operates the telephone service were paying less for telephones than those of the other provinces. He claimed the national telephone service in Europe were as a rule very bad and the rates there could not fairly be compared with rates in Canada. Instead of a surplus it could be easily shown that there had been a deficit while the rates in Alberta were not lower than in the County of Simcoe.

He moved an amendment, expressing approval of the Government placing telephones under the control of the Railway Board.

Mr. Armstrong criticised the manner in which independent lines were treated by the Bell company in the matter of connections.

Mr. Lennox wanted to divide the House on the motion.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier protested that there would be abundant opportunity to resume the discussion, but Mr. Lennox insisted on dividing the House, and the members were called, resulting in the motion of Mr. Carvell being carried by 101 yeas to 47 nays.

E. N. Lewis introduced a bill in the House yesterday to amend the criminal code respecting offensive weapons and capital offences. An immigrant landing in Canada was almost sure to see displays of knives and revolvers in pawn shop windows, which encouraged them to regard weapons as necessary. The bill would permit the sale of weapons only by license. All capital sentences he would have executed at the nearest penitentiary, instead of in the county jail. Hangings, under existing conditions, really constituted incentives to crime.

In reply to Mr. Monk the Minister of Agriculture stated that Dr. J. G. Rutherford had tendered his resignation as veterinary director-general, but had withdrawn it.

A question by Mr. Foster elicited the information that subscriptions by the provinces and private individuals to the Quebec Battlefields Fund amounted to $450,880. Towards the tercentenary fund the Dominion Government subscribed $300,000, sales of tickets for pageants yielded $32,280, refunds, etc., $3,557; total $335,838. There was spent on the celebrations $321,168; out of the battlefields' funds, $24,450 only have been spent, leaving $436,426 in the fund.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

He knew the contents far better than she knew them. The letter purported to be an urgent appeal from James Bansemer, asking her to meet him at 8 o'clock that night. It said:

I must see you tonight. Leave your home at 8 o'clock for a short call on Mrs. W., just around the corner. I will meet you across the Drive, near the sea wall. It is quite dark there. J.

David Cable did not know that earlier in the afternoon James Bansemer had called her up by phone to say that he intended to speak to his son the following day unless word came to him from her, nor could he have possibly known that she was now determined to tell the whole story to her husband and to trust to his mercy. He only knew that he had written the letter and that he had told her of his intention to go downtown immediately after dinner.

CHAPTER XV.

He was not armed. He had thrown his revolver away a week before. His only desire now was to learn the extent of her duplicity. If she obeyed the call of the letter then there could be no doubt that she was coming at the call of the lover. His hands twitched, and he shivered as if with a dreadful chill. His heart was shouting a warning to her, but his head was urging her to come and have done with it all.

He was there early—long before the hour named in the decoy. His eyes never left the sidewalk that ran past his own home, but a short distance from the Drive. They stared without blinking across the dark border through the circle of light from the arc lamp and far into the shadows of blackness beyond. It was very dark where he stood. The lake had battered through the sea wall for many rods at this particular point, and no one ventured out beyond the bridle path for fear of slipping down into the cavities that had been washed out by the waves. His station was on the edge of the piles of stone and cement that had been tossed up to await the pleasure of the park commissioners.

For awhile he tried to take Jane's future into consideration, but it was impossible to substitute anything before his own wrongs. David Cable was not the kind of man who would go on living with a faithless wife for the sake of appearance. He was not an apologist. Time and circumstance and the power of true love would adjust the affair of Jane and Graydon Bansemer. This was his affair. Time could not adjust it for him.

At last he saw a woman's figure hurrying down the street. The wild, eager hope that the light from the electric lamp would prove it to be other than that of his wife was quickly dispelled. His worst fears were true. His Frances, his wife of more than a score of years, his pretty sweetheart through all those days, was false to him! As he fell back against the wall something seemed to snap in his breast; a groan of misery arose to his lips.

With eyes which saw red with rage and anguish, he watched the hesitating approach of the woman. She stepped at the corner and looked up and down the Drive, peering intently into the dark shadows by the lake. The sky was overcast. No stars peeped through its blackness. With uncertain, halting steps she crossed the boulevard, still glancing about as if in search of some one. He moved forward unconsciously, almost blindly, and she caught a glimpse of his tall, dark figure. He was not unlike Bansemer in height and carriage. As she drew near, his legs trembled and tears of despair flooded his eyes.

A savage desire to grasp her by the throat and hurl her into the waters beyond the break came over him with irresistible power. Then came the pitiable collapse which conquered the murderous impulses and left him weak and broken for the moment. With a sob he turned and leaned upon the wall, his back to her, his face buried in his tense arms—crushed, despised, dishonored! Kill her? The horror of it swept his brain clear for an instant. Kill his pretty Frances? Kill Jane's mother? How could he think of it?

It was a long time before the wretched man knew that she was standing close behind him and was speaking to him. The sound of her voice came through the noise of his pounding heart as if it were far away and gentle. But what was it that she was saying? Her voice was angry, suppressed, condemning.

"You may take it or refuse it, just as you please," were the first words his turbulent senses distinguished. "I can pay no more than that for your silence. The other is impossible. I will not discuss it again with you." She paused as if waiting for him to respond.

"Tonight I shall tell my husband everything—the whole story. I cannot endure the suspense any longer. I will not live in fear of you another hour. My only reason for coming out here tonight is to plead with you to spare your son and Jane. I am not asking anything for myself. It would break Jane's heart if Graydon should refuse to marry her. You must have a heart somewhere in that"— But the words became jumbled in the ears of her listener. From time to time his mind grasped such sentences as these, paralyzing in their bitterness: "I have the letters of adoption. David will not believe what you say. He loves me, and he loves Jane. I am willing to pay all that I have to keep it from Graydon and Jane. But I intend to tell my husband. I will not deceive him any longer. He will understand, even though he should hate me for it. He will love Jane, although she is not his own child."

David Cable seemed frozen to the spot. His brain was clearing; he was grasping the full importance of every sentence that rushed from her impassioned lips. The last appalling words fell like the blow of a club in the hands of a powerful man. He was dazed, stunned, senseless. It seemed to him that his breath had ceased to come and that his whole body had turned to stone. His wide staring eyes saw nothing ahead of him.

"Well, what have you to say?" she was demanding. "Why have you asked me to come out here? You have my final answer. What have you to say? Are you going to tell Graydon that Jane is not our child? I must know."

"Not our child?" came from the palsied lips of David Cable, so low and lifeless that the sound was lost in the swish of the water below. The intermittent red signal in the lighthouse far out in the lake blinked back at him, but to him it was a steady, vivid glare.

"Do you hear me? I have lied to my husband for the last time!" There was almost a tone of victory in the voice now. "Do you hear me? You don't dare! David will not believe you. He will believe my"—

A terrible oath choked back the hopeful words in the woman's throat. Murder had come back into the man's heart.

"You lie!"

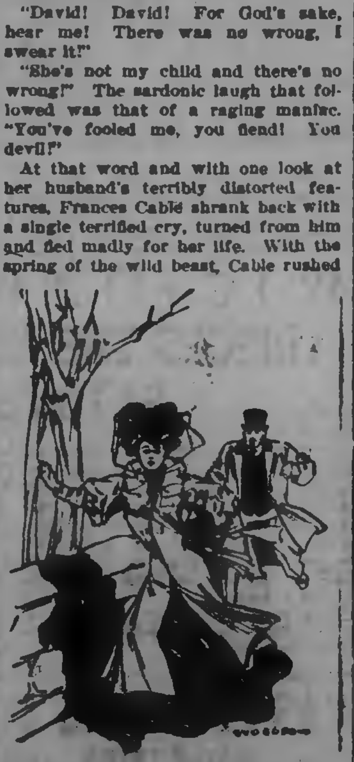
"David!"

"Yes, it's David! Liar! Whose child is she? Tell me?"

"David! David! For God's sake, hear me! There was no wrong, I swear it!"

"She's not my child and there's no wrong!" The sardonic laugh that followed was that of a raging maniac. "You've fooled me, you fiend! You devil!"

At that word and with one look at her husband's terribly distorted features, Frances Cable shrank back with a single terrified cry, turned from him and fled madly for her life. With the spring of the wild beast, Cable rushed after her, cursing her with every breath. In a few yards he had almost reached her, his hands outstretched to grasp her neck. But at that instant the frightened woman's strength suddenly gave way. Her knees received the fall of the limp body. For a second she seemed huddled in a posture of prayer, then toppled over, slipped easily forward through a fissure in the wall and plunged headforemost into the chugging waters below.



With the spring of the wild beast, Cable rushed after her.

In the lives even of the best men there are moments when the human instincts are annihilated and supplanted.

Not Enough Prohibitionists.

St. John, N.B., March 2.—Hon. J. D. Hazen, Premier of New Brunswick, yesterday addressed to J. Willard Smith, head of the temperance federation, a letter answering their request for a provincial prohibitory law. Mr. Hazen points out that the petition presented by the temperance people does not contain names enough to show that there is a sufficiently strong sentiment to warrant the passage of a prohibitory law.

He promises some amendments to the Provincial Act that will make it more workable, and more in line with the Ontario Act in the matter of shutting out licenses in any ward or district.

Must Give Up One.

Ottawa, March 2.—The Deputy Minister of Education has ruled that a school teacher cannot be a trustee.

Public School Trustee Thompson of Ottawa has been appointed to Stittsville High School, and a ruling was asked on the point.

One Farmer on Jury.

Chicago, March 2.—Roy Cunningham of Belvidere, Ill., is the only farmer on the Standard Oil retrial jury which was completed. The jury includes five grocers, a mechanic and a live stock dealer.

Liberal Elected.

London, March 2.—Falconer, Liberal, carried Forfarshire on the bye-election by a large majority over Blackburn, Unionist. The vote was 1,422 to 3,970. It is a Liberal stronghold.

C.N.R. Employes Affiliate.

Winnipeg, March 2.—The mechanics of the C.N.R. system have formed a federation, but have no intentions against the company as to increase of wage just now.

Control of Streets.

Montreal, March 2.—A meeting of mayors and representatives of municipalities on and in the neighborhood of the Island of Montreal was held yesterday to take united action with a view to protecting the interests of the municipalities and the public against the encroachments of private companies.

W. D. Lighthall, secretary of the Association of Canadian Municipalities, said the municipalities should stand united in a protest to the Government against the rights to control their own streets being over-ridden by any charter granted to private companies by Parliament or the Legislature, and this was endorsed by the whole company present.

Alberta Conservatives Angry.

Ottawa, March 2.—Alberta Conservatives say they have been placed at a serious disadvantage by reason of the sudden calling of the provincial elections. The Legislature was prorogued last Thursday and dissolution followed on Friday, nominations being fixed for March 15.

It is stated that the new Alberta Election Act has not been printed, although the Government supporters are supplied with copies of it.

It is also said that the Redistribution Act has not been printed, and the Conservative candidates are unable to learn the new boundaries or the places at which nomination meetings are to be held.

To Celebrate Inauguration.

Chicago, March 2.—Mayor Busse yesterday issued a proclamation calling on the people of Chicago to participate in a demonstration at the hour of the administration of the oath to President Taft in Washington next Thursday.

The proclamation requests that 11 a.m., central time, all factories blow their whistles steadily for five minutes and that all persons during that period suspend their various pursuits. Prayers for the success of the new administration will be offered in the churches.

Honored Novelist Poe.

London, March 2.—A brilliant company gathered last night at a banquet at the invitation of the Authors' Club to celebrate the centenary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle presided, and was supported by Ambassador Reid and Mrs. Humphrey Ward, many leading British authors, and a large number of American residents of London. Among the guests was Capt. Poe, the oldest surviving member of the Poe family.

After the Doctors.

Brockville, March 2.—For neglect in the payment of the annual fee of $2 to the Ontario Medical Council Detective Rose, prosecuting officer for the council, is bringing many doctors throughout this section to time.

A Portland physician, who was in arrears since 1898, toed the mark. He acknowledged the corn, consented to pay his dues forthwith and settled for the costs of the court.

Sifton Will Be Asked.

Winnipeg, March 2.—The legislative committee appointed to investigate the charges as to the Manitoba lists at the last election have decided to ask Hon. Clifford Sifton to appear to give evidence. As the Ottawa House is in session he cannot be summoned. The Liberals still refuse to take any part in the enquiry.

Sudden Death.

Perth, March 2.—Mr. A. Montgomery, drover and fur dealer of this town, died suddenly yesterday near McDonald's Corners. The cause of his death is supposed to be heart failure. He was 79 years of age, and was one of the best horse and cattle judges in this section.

Fire losses in London in February did not exceed $600. [illegible]

Patrick Pleading His Own Case.

New York, March 2.—Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, serving a life sentence for the murder of William Marsh Rice, the aged millionaire, left Sing Sing Prison yesterday and appeared before the appellate division of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn on a writ of habeas corpus to argue his own case, contending that he either deserves execution or freedom, because his commutation to life imprisonment was illegal. Adjournment was made till Friday.

A Usury Case.

Hamilton, March 2.—Sylvester Nelson was committed at the Police Court yesterday morning on the charge of lending and conspiring to lend money and charging interest over the amount allowed by the Usury Act. George Ferguson, the complainant, said that Nelson bought his furniture, advancing $50, which Ferguson agreed to pay back in three installments of $23. Ald. Creerar, who appeared for Ferguson, figured that the rate of interest was 118 per cent.

Insurance on Great Lakes.

New York, March 2.—A special London despatch to The World says: W. A. Prime, insurance broker of New York, is in London with a power of attorney representing shipping on the great lakes valued at upwards of ten million dollars, for the purpose of conferring with the big insurance agencies of Great Britain on the subject of rates on load lines.

Councillor Protested.

Wingham, March 2.—The mayor and corporation of the Town of Wingham have been served with legal notice by a ratepayer of the town calling in question the qualification of one V. R. Vannorman, formerly town constable, and the member of the fire brigade of the town, who, it appears, was elected one of the councillors.

Winnipeggers Get Refund.

Winnipeg, March 2.—With the new high pressure system in operation the different fire insurance offices are engaged putting through refund endorsements, although the new rates were published two weeks ago. The refunds are reaching greater proportions than most of the agents anticipated.

Get a U. S. Guarantee.

Brantford, March 2.—The Street Railway Co. has secured a bonded guarantee from an American company for $25,000, which will be put up to guarantee that the double-tracking and improvements outlined in the agreement with the city will be carried out this summer.

Under Police Control.

Hamilton, March 2.—The markets' committee yesterday afternoon passed a bylaw placing lodging-houses under police control. A license fee of $10 a year will be charged and the keepers will be forced to keep a register showing when their guests arrive and when they leave.

Ice at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, March 2.—Fears of an ice famine in Port Arthur next summer are dispelled. Thunder Bay is frozen over and the crop now being taken is 16 inches thick, half the usual thickness.

CURE IT IN ONE DAY

Coughs and Colds Disappear Like Magic When Hyomei is Used

If the thousands of people who suffer from hacking coughs and agonizing colds would arouse themselves sufficiently to follow this advice, they would cease to complain within 24 hours.

Here is the advice, if you take it and you are afterwards sorry that you did, it won't cost you a penny.

Go to Wm. Madill the druggist, and purchase from him a Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit. It will only cost you $1.00. Take it home; use it according to directions and if it does not cure your cough or cold, take it back and he will refund the purchase price.

Mrs. I. Coon, of John street, Acton, Ont says: "I had a swelling come near my eyes which was caused by the catarrhal conditions. I had to cough up the bad impurities that dropped into my throat and it felt as if a hard cold had attacked me, right in my head, nose and glands near. A week's treatment of Hyomei overcame my trouble. I am glad to endorse Hyomei."

When you use Hyomei you don't swallow nauseating drugs. You simply breathe in the soothing, pleasant and antiseptic Hyomei air through the little pocket inhaler that comes with each outfit. As this medicated air passes over the inflamed parts, relief comes almost at once and cure follows.

Hyomei is also guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure catarrh, croup, grip and asthma.

Roy Trial Changed.

Montreal, March 2.—Hon. P. H. Roy, former Speaker of the Quebec Legislature, and ex-president of La Banque St. Jean, who was to have been tried at the term of the Court of King's Bench, which opened yesterday, has secured another change of evnue.

He was originally to have been tried in St. Johns, but on the plea that feeling there was hostile, a change of venue to Montreal was secured. Now his lawyers claim that the feeling there has passed away, and that the feeling of hostility has reached Montreal, and they asked Judge Cross to send Mr. Roy back to St. Johns.

Fireman's Suicide.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 2.—William Gearhart, captain of a fire company, who murderously assaulted Mrs. Anna Baxter, a widow, with a razor, and then seriously cut himself, committed suicide yesterday by jumping from the third floor of the Pittsburg Hospital.

Lectures on Cables.

London, March 2.—The incorporated Chamber of Commerce of Liverpool has arranged for addresses to be delivered on the subject of cable communication within the Empire by Prof. Marconi, Sir Edward Sassoon and Mr. Henniker Heaton.

Suspect Goes Free.

Port Huron, Mich., March 2.—Chas. Norton, the London, Ont., man held here on suspicion of being implicated in the Hamilton murder mystery, will be released from custody. Norton's family notified the officers of his absence from his home, near London, and arrangements were at once made for his release.

Chases Runaway Wife.

Kingston, March 2.—Elmer Sanford, Dexter, is separated from his wife, and the latter kidnapped their five-year-old daughter and came to Kingston. He followed, but neither he nor the police can locate the mother or child. Search will be made at Napanee and Belleville.

LONDON, March 1.—London cables for cattle are steady, at 13½c to 14c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9½c to 10½c per pound.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

TORONTO JUNCTION, March 1.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 64 carloads, consisting of 1315 cattle, 19 hogs, 219 sheep and lambs, 31 calves and 103 horses.

Exporters.

Export steers sold at from $5.10 to $5.50; bulls sold at fom $4 to $4.50.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butchers sold at $5 to $5.15; choice loads sold at $4.90 to $5, McDonald & Halligan topping the market for butchers' with the best load on the market at $5, and two other choice loads at $4.90; loads of good, $4.60 to $4.75; medium, $4.10 to $4.50; common, $3.75 to $4; cows, $3 to $4, with a few at $4.25 to $4.50; canners, $1.50 to $2.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A limited number of milkers and springers sold at $45 to $67, and one extra quality cow at $70.

Veal Calves.

A few vealers sold at $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts light, but prices were quoted easier, at $4 to $4.25 for export ewes, and $3 to $3.50 per cwt. for rams; lambs at $5.00 to $6.25 per cwt.

Hogs.

H. P. Kennedy quotes $6.75 for selects, fed and watered at market; $6.60 at country points to drovers, f.o.b. cars, and $6.50 to farmers at nearest point of delivery.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 1.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 27 were 1921 cattle, 285 sheep and lambs, 1734 hogs and 356 calves, while the supply for local consumption this morning consisted of 1800 cattle, 60 calves, 1200 hogs and 125 calves. There have been no new developments in the local live stock situation since this day week, prices having been firmly maintained for cattle on account of the small supplies coming forward, which is due to the Lenten season now being in full force, and the fact that the consumption of beef is curtailed to some extent. Owing to the fine weather, local buyers turned out in fairly large numbers, and, as there were also a few out-of-town butchers present, who all wanted some cattle, the demand was ample to absorb all the offerings and a good trade was done. As the prospects are that prices for cattle will rule higher later on, in the season, some of the wholesale butchers have made contracts with drovers for several carloads at 5½c per pound for delivery on April 1 and at 5¾c for May 1. Cable advices from Liverpool reported the market firmer on account of cold weather, but stated that the trade was slow. There was no demand here from exporters for supplies. Choice steers sold at 5½c; good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c; medium at 4c to 4¼c; good cows at 3¾c to 4¼c; common at 2½c to 3¼c; choice bulls at 4¼c to 4¾c, and lower grades at 3¾c to 4c per pound. The market for sheep and lambs continues very quiet on account of the limited supplies coming forward, and prices show no change as compared with a week ago. The demand is in excess of the offerings, consequently the competition between buyers is very keen, and sales of choice lots of lambs were made at 6½c to 7c; good at 5½c to 6¼c; choice sheep at 4½c to 4¾c, and culls at 3½c to 4c per pound. Calves are in active demand, and as receipts are not sufficient yet to fill actual wants, the undertone to the market is strong, and sellers in consequence are obtaining almost any price they feel inclined to ask, sales being made all the way from 5c to 8c per pound, live weight. [illegible] been realized for dressed stock. A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices for selected lots show an advance of 15c per 100 pounds. The supply was fair, for which the demand was good, and an active trade was done at $7.60 to $7.65, and straight lots sold at $7.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

FRUIT—THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Wonderful Medicinal Value of Apples, Oranges, Figs and Prunes.

How many people realise what remarkable curative principles are contained in fruit juices. There are two—the bitter and the sweet. There is about ten times as much of the sweet as of the bitter, though the bitter principle is the one which has the curative effect on disease. Apples, oranges, figs and prunes contain the highest percentage of bitter principle and thus are the most healthful.

It was a theory of a physician in Ottawa, that if the amount of bitter principle in fruit juice could be doubled, the curative property would be increased, not twice but many times.

After many tests, this physician succeeded in forcing into the combined fruit juices an additional atom of bitter principle, and in doing so formed an entirely new compound. To the combined juices were added valuable tonics and antiseptics and the whole made into tablets.

These are "Fruit-a-tives"—the only remedy known to science that is made of fruit. The wonderful cures in cases of Stomach Trouble, Biliousness, Constipation, Rheumatism, Chronic Headaches and Neuralgia, Kidney, Liver and Skin Diseases are due solely to the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" contain the medicinal properties of fruit. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUING KIRKFIELD MAN FOR LIBEL

A. O. U. W. Has Entered Action Against J. C. Shepherd

The A.O.U.W. has entered action against J. C. Shepherd of Kirkfield, for libel.

It is alleged that subsequent to September 1906, Mr. Shepherd, caused to be published in different newspapers advertisements containing statements intended to hurt the business of the order as a fraternal insurance society. The lodge claims the plaintiff wished to convey the impression that the order was in a state of insolvency and that its business was mismanaged.

The order is suing for an injunction to restrain Mr. Shepherd and his agents from further circulating or otherwise publishing the articles referred to.

ELECTRIC WIRING IS DEFECTIVE

Report of the Underwriters' Association in Connection With City Buildings

The city council has received a letter from the Underwriters Association notifying them that the electric wiring of the city buildings at the corner of Water and Simcoe Sts. is defective and advising that the matter be taken up.

The letter was read at the meeting of the city council last night and the matter was referred to the property committee.

Ald. Bradburn said that to overhaul the wiring would likely cost two or three hundred dollars and he did not see how the property committee could attend to the matter with the appropriation that had been given them.

OBITUARY

MISS ANNIE ARMSTRONG

The death occurred this morning at the homestead of her father, the late David Armstrong, of Otonabee, of Miss Annie Armstrong, a widely known and highly esteemed resident of the township. Deceased has been suffering from consumption for a considerable length of time. She was born on the scene of her death and from her long residence in the district had a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

The late Miss Armstrong was a consistent and faithful member of the Keene Presbyterian church and was actively interested in the work of the church.

Three brothers and two sisters survive. The brothers are David, James and Stewart, all of Otonabee and the sisters, are Mrs Kerr of Ashburnham, and Mrs David Fife of Otonabee.

The funeral will leave the family residence on Thursday afternoon at one o'clock and interment will take place in the Little Lake cemetery. Rev D. D. McDonald, pastor of the Keene Presbyterian church will conduct the burial services.

THE THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Was Celebrated by Court Peterborough, C. O. F. Last Night —Banquet Was Held

Court Peterborough, No 84, Canadian Order of Foresters held a most successful "At Home," last night in the Foresters hall, Simcoe street when about two hundred members and friends were present to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the inception of the court. That the COF. is one of the best and most flourishing insurance and benefit societies was demonstrated by the different speakers of the evening. A pleasing feature of the "At Home," was the presence of Dr E N Stanley, the High Medical Adviser, of Brantford, who has been identified with the order since its inception thirty years ago.

Mr. Gordon Wright rendered two vocal numbers in a pleasing manner and was accompanied by Mr Harry Theobald.

After those present had done ample justice to the many things provided by Coleman Bros, the toast list was honored and was as follows:

The King—proposed by Mr H Nesbit and Mr E A Peck, responded to by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Parliament of Canada —proposed by Mr E A Peck, and responded to by Mr J R Stratton, MP.

The High Court of the COF —proposed by Mr F J Jamieson and responded to by Mr E N Stanley, MD., High Medical Adviser.

Mercantile and Manufacturing Industries —proposed by Mr D Menzies and responded to by Mr R B Hall and Mr James Kendrey.

The Learned Professions and Educational Institutions —proposed by Dr. Holloway and responded to by Rev. Dr Langfeldt.

The County Council of Peterborough—proposed by Mr Adam Hall, and responded to by Warden Scott and Mr E M Elliott.

Our Sister Societies —proposed by Mr W H Robertson, and responded to by Mr R E Layfield, Mr J J Turner, Sr, and Mr John Nugent.

Charter Members —proposed by Mr W Whitcroft, and responded to by Messrs George Kingdon, Nathaniel Lush and John Telford.

Court Peterborough —proposed by Dr E N Stanley, and responded to by Rev J G Potter and Mr W H Meldrum.

The Press— proposed by Mr Walter Hooper and responded to by Mr. Harry Theobald.

REGIMENT HELD ANNUAL MEETING

Military Demonstration is Planned ---Committees Were Appointed

The annual meeting of the officers of the 57th Regiment was held in the mess rooms last night when about 25 officers were present. A lot of routine business was transacted. The opening of the new armories was informally discussed although nothing definite will be decided until the next meeting. The general feeling seems to be, however, that if the public is prepared to support the officers there will be a splendid military demonstration held here on one of the public holidays. This will be a great thing for Peterborough as it is years since anything of the kind has been undertaken. It has a great many advantages which will undoubtedly appeal to the people. The officers also feel that they cannot allow the opportunity to pass without returning the hospitality of the several regiments which the 57th have visited in recent years.

The officers intend to take advantage of their fine new quarters in the armories to place the 57th Regiment in every department on the best footing it has ever been and to make it in efficiency and discipline the equal of any in Canada.

A very interesting feature of last nights meeting was the receipts of reports from the several committees and also the financial statement.

COMMITTEES.

The following committees were elected:—

Regimental committee — Majors Clegg, Bennett and Hayes.

Mess committee —Col Halliday, Major Hayes, Capt McLean.

Rifle committee — Major Bennett, with one officer and one non com officer from each company.

Band committee — Capts. Walker, Hounsell, Cluxton, McLean and Major Clegg.

Trip committee — Capt Eastwood, Capt Clark, Lieut Higgins.

Nominating committee —Col Stevenson, Major Davidson, Capt Mills, Lieuts Cameron and Eastwood.

Auditors —Lieut Carruthers and Capt Cluxton.

Mess Secretary—Lieut Gemmell.

TWO NEW COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED BY COUNCIL

At last night's meeting of the city council Messrs Vincent Eastwood and H. Lebrun were appointed to the City Trust Commission to fill the places made vacant by the retirement of Mr T E Bradburn, MPP, and Mr. Robert Neill. Mr Eastwood will hold office for two years and Mr Lebrun for one year.

Messrs Eastwood and E F Mason were nominated for the two year term and Mr Eastwood was elected.

Messrs. Wm Langford, H Lebrun and E F Mason were nominated for the one year term. Mr Langford was voted on first and failed to get a majority.

The vote on Mr LeBrun and Mr Mason resulted a tie, 8-8, and Mayor Rush gave the casting vote in favor of Mr. LeBrun.

THE MAGISTRATE HELD THAT CHARGE WAS NOT PROVEN

The two young men who were remanded last week on a charge of breaking into a warehouse and stealing a quantity of rubbers and metal appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning.

Abraham Lowes was called and stated that on Tuesday morning he saw one of the windows had been tampered with and on entering the warehouse found that about 200 lbs of rubber and some metal had been removed. He had seen the two prisoners near the warehouse the previous evening about 10 o'clock and had found some of the rubbers nearby in morning. A number of foot prints were traced from the window to Foster's stable, and looked to be about the size of the prisoners' boots. A brother of one of the accused had come to him after the arrest to try and settle with him for the amount of junk stolen.

David Florence testified to having bought 13 1-2 lbs of rubbers from the prisoners had had paid them 6c. per lb. for same. He had been in the habit of buying junk from them before and did not have any suspicion that they had stolen them, and did not know anything about the theft until told so by Mr. Lowes.

After summing up the evidence, the Magistrate said he could not convict them as there was nothing to convince him that they were the guilty parties, so the prisoners were discharged.

Special Meeting

Special meetings are being held next (except Saturday) at 8 p.m. Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Assembly Hall, George street, under Bradburn's old Opera House, conducted by Evangelist J. Pearson, formerly of Byfield, Mass., and W. P. Douglas, city. No collections.

NO MURDER SUSPECT WAS ARRESTED IN PETERBOROUGH

MR. A. WARDE'S DENIAL

Quite a sensation was caused in the city this morning by rumors to the effect that a tramp answering the description of the man described as the murderer of Ethel Kinrade, the Hamilton girl, whose horrible death has sent a shudder all through the province, was in Peterborough.

It was said that he was taken into custody about nine o'clock last night, but the reports to this effect had no foundation.

Inquiry at the police station revealed that no tramp or suspect of any kind had been apprehended as the suspected murderer of the Hamilton girl.

Reports had it that Mr. Albert Warde of Perry street, had rung up the police station and expressed his suspicions to them about a man who had called at his residence for a meal yesterday evening about 6.45, and that the police had put the stranger under arrest. Mr. Warde was seen by the Review but denied the story. He had given a wayfarer his supper, but had no idea why any busybody should have circulated such a report.

SPORTING NEWS

FRANK GOTCH HAS SIGNED TO WRESTLE THE TURK

Buffalo, March 2.—Frank Gotch, champion heavyweight wrestler of the world, arrived in Buffalo last night with Jack Curley, matchmaker of the Empire Athletic Club, of Chicago, and within an hour after he had left the train had signed a set of articles for a finished match with Yussif Mahmout, the Turk, to take place at Dexter Park Pavilion, Chicago, on the night of April 14th, for the title of champion of the world.

Gotch is here to fill a theatrical engagement this week. Curley went to Toronto to get his signature, but Gotch preferred to wait until getting across the border before signing up, in obedience to a patriotic bunch. Curley left for Chicago last night and will deposit a $2,500 guarantee with a Chicago paper on arriving there, and at once begin active preparations for pulling off the bout. The purse is one of $10,000, best two out of three falls, catch-as-catch-can style, with the strangle hold barred, and the purse will be divided $7,500 to the winner and $2,500 to the loser. The referee must be agreed upon two weeks before the match.

Gotch has never seen Mahmout wrestle, but the big fellow fears no man in the world, and is confident of winning. He will fill about two weeks more of theatrical dates and will then put in another two weeks of hard work at his home in Humboldt, Ia., for he wants to be in perfect shape for the foreigner, who has shown by the easy manner in which he has handled the best of the wrestlers in this country that he is worthy of the champion's mettle.

Gotch was a caller at the Courier office last night. He looks to have gained a little since he last appeared here over a year ago, but claims he has varied but little in weight since before he sailed abroad.

MET PREJUDICE ABROAD.

In speaking of his European trip Gotch said it started bad and ended well. When he arrived it was at a time when there was a violent prejudice against Americans on account of the intense feeling created by the Olympic games and a particular prejudice against himself created by the stories told by Hackenschmidt that he had been fouled, treated unfairly and given all the worst of it in the match in which Gotch won the world's championship. But by making a direct announcement that he had crossed the pond to give Hackenschmidt a chance to square himself, and win back his title, Gotch soon impressed the people with the sincerity of his mission and by his straightforwardness and sportsmanlike offers to the big Russian, none of which by the way, would smoke the huge foreigner out into the open, he to a large extent vitiated the antagonistic feeling of the Englishmen, and before he sailed for home had won them over to his side. Clippings from some of the most representative English papers show that when Gotch left he did so with the best wishes of the true English sportsmen and had molded their belief to the fact that he was a better man than Hack and that the Russian Lion was keeping aloof from him solely through fear of a second defeat.

While to successfully combat this prejudice leaves with the champion a certain sort of personal pride it has made him a better American citizen, as he says himself, and no man better appreciates this country until he has been on the other side, especially those who like the real thing and fair play in sports.

Gotch says he is about through with the wrestling game and has promised himself a good, long vacation the coming summer.

LEAGUE FOR FRATERNAL SOCIETIES

The handsome silver cup which is on exhibition at the Peterborough Bowling Club alleys will be put up for competition among teams from the fraternal societies in this city. Arrangements are being made for the organization of the fraternal society league and it is expected that it will prove very interesting.

HOCKEY

A meeting will be held shortly to wind up the affairs of the City Hockey League. The league has had a most successful season, and Lakefield has carried off the championship after having gone through the season without a loss. The champions will likely be banquetted by the other teams, and the cup, which has had an interesting career, will be presented to them. That the silverware will go to the most popular team no one will deny, as the Lakefield team have made many supporters and friends by their good sportsmanlike and gentlemanly conduct.

SHAMROCKS BY SIX STRAIGHT

The Beavers Were Defeated in an Exciting Game of Hockey

An exciting game of hockey was played near the Park street rink, when the Shamrocks defeated the Beavers by a score of 6 to 0. On account of the weather the ice was soft, but it didn't stop the playing. The stars for the winners were V. O'Connell, T. Barnett, L. Kennealey and W. O'Connell. E. Donovan played a great game in goal for the Shamrocks, also R. Gadwa and M. Rogers were the stars for the losers. The line-up was as follows:—

Shamrocks.		Beavers.
	Goal
E. Donovan		H. Gordon
	Point
J. Murray		E. Ward
	Cover Point

GRITS MAJORITY OF 13 SHOTS

In Their Games With Tories at Curling Rink Yesterday

The Grits and Tories were the attraction at the curling rink yesterday, six rinks competed and the games were very interesting from the Grits' standpoint, as they pulled up a lead of 13 on their opponents. One more game will be played today and the Tories will endeavor to overcome this lead and there promises to be an exciting time. Several well known Tories play on the Grit rinks.

The rinks and scores were:—

TORIES.	GRITS.
J. D. Craig	H. Hall
G. Maitland	G. Ferguson
J. Knapman	Dr. Eastwood
S. Ray, 9.	W. M. Lang, 12

HOCKEY

Bridgenorth defeated the Peterborough Hardware last night by goals to 4. The game was interesting and some good fast hockey was dished up by both teams. The score at half time was 2—2 with honors about even, but in the second half Bridgenorth had the better of the argument and put in seven goals to the hardwaremen two, making the full score 9—4 in their favor. Flanagan and Munro were most effective for the losers, while Cullen, Kelley and Mann starred for Bridgenorth. Kelley's work in the nets was a big feature of the game. McWilliams of the Strathconas, gave good satisfaction as referee.

The teams lines up as follows;

BRIDGENOTH.		HARDWARE.
	Goal
Kelley		McCulloch

W. Rite		Quarterman

Anderson's and Conroy's teams played an interesting game of hockey at Brock street rink from 5 to 6 last evening. At half time the score was 3—1 in favor of Conroy's team and at the finish the figures stood 9—3, with Conroy's team the winner. Moldrum, Conroy and Morgan were prominent for the winners, while Denison, Matthews and Stevenson put up a good game for the losers.

The teams were;

ANDERSON'S		CONROY'S.
	Goal
Giroux		Layfield

Hockey fans who are in the habit of attending the independent games at Brock street, are assured of a big treat on Thursday night when the Rink Rats and Wild Cats come together from 7 to 8. Both these teams are practising hard and a wild time may be expected.

Following is the line-up of the teams;

RINK RATS.		WILD CATS.
	Goal
O'Toole		Dominico

Henthorne		Callaghan
	Left Wing
Armstrong		O'Hearn.

The Collegiates and Rough Riders meet again tonight from 5 to 6, at Brock street rink. In the last game the Rough Riders were defeated by 1—0, but claim they can reverse things a little in the game tonight. Both these teams have the pick of the town on their lineups and a good game may be looked for.

The team to represent the Auburns tonight in their game with the Tame Banties, will be; Goal, Lilly; point, Shaw; cover, Shaw; rover, Coughlin; centre Evans; right, Measley; left, Revoy.

The management of the Tame Banties request that the following players to be on hand sharp at 7 o'clock for their game with the Auburns tonight;—Wilson, goal; Parnell, point; Curtis, cover; Wiggins Fagan, rover; Ellis, centre; McMillan, right wing; Weatherstone, left wing.

What about a game between the C.L.S. and Lakefield, the winners of the Peterborough City League.—Lindsay Post.

There is no truth in the rumor that Mohl and Rogers have been matched to wrestle in Keene.

QUAKERS BEAT ACKERMAN'S

Score Was 11-0 in Mercantile League Game

In a mercantile League game at Brock street rink last night the Quakers made a runaway of their game with Ackerman's, winning by the big score of 11—0 and leading at half time by 4—0. As the score would indicate the porridge seven had the better of the play at all stages, and were particularly effective in the second half when their opponents were outclassed.

Pratt, Hefferman and Rightmeyer deserve special mention for the Quakers, while Godfrey was the most conspicuous for Ackerman's. The game was strenuous in spots, but Referee Leo Derocher had the players well under control and gave good satisfaction.

KILLED ON THE TRACK

Old Man Meets Death on C. P. R. Short Distance East of Toronto.

While walking along the railway tracks east of Agincourt yesterday afternoon an old man whose identity the police have not been able to learn, was struck by a C. P. R. passenger train and so terribly injured that he died while being brought into Toronto. The Toronto police were notified that the injured man was being sent in and an ambulance was hurried to North Toronto Station to meet the train on its arrival. Its presence was not needed, the body being taken in a patrol waggon to the Morgue.

The dead man was apparently about 75 years of age, of medium height and Poorly dressed. In his pockets were found several slips of paper, bearing the addresses of the City Relief Officer and several Salvation Army officers but nothing that promised much assistance to the police.

An inquest will be held.

REV. ROBT. POGUE AT THE CAPITAL

Peterboro' Minister Preached at Anniversary Servives of Erskine Church

The Ottawa Journal says;—With congregations which packed the church so people were turned away, Erskine Presbyterian church yesterday celebrated another anniversary. Rev. Robert Pogue, of Peterborough, preached powerful and effective sermons Features of the day were the splendid singing of the augmented choir and the song service before and after the evening service by the men's Bible class, 150 strong, the men occupying the gallery immediately in front of the pulpit. The singing, which was of Gospel hymns, was most effective.

Contrasting the religious people of former times with the religious people to-day, Rev. Mr. Pogue preached a most interesting sermon in the evening. His subject was; "The God of Our Fathers."

There were many forces, said Rev. Mr. Pogue, which served to bind men closer together — love of a political party, love of country or of a common religion. "Our fathers were religious men," said the speaker, "and they did not confine the practise of religion to extraordinary occasions. They spoke of the Lord as behind every happening; God to them was all and in all, and religion was truly the practise of the presence of God. Their meat and their drink was to do the will of the Lord."

The reverses of the South African war, said Rev. Mr. Pogue, were of benefit in that they sent the people of the British Empire to their knees. And it was a great blessing to have had, finally, a general in the field who was not afraid to begin his official report of victory; "By the help of God and her Majesty's troops."

AS TO CRITICS.

The preacher spoke strongly of those who criticize missionary enterprises. "Men," he said, "who could not distinguish religion from an attack of indigestion, attempt to critize those who have given their lives for the sake of the unsaved. Yet," he asserted, "our fathers extended their religion. People knew them and their children to be religious, and they wished it so. They set their children a good example and enforced a respect of higher things, while we to-day enforce nothing."

People to-day, he contended, did not speak of their religion. The sapcities of religion, he believed, were more violated by silence than otherwise.

"The trouble today is," continued Mr. Pogue, "that we do not think. And we must think for our fathers' God to become our God. It does not follow that because our fathers were religious that we must be religious. You and I must make the decision for ourselves. We must study the Scriptures as they did—and meditate upon them, and after calm deliberation accept, as they accepted, the religion of God. God must work in our heart His own hatred of sin and His own love of holiness. For are we so much wiser than our fathers that we can set aside our fathers' religion."

It is a real pleasure to meet and talk "contest" with the candidates in the Review's popularity contest. We have been through quite a number of affairs of this kind but we have never met a more pleasant and wide-awake lot of hustlers. In both the county and city the best of feeling prevails in the friendly struggle. Every contestant seems to be getting fine support and attending strictly to their own "knitting." The most noticeable feature of all is that the candidates are too busy gathering in new subscriptions and renewals to "knock" on the others in the race.

With less than a week to go before the special ballot offer for new subscriptions closes, the candidates fully realize that it would be very valuable time wasted to try to hold other contestants down. Every one has a strong following and the thing to do is to perfect your organization and gather in the votes. Promises are all very well, but it will take real votes—and lots of them—to win in this contest. The air is full of "scare" stories, the majority of which are too ridiculous to have the least foundation. But these stories add spice and seasoning to the work and for that reason are harmless.

Another thing exceptional is the great number of certificates issued direct to subscribers. This fact, alone, more than anything else, attests the great interest in the contest. And it also shows that this is in reality a popularity contest and that the contestants are immensely popular.

"Watch me" said a late entrant yesterday, "I have so many subscriptions, mostly new, to gather in this week that I am sure to be among the leaders in a few days." It was a delight to observe the enthusiasm of this contestant. And enthusiasm counts a lot. If you approach a friend with "I'm-out-to-win-and-I-need-your-subscription" determination plainly depicted on your countenance, the odds are ten to one you'll not be disappointed.

TO CANDIDATES IN DISTRICT NO. 2.

Contestants out of the city should send in their subscriptions as soon as received. Please state whether you wish the voting certificates placed in the ballot box or mailed to you to be voted later. The contest man is very busy these days. Certificates turned in for out-of-town candidates will be voted when issued unless otherwise instructed, so as to avoid possible complications.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number cheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

Lindsay. March 1.—Mr. Seth Violet of Toronto, a former resident of Lindsay, who has been on the Tracy farm east of the town for the past few days in search for diamonds, which he believes are to be found there, returned to town on Saturday evening and left for his home in Toronto, and will not return to the diamond mine until spring.

Mr. Violet and Mr. George Thomas sank a shaft three feet in the ground, but owing to the cold weather, decided not to do anything further until spring, when they will build a house and obtain the necessary machinery for the sinking of of several shafts.

Mr. Violet has every confidence that he will find diamonds on the farm within six months.

DEATH OF GEORGE SCOTT A PIONEER OF SMITH

In the death of Mr. George Scott at the ripe age of 86 years, the township of Smith loses one of its best known and most highly respected pioneers. The late Mr. Scott was born in Northumberland, Eng., June 25th, 1822, and came to Canada with his family in 1831. The family moved to Smith in 1833. Later the deceased lived in Manitoba for several years coming back to Smith in 1840, where he had lived on the 4th concession ever since.

In 1846 he married Ann Ivison, eldest daughter of Robert Ivison, of Smith. His wife predeceased him in 1907, the couple being married 60 years before Mrs. Scott's demise.

Deceased gentleman is survived by 11 children, 6 sons and 5 daughters. The sons are George, of Brandon, Man.; Robert, of Smith; James and John, of Souris, Man.; Dr. Scott, of Hunter street, Peterborough, and Alexander on the homestead. The daughters are Mrs. R. Newton, Brandon, Man.; Mrs. Robert Moffatt, Elgin, Man.; Mrs. Truscott, also of Elgin, Man. Mrs. Percival Edmison, Smith, and Miss Sarah, who resides on the homestead.

He was a member of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist church.

The funeral will leave the late residence tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock and interment will take place in the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Mr. Bonner, pastor of the Gilmour Memorial will conduct the burial service.

'TWAS MIDNIGHT WHEN THE CITY COUNCIL ADJOURNED

Last Night's Session Was a Long One—Much Business Transacted— Reports of Committees Were Adopted—Some Objections.

It was just twelve o'clock when the City Council adjourned last night. It was the longest session since 1907.

Certain matters that came up evoked spirited discussion both in committee of the whole and in regular session. The aldermen first met in committee of the whole with Mayor Rush in the chair.

Those present were Mayor Rush, and Aldermen Duffus, Hicks, Duncan, Morgan, Bradburn, Buller, Turner, Metheral, McIntyre, Phelan and Morrow.

In connection with the Finance Committee's report Ald. Hicks moved that the clause in the Finance Committee referring to the Board of Education be struck out and that the by-law to issue debentures be submitted at the next January election. The motion was defeated by a vote of 8 to 4.

Ald. Morgan and Ald. McIntyre moved that the matter of the market tolls being let by tender be referred back to the Property Committee. This was defeated by a vote of 8 to 4.

Ald. Hicks moved that the by-law for $15,000 for a power house be referred back to the special power committee. There was no seconder.

On motion, it was decided that City Engineer Hay and Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, attend the cement convention in Toronto. Ald. Morgan objected to this, but his motion was defeated.

A number of by-laws were passed. take in reports

FINANCE COMMITTEE

Ald. Morrow presented the report of the Finance committee as follows;

Your Finance committee beg leave to reprot as follows:

1 Your committee heard a deputation from the Board of Education, and after receiving explanations we recommend that a By-law be passed for $10,000 to pay the balance of expenditure on permanent improvements for the Collegiate Institute, and that $4000 be taken from this year's demand of the Board of Education for Public School purposes and that a By-law be passed to issue debentures for that sum to pay the balance of expenditures for permanent improvements on the King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Park street and Central public schools.

2 We recommend that provisions be made that dog taxes be not placed on the Collectors roll, but that a list of all persons assessed for dog be furnished by the City Clerk to the police and that the colector of taxes co-operate with the police in enforcing the collection of dog taxes.

3 We recommend that the By-law regarding poll tax be amended to provide that the assessors furnish a list of those liable for the tax to the tax collector once a week.

4 We recommend that the telephone be taken out of the tax collector's office.

5 We recommend that a cheque for $40 be issued to the Registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons for a fine collected in the police court upon an information laid by an officer of that college.

6 We recommend that a grant of $25 be made to the Peterborough Teachers' Institute in accordance with the statute.

7 We recommend that the annual membership fee of $35 be paid to the Union of Canadian municipalities.

8 We recommend that one copy of the Ontario Gazette be subscribed for for the city office, and that the Treasurer issue a cheque for the subscription fee.

9 We recommend that the following accounts be paid:

PROPERTY COMMITTEE

Ald. Bradburn, chairman of the Property committee reported as follows,—

Your Property Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows.

1 That this committee be authorized to arrange with the real estate agent to sell the Nicholls Estate building on the north side of Simcoe street at the price of $14,000.

2 That a by-law be passed to amend section 11 of the market By-law to take out the enactment forfeiting articles of light weight.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

This report was adopted.

POWER COMMITTEE.

Ald. McIntyre, chairman, reported as follows:

Gentlemen—

Your Special Power Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows;

That the request of the Water Commissioners for the submission of a by-law to the ratepayers to issue debentures for $120,000 to provide a new dam and increased pumping capacity for the waterworks be complied with, and at the same time a by-law be submitted to issue debentures for $15,000 for the purpose of providing foundations, forebays, wheel pits, tail races and power house —at the easterly end of the dam— for three units of dynamos for electric purposes, ready to instal turbines and dynamos, which can be done much cheaper when the dam is being built than afterwards.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

This report was adopted.

CITY WILL HAVE REPORT MADE ON AUBURN DAM

At the meeting of the city council last night Ald McIntyre stated that Mr. James Kendrey had notified him that unless the city took some action in conenction with the purchase of his dam he would withdraw his offer to sell to the city.

Ald. Phelan moved that the city secure an engineer to report on the Kendrey dam. This was seconded by Ald. Hicks.

Ald Bradburn moved in amendment that the matter be referred back to the Power Committee with authority to spend $400 to get a report on electric power in the city. Ald. Morgan seconded it.

This was satisfactory to Ald Bradburn and Ald Hicks and it carried.

WILL SECURE PLANS AND ESTIMATES FOR HOSPITAL

The isolation hospital questino will not down. At the meeting of the city council last night, Ald. Morrow asked what was being done about it. He pointed out that many families had suffered much inconvenience during the present outbreak of scarlet fever on account of there being no isolation hospital.

Ald. Bradburn, chairman of the property committee, said that the plans submitted last year for the hospital were not satisfactory to the committee. If it was the desire of the council the committee would take the matter up again.

A motion was passed authorizing the committee to secure plans and estimates of cost of an isolation hospital.

JACK THE HUGGER IS AGAIN BUSY IN PETERBOROUGH

There is one individual in the city of Peterborough or perhaps more than one individual engaged in the same line of business that the police would like to get their hands on and "Jack the Hugger" is the expressive name given to such performers as referred to. "Jack the Chaser" would probably be more applicable as far as local conditions are concerned.

This said "Jack" has been very busy of late and has been chasing women in several sections of the city. Of course there may be more than one man engaged in this fashion but one in particular has been complained of and several local ladies have told of being chased by a man, the descriptions of whom as far as size and build are concerned, are strikingly alike.

If he continues in his cowardly work he has a fine chance of finding accommodation in secure quarters for some time.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

ANOTHER ALLEGED ALTERED TELEGRAM CAUSES SENSATION

Mr. Aylesworth Makes a Statement.

Says Message From Ottawa to Mr. Taylor's Paper Was Doctored.

Ottawa, March 3.—The escape of Bill Miner from the New Westminster Penitentiary and the alleged falsification of the telegram to the inspectors at Ottawa informing them of the occurrence caused another flutter of excitement in the House yesterday.

J. D. Taylor brought the matter up. He averred that the Department appeared to treat the matter of the escape with indifference. One writer in The Vancouver Province had declared that the story of thefts of bonds belonging to the Australian Government was a pure invention, and that negotiations were conducted for Miner's escape on the understanding that Miner was to reveal the location of cached money and divide the booty. Further, in The New Westminster Columbian, Mr. Taylor's own paper, there appeared a letter from Bourke, acting warden of the penitentiary at the time of Miner's escape, which said that when Inspector Dawson was in New Westminster he showed him the original of the telegram and it was addressed to "The Inspectors," and not to Dawson personally, as was claimed by Mr. Aylesworth. Bourke concluded that the telegram fell into the hands of "someone at Ottawa who saw that to falsify it would mean a better chance for Miner to escape and to bring about my retirement."

Mr. Aylesworth exhibited some heat. It was unfortunate, he said, that this matter should be the subject of trial by newspapers, especially when one of those papers was the property of a member of the House. A despatch from Ottawa had been altered and it had been made to appear that Chief Constable McIntosh stated in his evidence that Miner had told him that Bullich said Miner would be pardoned if he would surrender the Australian bonds, and upon this falsified despatch an interview had been obtained for Taylor's paper.

"The despatch," said the Minister, "was correct in every other British Columbia paper."

Amid a scene of disorder Mr. Taylor asked if it was right that a Minister should charge a member with conniving at the forging of a telegram.

"I ask," Mr. Taylor said, "if the Minister, when he is informed that he is wrong, is to be permitted to insult me?"

"Take it back," yelled the Opposition in unison, but the Minister, unable to hear what the uproar was about, sat silent. Mr. Speaker intervened with the statement that the Minister was in order in referring to a newspaper.

Mr. Aylesworth was finally able to proceed. By the enterprise of a newspaper he had been held up to the scorn of an outraged British Columbia. He was unable to say whether the telegram had been forged. What more, he asked, could be done than had been done to bring about the recapture of Miner?

Mr. Borden followed. There could be no doubt that Mr. Aylesworth had attempted to cast discredit upon Mr. Taylor. Did the Minister adhere to the statement?

Mr. Aylesworth answered that he had been told so by another. He did not make a personal investigation.

"Then," said Mr. Borden, "it would be more becoming of the Minister of Justice if before undertaking to cast discredit on a member of the House, he made a personal investigation. I say that his statement is absolutely unfounded." It was to be regretted that the Minister should have made such a statement. Such eccentricities were not, however, uncommon with the Minister of Justice.

"Order!" demanded the Prime Minister.

What was the meaning of all these rumors, and what was the meaning

WAS DEPORTED TO BUFFALO

Law Regarding Undesirables is the Undoing of a Chinaman Smuggler.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 3.—Charged with manslaughter, and remaining unpunished for three months, William Riley, was brought to justice by the easy operation of the deportation law. Riley is a notorious Chinese smuggler, and his last operation caused the death of seven Chinamen at Buffalo.

He was deported from Fort Erie to Buffalo and immediately arrested by a U. S. marshal. Riley attempted to destroy incriminating evidence in the shape of letters concerning his smuggling operations, and made a determined but ineffectual attempt to escape.

Chief Mains and Inspector Willcox found Riley yesterday afternoon at Fort Erie, where he had dwelt secure from the law since December. He was conveyed to a waiting ferry bound for Buffalo, while there he made a quick rush past officers and raced up the dock. The officers darted in pursuit and he was recaptured.

Riley's crime occurred in December last. In company with George Hanney and Edward Baltz he was smuggling boat loads of Chinamen to Buffalo from Fort Erie, when the boat capsized, seven Chinamen being drowned. The smugglers returned to Fort Erie. The evidence was not sufficient to extradite the men.

THE LABORERS GET SMALL PAY THERE

From 5c to 10c Per Day in Egypt ---Interesting Address by Mr. Matthews

Mr. T. F. Matthews pleased a large audience at the Y.W.C.A. last night with an address entitled, "My Impressions of Egypt." Previous to the lecture there was a short musical programme, consisting of a piano duet by Mrs. Thackeray and Miss Bloomel and a vocal solo by Miss Lang.

Mr. Matthews was introduced by Mrs. Roger, and his address was exceedingly interesting. He described the political and educational affairs of Egypt and also told something about the arts and sciences of that country. Mr. Matthews gave an interesting account of the irrigation work along the Nile; the progress of the work is somewhat slow, as only hand labor is employed. The hours of the workers are long, and their pay ranges from five to ten cents per day. There is no female labor in the land of the pyramids.

The lecture was exceedingly humorous at times, and at the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Matthews. It was moved by Rev. J. R. Webb and seconded by Miss Weir.

CRIMINAL LIBEL CASE IS DISMISSED

Toronto, March 3—The criminal libel case of F. C. Mills, sporting editor of the Hamilton Times, against M. M. Robinson of The Spectator was dismissed by Justice Latchford, as there was a want of definiteness about the individual referred to in the article complained of.

WITNESS GAVE DOURO VOTER SUM OF $2

And Asked Him to Vote for Moher But Not at Moher's Request—What Was the $3 for?—Argument on Behalf of Relator Given.

At the conclusion of the resumption of the Douro election protest, lodged against Reeve Moher by Mr. Dennis Moloney, his opponent at the last election for the reeveship, and enlarged last Friday, all the evidence had been given and the argument of Mr. R. F. McWilliams, counsel for the relator, Mr. Moloney, had been submitted at 1 o'clock to-day. His Honor Judge Weller adjourned the sittings until 2.30 this afternoon, when Mr. E. A. Peck, who is acting in the interests of Reeve Moher—is summing up on behalf of the defendant this afternoon. A large large audience of those interested in the proceedings was again at the County Council Chamber, where the case was heard.

At the opening of this morning's sittings Mr. Peck said he had been unable to complete his defence and had informed his learned friend that he would not cross-examine the witnesses but he had one witness to call in reply.

Mr. McWilliams said he had two other witnesses to call, one to give evidence by commission, but Mr. Peck objected saying that the case for the relator had been closed. His Honor said that Mr. Peck had been notified that the two men in question were witnesses and it was quite proper that they should be called.

COURT PROMISES PROTECTION.

James Walsh was the first witness examined. He was a resident of Douro, and a voter, having voted in the last municipal election. He had had conversations with both William White, jr., and William White, jr. He went to see Mr. White, sr., but wouldn't say he had any conversation about the election. Maurice O'Brien and he went to White's together. Witness talked to old Mr. White regarding his (White) voting at the municipal election.

"What did you give him?" asked Mr. McWilliams.

"I don't know that I have a right to answer that question," said witness.

"You're bound to answer it," said Mr. McWilliams.

The Court ruled that he was compelled to answer it, and in reply to

FOR MANUAL TRAINING AND DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPTS.

Supervision Committee of Board of Education Presented a Report as to Cost of Departments at Collegiate Institute.

At the meeting of the Board of Education last night, Mr John Crane chairman of the Supervision Committee, reported to the board on the cost of the equipment for the manual training and domestic science departments at the Collegiate Institute. It will be remembered that last fall the board took this matter up with the Department of Education in Toronto. The Department called for the teaching of manual training and domestic science in the Collegiate and offered to make a yearly grant for five years equal to one-fifth of the total cost of the equipment and also ten per cent of the teachers' salaries. When the committee went into the question they acted upon the report of the recommendation of the inspector of technical education and put in a duplicate of the equipment in the Normal school. This was purchased from the Berlin Interior Hardware Company and the two departments are most modern in every respect.

Cost of Domestic Science Department $812.30.

We estimate that we should receive from the Government the following amount:

Manual training, $510.
Domestic Science, $412.40.
Total estimated grants $922.40.

Your committee recommend that a copy of this report be forwarded to the Education Department asking if it meets with their approval.

BELL TELEPHONE MAN WELL KNOWN HERE GOES TO B.C.

The Galt Reformer says; — Last evening at Hotel Grand the employees of the Bell Telephone Co., who are at present working in Galt, to the number of forty, gave a banquet in honor of J. Curzon, foreman of the Construction Department of the Bell Telephone Co. in Ontario, who is leaving the company's employ and going to British Columbia to reside in future.

During the evening an address was read by Mr. H. H. Leach, which we are unable to publish to-day for lack of room, and the presentation of a handsome five o'clock silver tea set was made to Mr. Curzon.

Mr. Curzon replied in a few words, thanking the men for their remembrance of him.

An elegant banquet was prepared by Host Hender, for the occasion.

Mr. S. J. T. Brown, assistant superintendent of construction of Ontario, of Hamilton, was chairman.

Among the officials of the company present were Messrs. Robert Hamilton, manager, Windsor; A. Scott, Brantford; R. D. Hunt, general foreman of the underground department, Hamilton; J. W. Taylor, manager, Galt; Mr. Cross, London, cableman; W. S. Low, office staff, Hamilton; Thos. Sprout, of Peterborough; Mayor Patterson, and Town Foreman Davidson, Galt.

A letter was read from Superintendent of Construction, T. H. Wadland, stating that he was sorry that he could not be present, and also expressing his regret at losing such a valuable employee as Mr. Curzon. Regrets were also read from J. H. Martin, general foreman, Hamilton; F. Denroch, Stratford, and F. Doucette, Lindsay, for not being able to be present.

The usual toast list was held and a very enjoyable evening spent.

BLACK HAND LETTER IN HANDS THE OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES

New York, Chicago and other American cities are apparently not the only places where the members of the nefarious Black Hand Society are active. A Black hand letter addressed to a Peterborough man is in the hands of the local authorities, and, to use the words of the Review's informant, is a "real, red-hot missive."

The authorities are silent as to who the letter is written by, or concerning whom they suspect to have written it, and also as to whom it is addressed.

DATES OF DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATIONS FOR 1909

Mr. A. Mowat, Inspector of Public Schools for the city, has handed in the following dates for the departmental examinations for 1909;—

1. Entrance to Model Schools from June 22nd to June 26th.
2. High Schools from June 23rd to June 25th.
3. Normal Schools from June 28th to July 5th.
4. Faculties of Education from June 28th to July 8th.
5. Pass Matriculation from June 28th to July 8th.
6. Honor Matriculation and Scholarship from June 28th to July 8th.
7. Commercial Specialist from June 28th to July 9th.

SIX SCHOLARSHIPS FOR ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

In future there will be six scholarships offered for entrance pupils. In the past there have been only two scholarships, one for boys and one for the girls, but the schools are now so numerous and the number of scholars have increased so rapidly that two scholarships are hardly sufficient to create the same interest among the pupils as in years past. Mr. A. Mowat, inspector of Public schools notified the Board of Education last night that through the generosity of Messrs J. M Hayes, W G Morrow, T F Matthews, R Neill and Dr Burnham, he was able to state that six scholarships would be available this year. Dr Burnham's two of $5 each would be first for boys and girls, and the four valued at $4 each would also be donated for the next highest pupils.

The Board was much pleased at the offer of the gentlemen named, and the secretary was instructed to write each expressing the thanks of the Board.

WHITNEY MAKES VIGOROUS REPLY TO MR. AYLESWORTH

STORY OF A CONDUCTOR

Another Aspect Lent to the Hamilton Murder Mystery—Saw Girl Rush From the House

Special to the Review.

Hamilton, March 3—A peculiar aspect has been lent to the Kinrade murder mystery by the story of Ernest Stone, a street railway motorman who was discovered by the police today. Stone says that while he was travelling west on Herkimer St. on the afternoon of the murder a young woman rushed from the Kinrade home across the street into Mrs. Hickey's residence, hatless, with her hair loosened and looking terribly excited. The strange part of the story is that when Stone saw the girl it was 3.35, while it was not until three minutes past four that the police received word of the shooting.

The removal of the Kinrade family to Toronto necessarily will put a crimp in the inquest this evening. The authorities have not yet decided whether to take the evidence of the other witnesses or to postpone the enquiry.

DEATH RESULTS FROM INJURY

East Zorra Farmer May Have Succumbed to Kick.

Stratford, March 3.—"That the deceased, Alexander Sutherland, died from shock, caused by bodily injury, exposure and alcoholic intoxication," was the statement of Drs. Quinlan and Gemmell last night when they presented their postmortem report at the coroner's inquest into the death of the East Zorra farmer, who was found at the rear of the residence of Aloysius Guerin on Friday morning last.

Evidence was adduced to show that deceased had been drunk in the Guerin house for three or four hours and that he was carried out into the coal room, but the Guerins both denied any knowledge of this circumstance. Neither of them had any recollection of the man being in the house, and Guerin denied having kicked the man out of the back door, where he was found dead on the ice in the morning.

Dr. Quinlan stated that the conditions produced could easily have been caused by a kick in the abdomen. A large abrasion on the right forehead was noted, and it was evidently produced by a blow delivered shortly before death.

The jury adjourned till March 11. Guerin is in custody.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Six men of the army of the unemployed have become crazed on the streets of Buffalo within the past two days.

Should the Kingston City Council repeal the compulsory vaccination act, four members of the Board of Health will likely resign.

Archduke John of Austria, nephew of the Emperor of Austria, who has with him the grand duchess, and has sailed for New York, is expected to visit Ottawa.

Harry Brooks, a professional "strong man," tried to commit suicide in Pittsburg because his teeth refused to bite nails in two as readily as they used to.

The Australian Commonwealth Cabinet has decided to adopt the scheme for the formation of an imperial general staff, with minor modifications, designed to give the Commonwealth complete control of its own officers.

Says Minister of Justice Had Not Facts.

Little Attention Paid to Mr. Aylesworth Anyway — Estimates Total Over Seven Millions.

Toronto, March 3.—In moving the adjournment of the Provincial Legislature yesterday afternoon Premier Whitney drew the attention of the House to "the violent spirit of animosity towards the Province of Ontario exhibited by the Minister of Justice for the Dominion of Canada in the House of Commons at Ottawa on Monday," in connection with Florence Mining Co. petition for disallowance.

In tones that conveyed no uncertain meaning, Sir James referred to two statutes passed by the Legislature, the first of which was on the statute books of the province for months without producing any stricture from Hon. Mr. Aylesworth. There was a fundamental principle of British law all over the world that no action could be brought by any claimant against a British Government, nor be allowed to take his cases into a court of law without leave from that Government. The Prime Minister quoted precedents within the province to show that this principle had been accepted, but would only draw attention to the point when the hon. gentleman (Mr. Aylesworth) had attempted to draw conclusions contrary to this fundamental principle.

The Prime Minister felt that this course was quite in line with other evidences that had come lately from Ottawa of hostility towards the people and Province of Ontario, "because, forsooth, the people of the Province of Ontario have said to everybody to whom it was necessary to say it, that they proposed to be governed by a Government of their own choice."

Continuing, the Prime Minister said that Hon. Mr. Aylesworth's statement was made with a knowledge of the facts of but one side — an ex parte judgment—which it was hardly possibly to believe. The duty of the Minister of Justice was to pronounce upon the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the act.

"Happily," said Sir James, "the people of this province are not in the habit of paying much attention to Mr. Aylesworth in his capacity as statesman. We do not think they are likely to do so in the future, except as they regard him as a curiosity."

KINRADES SEEK A CHANGE WILL LEAVE FOR TORONTO

To Let Mother and Sister Have Relief From Scene of Crime, Crown Allows Family to Absent Themselves From Inquest To-night.

Hamilton, March 3.—Every member of the Kinrade family left last evening on the 8.55 train for Toronto. They went with the permission of the crown. They will be absent for a period of a week or two, and none of them will be called at the inquest Wednesday evening. The enquiry will have to be adjourned to hear their evidence later. It was not arranged until 7 o'clock that they were to go.

The step was taken on the advice of Dr. White, the family physician. He said that it was necessary for the health of the mother and daughter that they should have a change of scene, and the crown hopes they will soon be able to give a clear story. The nurse accompanied the mother and daughter. The mother had to be almost carried to the cab.

The police here say they have information that Miss Florence Kinrade did sing in a Richmond, Va., church, in spite of rumors to the contrary. It is denied, however, that a Pinkerton man is to make enquiries there.

Mr. Kinrade is very much annoyed by the many sensational stories that have been floating around and has announced that he would sue several newspapers for libel and gossip for slander. The police officers on the case all agree that he has done everything in his power to help them in their work. He has requested them to leave no stone unturned to ferret out the murderer.

The police interviewed Miss Abbott yesterday and learned that the man she saw getting on a car at the corner of Park and Herkimer streets did not board the car until 5.30 on the afternoon of the shooting and that he did not fit the description of the assassin as given by Miss Kinrade.

The detectives did not interview Miss Kinrade yesterday. Yesterday, just as the police were leaving, and while hysterical, she cried, "See, there is the man," and pointed into space.

MAN WITH BLOOD ON HIS HAND WAS THOUGHT TO BE HAMILTON MURDERER

There was excitement in a local cafe for a few minutes last night.

A man who was somewhat under the influence of liquor entered the place and when he sat down at a table it was noticed that one of his hands was covered with blood. A young man who was in the restaurant asked the stranger what had happened his hand and was told that it had been injured three days ago. Asked why he did not have it washed and dressed the fellow gave no answer. This made some of those present suspicious that the stranger might have been the Hamilton murderer and the police were telephoned for. One of the constables arrived a few minutes later and searched the man with the bloody hand. About the only thing found on him was a small pocket knife. The stranger was able to demonstrate clearly that he had no connection whatever, with the Hamilton tragedy and he was not molested further.

THEY WANTED NINETEEN CENTS TO TELEGRAPH TO MONTREAL

Some unique methods are employed by "dead beats" to secure money in Peterborough. The other day two men entered a lawyer's office and told a story that they thought would be a revenue producer. It was to the effect that they were "broke" but could secure funds by telegraphing to Montreal. However, they only had six cents and wanted to borrow nineteen more in order to forward a message to Montreal. The lawyer told them to go to the telegraph office and telegraph to Montreal at his expense. He would telephone the telegraph office and arrange the matter.

The two strangers said they would do as advised but it was learned soon afterwards that they never went near the telegraph office.

Our $3.50 Gift

Don't buy Silver Butter-Spreaders. We have a set of six for you. They are Wm. Rogers & Sons' AA triple plate.

If you could buy this set in a jewelry store it would cost you $3.50.

But this is the lily pattern, made exclusively for us. You can buy nothing like it.

Simply do this: Send us the metal top from a jar of Armour's Extract of Beef, or the paper certificate under the top, with 10c for packing and mailing, and we'll send you one of the Spreaders.

Send 6 tops or certificates and 10c with each and get the full set of six.

Thus, for a little time, we give you back more than you pay for the Extract. We want you to know the many uses of a good Extract of Beef.

Try it in adding flavor to soups, gravies and meat dishes.

Get Armour's, for that is concentrated to four times the strength of others.

Other extracts of beef costing a trifle less go but one-fourth as far. The directions on Armour's are: "Use one-fourth as much."

$15,000.00

As Shylock says, "'Tis a goodly sum." It represents the amount required to put in wheelpits, forebays, etc., in conjunction with the new $120,000.00 dam when it is built, if it is built or if it is built where the commissioners acting under the Hydro-Electric engineers' advice say it should be built, viz., a few hundred feet below the present site. It would be practically impossible to put in the $15,000 worth for electrical horse-power development purposes later on. The by-laws are made separate no doubt, because electrical development is no part of the Water Commissioners' business. It is wholly the Council's business. It would be well however, that a public meeting should be held in order that the public may know something about the whole scheme and in order that questions may be asked and divers schemes, if any, considered. In this way, whichever plan is adopted, will have tagged to it no regrets.

THE ATTACK REPULSED

Something has happened in Winnipeg which recalls Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech at the beginning of the session. The Premier declared that the Conservatives had carried Manitoba by the use of the outrageous electoral lists. The Roblin Government at the meeting of the Legislature caused a Committee of the House to be appointed to investigate this registration, summoning the judges who prepared the lists, and Mr. Sifton on whose authority Sir Wilfrid made his statement. The Liberals in the Manitoba Legislature collapsed entirely; one of them admitting that the lists were correct, and the others refusing to offer any proof in support of Sir Wilfrid's charge.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A horse walked into the basement diningroom of a Montreal house recently when the family was at dinner. Not being invited to partake of the repast it turned round and went out in disgust.

When an individual reaches that high state of perfection which revolts at simple diversions for purposes of healthy exercise and intervals of harmless play he is to be judged himself equally strictly, although the absurdity of it is apparent.

Insolvencies in the Dominion of Canada, in January, say Dun & Co., were less numerous than a year ago, though they involved a larger amount of money than in the corresponding month last year, 166 failures for $2,129,351, comparing with 193 failures last year.—Trade Review.

It should not be forgotten that the United States are setting us an example to be followed in their investigation of the conditions of rural life. Mr Roosevelt's commission was a great idea and a great success and its imitation should be instituted in Canada with all speed.

"Mr. Winston Churchill, after an unusually prolonged silence, spoke at Birmingham last week. The speech was not, on the whole, a happy one, and Mr. Churchill took an inexcusable advantage of the prostration of Mr. Chamberlain. For once the Spectator lost its temper. It declared that "for brazen political impudence, for flagrant paradox, for unblushing sophistry, Mr. Winston Churchill's speech at Birmingham on Wednesday would be hard to beat."—The British Weekly.

"Yet there is one difficulty which neither the evolutionist nor the unscientific man has been able to overcome. That difficulty is the unbridged gap between living and non-living matter which at present divides the evolutionary process into two disconnected parts. The physicist will establish the process from a mass of incandescent gas to the globe approximately as we know it, apart from life of any kind. The biologist is content to start with life of any kind however humble, and to evolve from it the immense variety of highly complicated organisms around us. But in neither of these august evolutionary processions do we find any explanation of the evolution of the living from the non-living." —London Times.

"It makes no difference what religion one begins with; the followers of all religions will arrive eventually at the same result if only they will not stop short in their progress and are broadminded enough to take in the good and the true from other religions. This is not only logical, but is necessary for the self-preservation of these cults, and is especially true of Confucianism. The nations of the world may not yet become unified, but science, art and ethical ideas are all becoming universal, and it would be a great mistake against this unifying tendency, to think of reviving Confucianism in its present form, isolated from other teachings, because Confucianism may be considered better than either Buddhism or Christianity.

"On the other hand, the ethical movement exemplified by John Stuart Mill, Spencer, and Huxley may be taken—though this would doubtless be denied by these scientists—as the advance of Christianity toward Confucianism, by curtailing the miraculous element and giving prominence to morality. And the Ethical Culture movement is the Confucianising of Christianity. From such indications we can look for the amalgamation of these three great schools of thought. Confucianism in this sense alone would be worth reviving and in no other sense."— Public Opinion, England.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD

Mi-o-na Has Reached a Gold Standard, Says Harry Ellis of Fergus, For Stomach Trouble.

Harry Ellis of Fergus, Ont. says: "I believe that Miona for the cure of stomach trouble is worth its weight in gold. It cured me from a stomach difficulty that seemed to puzzle all other prescriptions and remedies. I was unable to eat, the food would ferment and form gas and make a serious pressure on my heart. There were terrible pains in the pit of my stomach. I became weak, drowsy, discouraged and later I got nervous and could not sleep or rest. The disease makes one feel like not wanting to see any human being and produces melancholy and forebodings. I was told to try Miona and when I commenced on the first box I had hardly any faith in it, but the first two days' treatment made the pain in my stomach cease and to make a long story short, the upshot of my using Miona was that it cured me wholly, and I now can eat what I like and when I am hungry. I am an ardent advocate of the use of Miona."

Wm. Madill, Peterborough, sells Mi-o-na Tablets the dyspepsia remedy that is making such surprising cures throughout Canada, for 50 cents a box, guarantees them to cure, or money back.

A GRATEFUL GREYHOUND

A fine big greyhound which took sick on George street yesterday evening, was the means of drawing a large crowd in a very short time. The animal was carried into a nearby store by sympathetic hands and treatment was given it, but it was nearly two hours before it recovered sufficiently to be let out on the street again. After being out a few moments the greyhound returned to the store, presumably to thank his new friends for their kindness.

by those of the beast. Likewise have there been instances in which the bravest have been tried in the furnace and found wanting, while, conversely, the supposedly cowards have proved to be heroes. Therefore since no two situations can occur at a different time and yet have precisely similar conditions, it behooves us to forbear judging, lest we be judged, and to approach the following incident in this man's career as if we ourselves dwelt under a covering of glass.

From the time of his marriage up to this moment no man could have fought better the bitter struggle of life than David Cable, yet now in this hour—his hour of travail and temptation—he piteously succumbed. Cowardice, the most despicable of all emotions, held him in her grasp.

He sank exhausted against the wall, his eyes fixed upon the black hole through which his wife had disappeared; then the stony glare changed suddenly to a look of realization—horrible, stupefying. He crept to the edge and peered intently into the water, not six feet below, his eyes starting from his head.

Black, sobbing water, darkness impenetrable! The instinctive fear of apprehension caused him to look in every direction for possible eyewitnesses. Every drop of blood in his body seemed turned to ice with horror. Down there in that black, chill water lay the body of his wife, the woman he had loved through all these trying years, and he her murderer!

Terrified, trembling, panting, he tried to force himself into the water with the vague hope of saving her, after all, but even as he looked wildly about for help, a shout ready to spring from his dry throat, the natural dread of the accused facing his accuser took possession of him. Fear, abject fear, held him in grasp; he could not shout.

A man was running across the Drive toward him—a long, loping figure that covered the ground rapidly. With a last horrified look in the water, David Cable, craven for the moment, turned and fled through the night along the broken sea wall—fled aimlessly, his eyes unseeing, his feet possessed of wings. He knew not whither he ran, only that he was an assassin fleeing from the horrors behind.

Over the narrow strip of ground sped the long, eager figure that had darted from the shadow of the homes across the street. In hoarse, raucous tones he shouted after the fleeing man:

"Stop! Wait! Halt!"

He dashed up to the spot where he had seen two figures but a moment before, the full horror of what had happened striking him for the first time. The man was Elias Droom, and he had been an eyewitness to the dim, indistinct tragedy at the sea wall.

His presence is easily explained. He knew of Bansemer's telephone message to Mrs. Cable, together with his threat to expose her on the following morning. It was only natural that she should make a final plea—that night, of course. The old clerk realised the danger of an encounter between his employer and his victim at a time so intense as this. He could not know that Bansemer would visit the Cable home that evening, but he suspected that such would be the case. It was his duty to prevent the meeting, if possible.

Bansemer would go too far, argued the old man; he must be stopped. That is why he lurked in the neighborhood to turn Bansemer back before he could enter the home of David Cable.

He saw Mrs. Cable leave the house and go toward the lake. Following some distance behind, he saw her cross the Drive and make her way to the sea wall. Slinking along in the shadow of the buildings, cursing his luck and Bansemer jointly, he saw the two forms come together out there by the lake.

"Too late, curse him for a fool," Droom had muttered to himself. "He ought to know this is bad business just now. She's come out to meet him too. Worse. It's my duty to look out for him as long as he employs me. I'm doing my best, and I can't help it if he betrays himself. I'd like to see him—but I can't go back on him while I'm taking money from him. Look at that!"

He chuckled softly as he saw the two figures approach each other. For all that he knew they might be contemplating a fond and loving embrace, and he was not undeceived until he saw one of the figures separate itself, run from the other and go plunging to the earth. As he started up in surprise the other figure leaned forward and then straightened itself quickly. Droom did not hesitate. He dashed across the street, conscious that something dreadful had happened. His instant thought was that Bansemer had lost his temper and had struck the woman down.

The flight of the man was proof positive. He called him to stop, certain that it was Bansemer. The runner turned his face toward him for a moment. The light from the street may have deceived Elias Droom's eyes, but the face of the assailant was not that of James Bansemer. Droom stopped short and looked after the man, paralyzed with amazement. Then he gave a snorting laugh at his own stupidity. Of course it was Bansemer. Who else could it be?

Arriving at the spot where he had last seen the couple, he was amazed to find no one there. He realized, with horror, that the woman must have been struck down, had fallen or had been thrown into the lake.

The gaunt old clerk groaned bitterly as he threw himself upon the wall and peered over into the water. He listened for the cries and struggles of the woman. Gradually his eyes solved the situation. He saw the row of spiles beyond the break in the sea wall and the swishing pool inside. Every incoming wave sent a flood of water between the sturdy posts and into the cut of the wall.

Without a moment's hesitation he dropped into this seething prison, confident that the woman's body could be found there. A single glance had shown him that he could crawl upward through the break to safety, and he knew that the water below was not dangerously deep.

A minute later he was scrambling out of this angry, icy water up through the fissure, bearing in his long arms the inert form of Frances Cable. He had found her half submerged in the pool, every sweep of the waves through the sievelike posts covering her completely.

He dropped the body on the ground after reaching the level and took a quick, shuddering glance about. Two men had stopped on the opposite side of the Drive. He hesitated a second and then shouted to them. They stood stock still in alarm. Before they could respond to his second shout Elias Droom was tearing the woman's watch from her belt and the rings from her fingers. His strong, nervous hands found the necklace that she wore, and it broke beneath their sudden jerk. Cunningly he tossed the necklace upon the ground and trampled it with his heel. The watch and rings went flying across the wall and far out into the lake.

"This woman has been slugged!" he shouted. He did not know how much of the tragedy these men had witnessed. Boldness was his cue for the moment; stealth could follow later. "She's been in the water. I'm afraid it's murder. The man who did it went that way. Yell for the police!"

If the assailant was James Bansemer, Droom was doing his duty by him; if it was another, he was doing his duty by society.

To be continued.

RECOMMENDS THIS HOME MIXTURE

Noted Authority Gives Simple Remedy for Kidney and Bladder Trouble

This is a simple home recipe now being made known in all the larger cities through the newspapers. It is intended to check the many cases of Rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble which have made so many cripples and invalids and weaklings of some of our brightest and strongest people.

The druggists here have been notified to supply themselves with the ingredients and the sufferer will have no trouble to obtain them. The prescription is as follows; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce, and Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Recent experiments prove this simple mixture effective in Rheumatism, because of its positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys. It compels these most vital organs to filter from the blood and system the waste impurities and uric acid which are the cause of rheumatism. It cleanses the kidneys, strengthens them and removes quickly such symptoms as backache, blood disorders, bladder weakness, frequent urination, painful scalding and discolored urine. It acts as a powerful stimulant to the entire kidney and bladder structure.

Those who suffer and are accustomed to purchase a bottle of medicine should not let a little inconvenience interfere with making this up.

Calgary, Alta., March 3.—The Conservative convention here Monday night nominated Dr. Blow and R. B. Bennett, K.C., for the Legislature. St. Albert Liberals nominated Wilfred Gariepy.

Unionist Wins In Glasgow.

London, March 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Glasgow Central bye-election yesterday Dickson (Unionist) was elected by 7,298 to Bowles' (Liberal) 5,185.

Troops Under Avalanche.

Innsbruck, Austria, March 3.—A detachment of six officers and twenty-five men of the Austrian army was overwhelmed by an avalanche near Lafrann yesterday.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

ACHE

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

Eight-Hour Day Wins.

Cincinnati, March 3.—The union men win in the long fought case of the Typothetae of America against the International Printing Pressmen's Union. A decision rendered yesterday afternoon by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals establishes an eight hour day for work.

Mauretania's New Record.

Queenstown, March 3.—The steamer Mauretania passed Daunt's Rock at 9.47 a.m. yesterday, establishing a new record for the eastbound passage from New York of four days, 20 hours and 2 minutes. Her average speed for the run was 25.28 nautical miles per hour.

Lakes Are "Open."

Detroit, March 3.—Reports to the weather bureau from its stations about the Great Lakes indicate that there is much less ice in all of the lakes and connecting channels than at this time last year, and an early opening of navigation probably will be possible.

Called Judge a Pig.

Chicago, March 3.—Judge Brentano will hear testimony on Friday in a writ of habeas corpus obtain by Chas. S. Beattie, an attorney, who had been fined $200 and locked up in default of payment by Municipal Judge Blake. After a controversy with the latter concerning the trial of a case, Beattie is said to have applied this remark to the court: "You are no more fit to try a case on that bench than a pig."

Queen's to Ask Grant.

Kingston, March 3.—On Wednesday, March 10, a deputation from Queen's will wait on Premier Whitney and Messrs. Cochrane and Pyne, and ask for a grant of $150,000 for the new chemistry and metalurgy building. Over 500 students taking chemistry; classes crowded.

The binder twine department of the penitentiary has closed down for a time.

Will Refund $12,000,000.

New York, March 3.—Disbursement of the $12,000,000 in rebates, due gas consumers in Manhattan and the Bronx, under the 80-cent gas law, in accordance with the decision of the United States Supreme Court was begun yesterday by the Consolidated Gas Co. and its subsidiary corporations through the nine distributing offices established throughout the city.

Drowns Her Son.

Regina, Sask., March 3.—Mrs. William Finlayson yesterday morning murdered her three-year-old son, Warren, and then committed suicide. The deed was done in a moment of insanity brought on by illness.

Mrs. Finlayson was the daughter of William Sleath, a carpenter, of Seaforth, Ont., and came west to Regina two years ago.

Japan Gives Up Telegraph.

Yokohama, March 3.—In accordance with a recent agreement Japan is to surrender to China the telegraph stations outside the railway settlements in Manchuria. Representatives of the two Governments are now investigating conditions preparatory to the change, which is expected within a few days.

Travesties on Irish.

Chicago, March 3.—The Irish Fellowship Club will meet on Saturday to consider vigorous protests on the part of the members against the display in the shops of certain St. Patrick's Day emblems which they declare to be "gross travesties upon the intelligent and high-strung people."

Want Him to Declare.

Ottawa, March 3.—At a meeting of the Liberal Association here last night it was decided to ask Sir Wilfrid to declare his intention at an early date of sitting for Ottawa. A deputation, including Hon. Charles Murphy, was appointed to wait upon him at once for that purpose.

Lots of Nitrate.

Valparaiso, March 3.—An expert study of the nitrate fields of Chili has been made lately and as a result the estimate is made public that there is sufficient of this commodity in sight to last for one hundred and fifty years at the present rate of consumption.

Couldn't Stand Humiliation.

New York, March 3.—Humiliated and despondent at being forced by business reverses to sell cheap eye glasses from a stand on Park Row, Isaac Samuels, formerly an optician in Prussia and in this city, suicided yesterday.

23,000 VOTES FOR WEEKLY CLUB FROM TWO SUBSCRIBERS

Including Special Ballot.

It is Very Important to Every Candidate Who Wishes to be a Winner to Secure as Many Subscriptions as Possible This Week—You Will Need all You Can Get to Win.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

There is much good generalship displayed by the various candidates and it is very puzzling to the readers and many others to get a line on the prospects of any of them. They are all working, but they select their own time to make a dash for the front. It looks as though there were more surprises in store and the standing the next few days may reveal them.

The leaders to-day:

HIGH VOTE

Miss Maud Perry.

FIRSTS

Miss Maude Perry.
Miss Rose P. Moore.
P. G. Towns.
Herb McMillan

SECONDS

Miss Maude Adams.
Miss Lila Finlay.
W. G. Rundle.
Sidney A. Smithson.

There are some who seem to be of the opinion that it is hardly worth their while to exert themselves for candidates who at present are near the bottom of the list. This is an entirely erroneous idea. There is no candidate yet who has a lead that can not be overcome. The contest has almost three weeks to run, and, although some of the contestants have quite a large vote, it is no one that should in any way dishearten the friends of those who are not so fortunate. Nobody is in any way hopelessly distanced; There is plenty of time; a great field for operations, and all that is necessary to change the face of the situation is to put in some good hard work while the club offer is in force.

NOTICE THIS

Remember that a year's new subscription to the Weekly means 1000 votes and a new yearly subscriber to the Daily gets you 3000 votes, and in many cases there are only a few thousand separating the different candidates. Four or five new subscriptions would make all the difference.

Do not confine your efforts to those who read the Review already. There are others of your friends who could readily be induced to subscribe. See what you can do with these friends' assistance and then watch your score climb.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number scheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

of the Minister's apologetic tone in his reference to Bourke? asked Mr. Borden. This man had been charging that there was a conspiracy in connection with the escape of a prisoner. It was the duty of the Government not to allow the matter to stand where it is.

Mr. Fielding informed Mr. Foster yesterday that he was unable to say when he would bring down the budget. There were two or three things to be considered first.

On the second reading of a bill respecting the Brazilian Electric Steel & Smelting Co., Ltd., and one respecting the Mexican Land & Irrigation Co., in the Senate yesterday, Hon. Mr. Lougheed questioned the advisability of endorsing the principle of such bills. There was some doubt whether Canada had constitutional right to give companies authority to carry out works in foreign countries. Canadians who desired to invest abroad should be compelled to take the risk of incorporating under the laws of the countries in which they proposed to invest. Capital was needed in Canada.

Hon. Mr. Scott said that he believed that he was responsible in the first place for these companies which had been incorporated to do business in Mexico and South America. The first application made for such a charter was when he was administrating the Companies' Act as Secretary of State, made by James Ross of Montreal, who had organized in that city and Halifax a company with very large capital to develop a power project in Mexico. He was startled at first, but Mr. Ross assured him that the Mexican Government had a very high regard for the Canadian Companies Act and for Canadian business methods, and that they would allow a company with a Canadian charter to operate in that country. Handsome returns were now coming back to Canada and he believed that the profits were greater than could be obtained if the money had been invested in Canada.

CONDITIONS IMPROVING

Increase in Business at the Local Custom House Speaks Well for the City.

Business conditions in Peterborough are steadily improving according to the amount of goods passing through the local custom house. The revenue for the month of February was $17,664, as compared with $16,404 the same month last year, an increase of $1,260.

An official at the custom house today stated that there was a steady increase in the business at that institution.

A CHICAGO CRITIC ON A COMING PLAY

What James O'Donnell Has to Say About "Come Back to Erin"

One of the prettiest things I've seen in a long, long time, is the performance of Chas. Mack in "Come Back to Erin." It relates a story of a young Irishman who has fared well in America, has come back to the old home for a little visit and he has strolled across the fields to a neighbor's cabin for a chat and good bye before going back to his life in the new land. The master of the household, his wife and their daughters greet the guest as he strolls toward the cabin door, there is a glimpse of hedge rows and leaf strewn ground and soft landscapes. The old wife sits spinning, the girls dance and sing, the master plays the bagpipes and there is gossip of the neighborhood and of the fairies that are so real and lovely a factor in Irish rural life. In fine a charming little panorama of simple unspoiled life is persuasively disclosed and the heart is touched and the mind refreshed by whiffs of the wit and sentiment, the folklore and the poetry, the tasks and diversions and a goodly and happy peasantry. When the guest prepares to take his departure, he asks if they have any messages to send to friends in America, and the old woman asks with a simple, unstudied pathos that goes straight to the heart if he would please lay a flower on the grave of her boy that died in the war in that far land. Then you hear the jaunting car approaching, they tell him they are sorry he must go. The acting is notable, having that gentleness and sincerity of touch that seems to be the birthright of the Irish histerian when he essays the definition of moods and sentiment and yearning. Mr Mack's effort is fragrant with fine, simple feeling and nothing so natural, mellow and charming has graced the stage in many a day.

Much Scenery

The "45 Minutes From Broadway" Co. arrived in the city this morning and are registered at the different hotels. The company travel by special train, which is composed of two baggage cars and a sleeper, and it took six trucks to have the scenery and baggage removed from the station this morning.

Sir,—I decidedly endorse the view expressed by you regarding Mr Mason's action re Rev Mr Jackson's sermon.

The Christian world will do well to cling to the old Bible which in all ages has been the confidence of Saints and Heroes. Far better would it be if all ministers strive to confirm and strengthen belief in God's word, for in this doubting age we must see to it that our faith stands in "in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."

The editorial re Mr. Mason was all right. Too many of the ministers think they must maintain their right to the title Doctor of Divinity, by doctoring the Bible.

Would just like to know if the editor that wrote that article ever read a book called, "The Divine Plan of the Ages?" If not, would like to send him a copy. Kindly pass this letter to him so he can let me know.

Cameron, March 3, '09

Dear Friend and Brother—I read with interest your editorial on the stand of Mr Mason and Rev Jackson. I cannot but think that the pen that penned such true and beautiful sentiments must realize our Heavenly Father's plan is gradually unfolding and in due time will prove to man through the great time of trouble which is now upon us. Dan. 12.1; Matt. 24.21, the truthfulness of the wise man's words, Eccl 12; 13.-14. That the deceptions which the Word tells us will come in the last days and if it were possible would deceive the very elects, are truly upon us and only those who are honest at heart and have faith in God's word and plan will take a stand in defence of the same.

Some time since I was awakened to the fact that faith in the Lord Jesus Christ was being sacrificed for spiritualism, evolution, new thought, etc. and obeyed the call of Rev 18.4, Come out of here my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. I found great help in a study of the Divine Plan of the ages, the same, I am sending you

Please read carefully and prayerfully. When you get through would you please give it to Mr Mason, asking a careful reading, after which he can return it.

Hoping to hear from you, I remain yours in our beloved Redeemer,

Indians to Obtain Bridge

Ottawa, March 2.—Messrs. Samuel Park, warden of Bruce County, P. A. Malcolmson, County Clerk; William Hunter, reeve of Kincardine, and R. Dobson, reeve of Southampton, interviewed Minister Oliver and Deputy Superintendent-General Frank Pedley to-day. They desire to have the Indian Department authorize a contribution of $3,000 by the Indians towards the cost of a bridge to be built at Southampton.

A HOME
Artistically Decorated

THERE was a day when the average buyer was contented to paper the home with any old paper—sometimes the color and pattern was considered—oftener they were not; occasionally the person who wanted the best money could buy made an attempt at a color scheme, those were the days when Art was in its infancy. To-day Art is full grown and the atmosphere is permeated with it — everybody buys the decorations for their rooms from an artistic standpoint, and what a difference in the home of to-day and that of our fore-fathers.

It is not absolutely necessary to pay an exhorbitant price to get an article that is high in the artistic scale—not at all, we find that the cheapest often is just what is needed, just the right colorblend and pattern scheme, of course the price is a secondary consideration in most cases. Our stock comprises the most artistic Room Decorations in Wall Paper that is made, and the prices are right. Visit this new department on the third floor in connection with our large Home Furnishing Department. Our manager is an expert in the art of room decorating and will be glad to give you ideas whether you wish to purchase or not. All are welcome to come and inspect our stock.

Mr. E. Manning, the well-known wall paper man has taken charge of this new department and is always ready with the best service at his command to cater to the Peterborough public.

THIS IS OF INTEREST IN PETERBORO'

Brantford, March 1—Under the recent agreement the Brantford Street Railway Company was required to deposit with the city by March 1st, a bond of $25,000 as evidence of good faith that it will fulfil its obligations. These in brief consist of rebuilding the existing eight miles of street railway within one year from May 1st, and making eight miles additional extensions in the city within two years. Certain bonds were deposited by the company tonight together with personal guarantees on the part of the financiers, that the work will be completed, but the city has not yet decided whether these are satisfactory although the City Council is glad to note that progress is being made, and it is likely that the work will proceed. Had the company not deposited the bond the city could have revoked the franchise of the company which still has forty-two years to run.

EUCHRE CONTEST THIS EVENING

Members of the Young Conservative Club are reminded of the Euchre contest to be held in the club rooms this evening. The games will start as soon after eight as possible and there promises to be an interesting time. There will be a prize for first second and third high scores, and no doubt a large number will be present to take part in the contest.

"45 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY"

The attraction at the Grand Opera House this evening will be Cohan and Harris' production of George M. Cohan's new music play "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," with Scott Welsh in the role of "Kid Burns" and Miss Frances Gordon as "Mary" which has proven one of the most remarkable stage successes of the last season. This play was originally staged at Columbus, Ohio, three years ago last September, going from Columbus to Chicago, the early part of October, and made a run of thirty weeks to the largest receipts ever recorded by an attraction in that city. Following this, it made a record of four months to capacity attendance at the new Amsterdam theatre, New York, and a likewise run at the Colonial Theatre, Boston. Mr. Welsh is surrounded by a notable cast, and a large auxiliary company. The principal players are Scott Welsh, Frances Gordon, Mary E Cunard, Elizabeth Drew, Susan Chisnell, Ninon De Varenne, James Manning, Eugene Macgregor, James A Davett, Harry Gwyette and Archie MacKenzie.

Italian Fined in Police Court for Assaulting a Young Lady

A young Italian named Nicolo Marrono was before Magistrate Dumble this morning charged with having assaulted a young lady on Charlotte street last evening. He pleaded not guilty. P. C. Newhall was called and stated that while on duty last night the prisoner, accompanied by another man came out of an hotel and as two ladies came along, the Italian slapped one of them on the face and blew some tobacco smoke at her. On his approach the two men ran into the back of the hotel where he arrested the prisoner.

The young man through his interpreter, Mr. Ed Minicolo, said that he was pushed by the other man who was with him, but the Magistrate could not see it that way as the evidence showed plainly that the young lady was intentionally assaulted and he imposed a fine of $10 on the prisoner or thirty days in gaol.

The fine was paid by a friend of the Italian and he was given his freedom.

WHAT A GREAT MAN SAID TO THE GREAT AMERICAN PEOPLE

Parisian Sage is a discovery of a celebrated scientist, who spent the best years of his life in perfecting this great hair tonic.

In giving his recipe to the American people he said, "Parisian Sage is the most delightful hair dressing in the world, but it is more than a hair dressing. It cures dandruff by killing the germs that infest the roots of the hair; it stops falling hair; it gives vigor and strength to the hair roots. W. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle and guarantees to do all that is claimed for it or your money is refunded. If you do not reside near a druggist who sells Parisian Sage send 50 cents to Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., and a bottle will be sent you all charges prepaid.

WAS INJURED BY FALLING ON THE ICE

Two Accidents Reported From Apsley---Personal News of Interest

Special to the Review.

Apsley, March 2.—We are pleased to learn that Mr. Cyrus McFadden, who had some of his ribs broken by falling on the ice while lumbering, is convalescent.

Miss Nellie Nesbitt and Master Karnahan Whitmore of Chandos, are visiting friends in Burleigh.

Miss Zella Hales who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Wellington Lean, has returned to her home in Chandos.

Mrs. Thomas Stevens had the misfortune to have one of the bones of her right arm broken by falling on the ice on Friday last.

One of our young men has purchased a beautiful white bronco disposed of on the market at Peterborough recently. It is sagacious beyond most animals, as it will shake hands with its new master on his entering the stable.

Mrs. Allen Coones has gone on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Smith.

Mr. William Thompson of Mount Julian, was in the village last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Staples were guests at Mr. Thomas Stevens', on Sunday last.

Reeves Tucker and Hales of Burleigh and Chandos respectively, have returned from a trip to Ottawa in the interests of building two new bridges in this part of the county.

Miss M. E. Hales is visiting friends in Peterborough.

RE BRIDGE AT BALL NARROWS

The building of a bridge at Ball Lake Narrows would be of considerable value to the county. Warden Scott and Councillor Fife were some time ago appointed to go around on a tour of inspection in connection with county bridges and among other recommendations suggested that the construction of a bridge at Bald Narrow would be of advantage.

A deputation from the county council to Toronto which is going there shortly in educational interests will also call the attention of the Provincial government to the desirability of having the bridge constructed.

A COMING ENTERTAINMENT

Tuesday March 9th---Mr. McIlroy Will Sing---Mr. Smiley Assisted by Best Local Talent

At the Conservatory Music Hall next Tuesday Mr. Owen Smiley will be assisted by Mr. Wm. McIlroy, Miss Klien, in vocal selections, the Mandolin Club and Misses McCaw and McKee. This will be a first-class entertainment and there is sure to be a large audience. Tickets 50 cents. On sale at Conservatory, or at Review office.

GREAT VICTORY IN GLASGOW

London, March 2.—The most overwhelming defeat the Government has yet suffered in the long list of bye-election disasters befell it today in Glasgow, when W. Scott Dickson, Unionist, was elected, receiving 7,298 votes, against 5,185 cast for Gibson Bowles, his Liberal opponent. This is the largest Unionist vote and majority in the history of the constituency. Mr. Bowles is a prominent ex-Unionist, who seceded from the party on account of tariff reform. He also embraced Home Rule a few days ago and had the full National support. The result was received with cheers by the Unionists in the House of Commons tonight.

Hear Mr. Smiley give "In the Old, Old Days and Now," at the Conservatory Music Hall, on Tuesday evening, March 9th. Tickets 25c.

JUDGE PRUDHOMME GIVES EVIDENCE

A short session of the committee was, however, held and Judge Prudhomme gave evidence regarding lists revised by him. He claimed that they were all right and he did not see anything wrong.

MR. JAS. LEWIS HAS WITHDRAWN

Mr James Lewis in spite of the fact that he had the handsome vote of 121 to his credit has dropped out of the running in the Review's popularity contest.

Mr. Lewis explained to a representative of the Review that his business would not permit of his taking the European trip, hence his withdrawal.

With Mr. Lewis out of the limelight the other candidates will be considerably encouraged.

PERSONAL

Mr. John Bradshaw, of Lindsay, is in the city to-day on business.

Miss Stella Elder of Bobcaygeon, is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. Arthur J. Johnston, of the Windsor House, was in Toronto yesterday.

Mr. Gordon Logan of the National Cash Register Company, Toronto, is in the city on a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Elliott left this morning for a few days' business visit in Toronto.

Mrs. Morrison, of 452 Hunter street, and Mrs. Barrie will not receive again this season.

Miss May Edwards, of Toronto, is home for a couple of weeks' visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Edwards, Murray street.

Mr. H. L. Bruce left last night for Cobourg, where he will spend a few days with his parents, before leaving for Winnipeg to attend the Normal School.

The three year old son of Alanson Flaherty of Brantford, was fatally burned by a celluloid comb in his hand catching fire from the stove.

CHURCH LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP SETTLED TO-MORROW NIGHT

Tomorrow night will see the finish of the Senior Church League when St Andrew's and Knox church come together to decide who will carry off the championship.

Both teams are on even terms in the win and loss columns and should put up a good article of hockey. Naturally both teams are confident of winning the cup and the result will be awaited with interest.

St Andrew's have a good, heavy and well balanced team, but Knox church claim that their team while not so heavy, will be able to get away quicker with the puck on account of their superior skating.

The game will be played from 9 to 10 and a good referee will be secured and the hockey fans are assured witnessing a fast, clean contest.

There will be a game in the Mercantile League from eight to nine, which is sure to be interesting, and as an extra attraction the Rink Rats will endeavor to down the Wild Cats, from seven to eight.

The price of admission to all three games will be 10c for ladies and 15c for gentlemen.

This will likely end the hockey season in Peterborough and no doubt a large crowd will be on hand tomorrow night to see the games.

BOWLING

WHITTY'S FIND WILL PERFORM

Calgary, March 2—The indoor running race between Jimmy Fitzgerald, Mecklenburg and Accose, which takes place at the Auditorium rink towards the end of March will likely see Fred Fraser, the Edmonton Indian, the man Fred Whitcroft says runs somehundred miles every morning before breakfast, in the line-up.

Fraser won all the five and ten-mile events in Edmonton and lots of sports in the North think he can beat Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald, however, is willing to settle the matter, and has challenged Fraser to meet him here.

PRACTICE OF ST. ANDREWS

A practice of the St. Andrew's hockey team will be held in the Brock street rink to-night from 7 to 8 o'clock.

A full attendance of all players is looked for, as it is necessary that the team be in the best of shape for the game in the Church League finals with Knox on Thursday.

HOCKEY

At the Brock street rink last night the P.C.I. ran away from the Rough Riders and incidentally demonstrated that they are the better team. The score, which was 7—1, about indicates the play as the Rough Riders at no stage of the game looked very dangerous. The play was not as fast as in the previous game, when the figures stood 1—0 in favor of the P.C.I., and was somewhat rougher, principally on the part of the Rough Riders, who spent considerable time in the penalty box. The P. C. I. have a well balanced team and their work was heartily applauded by the large crowd present. Their combination and shooting were a big factor in winning the game and they checked back so hard that their opponents could not get away to any great extent. The half-time score was 4—1, Elliott getting the counter for the Rough Riders on a nice shot from the side. Leo Derocher had a difficult job but gave good satisfaction with the ball.

The biggest farce of the season took place last night when the Tame Banties defeated Auburn by 5 goals to 2. How the winners managed to get the five cannot be exactly accounted for, but that they did not earn them was the opinion of the large number of fans, who were utterly disgusted with the showing the country bunch made. The only redeeming feature of their playing was the splendid work of Wiggins Fagan, who, although he suffered from an attack of cold feet, put up the game of his life. On the other hand the Auburns were always prominent by their cool and heady playing, and the combination and shooting of the forwards went a long way to make up for the disappointment that the wretched work of the Tame Banties caused the spectators.

Josh Craig, of the Strathcona Roosters, undertook to handle the game, but the least said about this official will be appreciated both by himself and the fans.

The teams were as follows;

AUBURNS.		TAME BANTIES.

The West End hockey team journeyed to Keene last night to play the Trent Valley seven of that village, and were defeated by the score of 16 to 2. The Keene team were so much heavier aggregation and used their weight to good advantage and the West Ends could not get past them owing to the small size of the rink. The Keene team played the lifting game, at which they had the advantage on the West Ends. The local team report having a good time, and feel confident they can defeat the Trent Valley bunch on larger ice.

The following players represented the West Ends;

MOHL SLAPPED ROGERS ON BACK

German Was Defeated But Wants Revenge in Græco-Roman Bout

The Galt Reformer of Saturday, Feb 27th says;

There was a fair attendance at the opera house last night to witness one of the best wrestling programmes ever given in the county.

The second and main bout was between Yankee Rogers, the big American, and Fritz Mohl the big German wrestler. It was catch as catch can style, strangle hold barred. It was a great match. Before Yankee got the first fall he had a toe hold, but Mohl slapped Yankee on the back and the American left go his hold, thinking the referee had given him a decision but Mohl replied that was a trick he had learned from Hackenschmidt. Mohl yelled out, "Come on and wrestle, that is what I am here for."

The second bout was a better one than the first. Yankee had Mohl nearly over a dozen times, but the powerful German would get away. Yankee got the second fall in 27.50 by a scissors hold.

Rogers is far the superior man. He is cleverer, faster on his feet, and is scientific. All that saves the German is his strength and weight.

After the match was over Mohl said he was a defeated man, but his style of wrestling was Graeco-Roman or mixed style and he would like to meet Mr Rogers.

Yankee came back and said that he would meet Mr Mohl at any kind he wanted.

CURLING

GRITS WON OUT.

The Grits won the final game at the curling rink yesterday. Skip Morrow had it on Skip Ferguson by 5 points and the Grits now have a majority of 18, they having had a lead of 13 in the other games. The rinks and scores were as follows;—

Grits.	Tories.
A. Gibson	J. A. Knapman
A. Mowat	Dr. Cameron
G. L. Hay	W. G. Reid
W. G. Morrow, skip...13	J. H. Ferguson, skip...8

GOING TO ORILLIA.

Four rinks from the Peterborough Curling Club will go to Orillia tomorrow to play the second half of the contest for the Neill-Shepherd Trophy. The first half was played, when the Peterborough bonspiel was on in this city and the Orillia curlers got away with a lead of [illegible] But the Peterborough rinks can be depended on to put up a big struggle and will endeavor to bring the trophy home with them. The skips who will go to Orillia from here will be Messrs. Neill, Morrow, Matthews and Medd.

GOTCH'S UNKNOWN

Many guesses are being hazarded as to the identity of Frank Gotch's unknown, who meets Yankee Rogers in a wrestling bout to a finish Friday night at Riverdale. Gotch has put up a side bet of $100, and the chances are that he will scour the country to get a man to exact revenge on Rogers for his temerity in daring to stay 15 minutes twice with the world's champion here last week.

Free Lumber Barred.

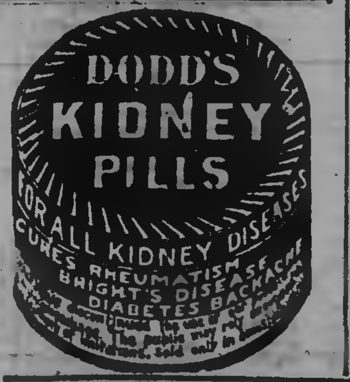
Washington, March 3.—Although the lumbermen had almost given up the fight as lost, an agreement has been reached by the House Ways and Means Committee to fix the duty on rough lumber at $1.50 per thousand. This is a reduction of 50 cents a thousand from the present duty, and while it does not entirely satisfy the lumbermen, it gives them the reasonable assurance that the industry will not be destroyed, as they contended would have been the case had the product been placed on the free list. The reduction of 50 cents a thousand is a concession to the demands which were made for free lumber. The fight over this schedule has been more keen than over any other item in the new bill, not even excepting steel or iron.

Quebec Legislature Meets.

Quebec, March 3.—Yesterday afternoon members of the Provincial Legislature convened for the despatch of business.

Hon. Mr. Turgeon was chosen Speaker for the Council, and Hon. Dr. Pelletier, for Sherbrooke, was elected in the Assembly, his election being moved by Sir Lomer Gouin, seconded by Mr. Langlois.

The speech announced the annexation of Ungava nearing accomplishment, and plans for the establishment of three new Normal schools and two technical schools in the province. A commission into tuberculosis problems was also announced, as well as a campaign for good roads and a re-arrangement of electoral divisions.



CLEANING IS ECONOMY

Often an article of apparel is much better than it looks, and instead of being discarded its usefulness can be prolonged by a thorough cleaning, pressing and repairing. That's the kind we do. Bring the garments or phone us and see. Goods called for and delivered.

ROUTINE BUSINESS BEFORE THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held last night, when routine business was transacted.

Those present were;—Mr. L. M. Hayes in the chair, Messrs. Dumble, Ackerman, Hill, Fair, Nelson, Dr. Morrison and Dr. Burnham.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

A number of petition and communications were received and read.

One was from the School Board of Newmarket wishing the board to have the local board take up certain questions relating to the High School Act with the Legislature.

St. James Sunday school thanked the board for use of King Edward School.—Supervision Committee.

From Mr. Barlow Cumberland, offering a prize of $2 and $1 for competition among the boys of the Collegiate, the competition to be an essay on birds.—Accepted.

The Y.M.C.A. ladies expressed their thanks for the use of the Collegiate for gymnasium exercises.

Principal Kenner reported that only two pupils were absent from the Collegiate Institute on account of scarlet fever.

The question of a charge for the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall was brought up and it was decided that there should be an unwritten fixed charge.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., donated an atlas to the Collegiate Institute. It was accepted with thanks.

A communication was received from Mr. A. Mowat stating that he was this year able to offer six scholarships for entrance pupils instead of two, as in previous years. This encouraged the boys and girls to work harder.

There are two prizes of $5 each and four prizes of $4 each. The conditions will be the same as imposed heretofore.

On motion of Messrs. Fair and Crane the offer was accepted, and the secretary was instructed to convey the thanks of the board to the gentlemen making the offer.

The matter of awarding the Nicholls scholarships for Collegiate Institute pupils was brought up and a communication from the principal was read by Mr. Crane suggesting a better distribution of the prize than that adopted last year. The matter was referred to the Supervision Committee with power to act.

It was moved by Mr. Hill and seconded by Dr. Burnham that the account of the John Smart Manufacturing Company, for the heating plant in the West Ward School be paid.—Carried.

Wingham Baptists have extended a call to W L Steves, of McMaster.

ARE ARRANGING FOR NEW CHURCH

Committee Presented a Report at Knox Church Last Evening

There was a meeting of the office bearers of Knox church last night when the committee which visited several outside places last week for the purpose of securing ideas for their new church, presented their report. The officers are busy with the scheme and hope to have things in shape in a short time to present to the congregation. A meeting of the congregation will be called in a short time when plans will be decided upon. It is understood that the new Knox Presbyterian church will be the largest Protestant church in the south end and will seat something like 800 people.

WITNESS GAVE DOURO VOTER $2

witness said latter would be given protection of the Court if he merited it.

Witness stated old man White wanted $2 to go to vote, and witness gave it to him. He admitted he asked White to vote for Moher. Was asked if he had discussed election with Moher, wouldn't care to say whether he had or didn't. Did not take any one to polls on voting day. O'Brien took old Mr. White to polls.

"What did you give Wm. White, jr.?" asked Mr. McWilliams.

"Nothing of any kind."

In answer to Mr. Peck witness said he did not intend to pay old Mr. White anything until he found he was very unwilling to go to the polls. Had no authority from Mr. Moher to pay any money.

On the one charge about the payment of $3 to Mr. Walsh for acting as scrutineer.

Mr. Peck wanted to call one witness, Augustus Whibbs.

WHAT $3 WAS FOR.

Mr. Whibbs knew Edward Walsh of Douro, and saw him shortly before the last Provincial election for the purpose of getting him to act as scrutineer. He saw Mr. Walsh before the election and asked him to act.

He said he consented and said "I suppose there's a day's pay for it." Mr. Moher and another man interested in the candidature of Mr. Thompson had asked him to try and get Walsh to act as scrutineer. Walsh had asked several times for his money, and Mr. Moher told witness he would pay Walsh but could never sue him. The other man who did with Mr. Moher asked him to get Walsh as a scrutineer for Torpey's schoolhouse was Councillor Edward Walsh, of Douro.

He had no connection with Mr. Thompson with regard to the getting out of the vote in Douro. His Honor asked what the question regarding the payment of this money to Walsh had to do with the case. Mr. McWilliams held that the claim of paying Walsh to act as scrutineer was merely a subterfuge.

"A matter of argument, and not evidence," said Mr. Peck.

Witness said that he had told Walsh he would get a day's pay for acting as scrutineer and losing the day. There was no definite bargain with Walsh as to what he was to be paid and he paid him nothing himself. Told Mr. Thompson nothing of the transaction. Walsh asked for the money at different times.

"Mr. Moher didn't ask you for any money towards paying for Walsh?" asked Mr. McWilliams.

"Not yet," said the witness.

"That's the defence, Your Honor," stated Mr. Peck.

"You're not going to examine your client, are you," asked the court.

"I don't think it's necessary," said Mr. Peck.

Evidence had been adduced that Moher had paid a ratepayer, Martin McManus fifty cents for railway fare to Lakefield and Mr. Peck did not think it was necessary to have any explanation in this respect.

MR. McWILLIAM'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. McWilliams in summing up said that both men had a series of close contests, sometimes won by Mr. Moher and sometimes by Mr. Moloney. In the last election the result was the change of a few votes was to put Mr. Moher in again. At the time of the electoin strenuous supporters of Mr. Moher were actively and energetically striving to put Mr. Moloney out. If a dozen Moloney supporters could have been persuaded to vote for Mr. Moher the result would have been accomplished. The laws against corrupt practises at elections were made to preserve public purity.

"It may seem from the fact that we are able to allege only three or four cases of bribery," said Mr. McWilliams, "that this is only a little thing in an election covering the whole township." Counsel stated it was a most difficult matter to get evidence in an election on charges of bribery, but a simple corrupt vote brought home to a candidate was sufficient to upset him even in a provincial election. This would stand as a good precedent when made applicable to municipal law.

The first charge was that of making a payment of three dollars to one Edward Welsh. Welsh had been a supporter of Mr. Moloney and therefore it was desirable that he should be induced to get his vote for Mr. Moher. Mr. Moher was not under any obligation to pay Mr. Welsh any money. Mr. McWilliams said Welsh had been paid $3, which was more than a day's pay, being two day's pay. His Honor remarked he couldn't assume that, however. Moher lived only a mile and a half from Welsh, and he had seven months to pay up that little debt. When Welsh asked Whibbs for his pay, he said he hadn't seen Mr. Thompson, and so got no money from him. Mr. McWilliams said the payment was absolutely illegal, as the legislature had provided that no payment could be made by or on behalf of the candidate before or after the election, except through his agent. Counsel quoted from statues to establish this argument as this point. The legislature have tied the candidate up by requiring to make no payments except through his regularly appointed financial agent. It was submitted that under the sections of provincial act that it was illegal to make the payment, which by the law in respect to them were made absolutely void.

After seven months had elapsed Mr. Moher canvassed Welsh to vote for him and not for Moloney, as in the previous election.

"What we are concerned about," said Mr. McWilliams, "is to find what was Mr. Moher's intention in paying this money."

It did not seem possible that Mr. Moher had any purpose in paying up that void obligation, but for the reason of influencing the man he paid it to to vote for him. The facts were very simple and it was a question of Mr. Moher's intent. He hadn't explained why he made that payment and hadn't relieved himself of suspicion by giving evidence on his behalf.

The second charge was one of paying William White, sr., the sum of $2. That this sum was paid was proved by the evidence offered by Mr. Welsh. He frankly stated he had paid the money and the question was to ascertain Mr. Moher's liability in connection with the payment. Welsh was openly a supporter of Mr. Moher and had conversed with him on the subject of the election and it would require a great stretch of imagination to come to the conclusion that in these conversations individuals had not been mentioned. There were no organized committees for the election and under the circumstances Welsh in his payment was strictly an agent of Moher. Maurice O'Brien and James Welsh, the former an agent of Mr. Moher, went to the White residence for the purpose of getting the Whites to vote for Moher.

Mr. McWilliams argued that the court had jurisdiction to admit the charge of Moher illegally paying McManus fifty cents for railway fare. This phase of the case had cropped up in an endeavor to prove the charge that McManus had been assisted to go to the poll and Mr. McWilliams urged that the court should deal with the amendment to the original charge. If it was an offence the defendant was clearly guilty of that offence.

The particular section of the act reads that a man hiring a conveyance or vehicle of any kind to take a voter to the polls is guilty of bribery. His Honor questioned if the paying of Moher's railway fare was an offence under the section, Mr. McWilliams said that it was an offence under the section referring to inducing a voter to go to a polling place. McManus was no good in Peterborough, where he couldn't vote and his railway fare had been paid from Peterborough to Lakefield.

The court adjourned until 2.30 in the afternoon.

LATER.

Two charges as embodied in the affidavit were thrown out and judgment was reserved in the other.

THIS CASE WAS SETTLED AT SUGGESTION FROM JUDGE

A case that was by no means one of great interest to the casual spectator was the one of assault in which the charges were laid against Jason Roe and John McArthur of Belmont. The case came up before His Honor Judge Weller and the defendants who were under bail bonds were committed for trial at Havelock by County Police Magistrate Edmison. They were charged with having assaulted Wm Griffiths in Havelock on Jan 14. The case occupied several hours of the courts attention and when Roe was giving evidence on his own behalf yesterday afternoon, His Honor asked if the case could not be settled out of court.

Those interested in the case then retired to an ante room and an amiable adjustment was arrived at.

County Crown Attorney R E Wood appeared for the Crown, Mr George Sherry of Norwood for the private prosecutor and Mr G W Hatton for the two defendants.

THE LEVEL CROSSINGS BILL GETS ITS SECOND READING

Is Now at Mercy of the Senators.

Sir Richard Cartwright Moves That it be Sent to Railway Committee.

Ottawa, March 4.—The Lancaster level crossings' bill was given its second reading in the Senate yesterday and sent on to the Railway Committee.

Senator Ellis had charge of the bill, and when the second reading was carried he moved that it be considered in committee of the whole next Tuesday. Sir Richard Cartwright, however, moved that the bill be sent to the Railway Committee. This carried by 40 to 15, and the bill now goes over to the tender mercies of the committee.

After the Senate had heard the arguments of Senator Ellis for the passage of the bill, Hon. Mr. McMullen informed his colleagues that the railroad companies had the greatest regard for human life, and had gone to great expense to promote the safety of the public. He thought this bill should be delayed until the Minister of Railways had brought down his bill.

Senator Ferguson favored the Lancaster bill. The C.P.R. had 45 per cent. of its level crossings protected, and had no level crossing accidents last year; the Grand Trunk had only 3 per cent. of its grade crossing protected, and had eighteen killed and thirty-eight injured.

Senator Beique, who was for the bill, wanted to put the Senate right. There was a popular opinion that the Senate killed this bill last year. It had not done so; instead, it had merely attempted to improve the bill from the Commons and make it effective. Before the final stage was reached, he would move that this bill and the bill as amended by the Senate last session be sent for opinion as to their effect to the Department of Justice, or to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Sir Richard Cartwright was strongly in favor of the bill. Over and over again disastrous accidents had occurred at crossings, and the railway companies had taken no steps to protect the public. He thought the bill had been rather rushed through the Commons owing to the unfortunate accidents which had occurred within a very short space of time. The bill as worded might be the means of subjecting, not merely the railways, but the whole public to very great inconvenience and difficulty in carrying on the business of the country.

Senator Gibson, while strongly favoring the proper protection of crossings by railways, thought there should not be undue haste in dealing with this bill, and he did not know that it would be for the benefit of the public to press the railroads beyond reason.

Senator Dundurand said that last year the Senate had given a great deal of time and study to this bill, to which the Commons appeared to have given little attention and to have neglected to even look into what the Senate had done in regard to improving this bill. If the Commons failed to give this bill attention, that was no reason for the Senate neglecting it. He favored the principle, he favored protection of crossings, and he proposed to vote for the second reading and thought the bill should go to the Railway Committee.

This, the last Wednesday for private members, was given over to a discussion on experimental farms. Nearly a score of members talked long and more or less relevantly in French and English, and it ended up in a prolonged speech by Hon. Sydney Fisher, who accepted the resolution and expressed satisfaction that it had been presented. As nobody objected to the proposal that more experimental farms be established, the afternoon was one of peace, and those who had nothing to say dozed in their chairs.

An anti-cigarette law, prohibiting the manufacture, sale or gift of cigarettes and cigarette papers within the state, has been passed by the Legislature of Minnesota.

It is stated that a number of Hamilton people are implicated in the case of William Riley, arrested in Buffalo on the charge of smuggling Chinamen from Canada into the U.S.

A burying ground with forty-one nameless graves of victims of railway construction on the shores of Good Lake, near the point of intersection of the Lake Superior branch and the main line of the transcontinental is reported.

SOME FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS IN THE HAMILTON MURDER

Toronto, March 4.—There were several developments of interest in the Kinrade murder mystery yesterday.

Despatches from Virginia tell of Miss Florence Kinrade having appeared on the stage of the Orpheum Theatre at Portsmouth, with the stage name of "Mildred Dale"; that she was on friendly terms with a young actor mechanic by the name of James Gordon Baum. Reports there have it that she was engaged to him, but that within the past two or three weeks she broke the engagement because of her affections for C. N. Wright, the Victoria divinity student, and that her mother wrote Baum, asking him to cease corresponding. Miss Kinrade is highly spoken of by her acquaintances in the south, and Baum is also given a good reputation. He professed, yesterday, to having learned for the first time of the tragedy of last week.

Mr. Kinrade declined yesterday to allow any one to interview Miss Kinrade, but stated that he was aware that she had been on the stage.

"My daughter had a position singing in the Manchester Presbyterian Church, Richmond, Va., said Mr. Kinrade. "She was a good musician, and was always fond of music. One night she was sitting at the window playing and the manager of an amateur theatrical company, heard her. He offered her $20 a week to come and sing a couple of songs. As her duties in the church choir were not onerous, she was pleased with the opportunity of supplementing her income of $6 or $7 a week, which was paid by the church.

"We were fully informed of what she was doing, and acquiesced. There happened to be some people she knew in the amateur company, which made her work all the more agreeable.

"I consider that the report of my daughter's attachment to a southerner absolutely without foundation. She may have had some friends down there, and perhaps some of them were attracted by her. But she is, and has been engaged to a student, with whom she has been in constant correspondence."

The inquest was opened last evening in Hamilton and adjourned for a week, after some jurymen had expressed dissatisfaction that the crown attorney had allowed the Kinrades to leave the city at this time.

Ernest Sone, Hamilton Street Railway conductor, says that when he passed the Kinrade home on his car at 3.15 p. m., he saw Miss Florence running across the street to give the alarm. This fixes the time of the shooting as being earlier than was first supposed, and shows that the police were not on the scene immediately after the murder, as they thought.

JUDGMENT PENDING ON ONE CHARGE

Judge Weller Threw Out Two Charges in Douro Protest Case—Mr. Peck Addresses Court for Defendant—Argument on Third Charge on Friday.

The result of the protest of Dennis Moloney, candidate for reeve in the last municipal elections in the township of Douro against Reeve Frank Moher hangs in the balance. His Honor Judge Weller threw out two of the charges against Mr. Moher, and reserved judgment on a third.

Argument by counsel for both the relator and defendant will be heard by his Honor Judge Weller on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

At the afternoon session Mr. E. A. Peck presented his argument on behalf of Mr. Moher and his Honor then took up the charges, giving his rulings as mentioned above.

HELD GROUNDS TOO TRIVIAL

"I will not have to trouble your Honor with any extended observations," said Mr. Peck, in commencing his address.

He stated that counsel for defence had intimated that a candidate in an election should be closely watched and his actions carefully observed. That would not be British fair play, Mr. Peck stated. As in an ordinary charge all the evidence should be directly stated, and there should be no presumption. After eight weeks three charges of an insufficient character to upset the election had been made.,

The first charge was that of the payment of $3 to Edward Walsh. Counsel for relator had said that this was an illegal payment. He disputed that view. It was not one of those payments which the act contemplates should be made through an official agent. There was a moral obligation cast upon Moher to make the payment. Moher was one of the prime movers in getting Edward Walsh retained to act as scrutineer for Mr. Thompson at the time of the Provincial elections, and was under obligation to pay it.

The fact of allowing the debt to run for seven months was dwelt upon by Mr. Moloney's counsel, but, as was explained by witnesses, the two did not happen to meet sooner. No attempt was made to conceal the payment in any way whatever. No reference was made to the election until after the payment had been made.

It is fair to assume that Mr. Moher, in making that payment, was meeting an obligation for which he was morally liable.

The second charge was that Maurice O'Brien and James Walsh—Michael Walsh it read in charge—had paid the elder Wm. White $2 for the purpose of influencing him to vote for Moher. Walsh was not an agent of Mr. Moher and paid old Mr. White without any

VISITORS THRONG CAPITAL READY FOR THE INAUGURAL

Inauguration Parade at Washington Consists of Fifty Thousand Men, Including the Governors of 14 States and Their Personal Staffs.

Washington, March 4.—A vast army of people last night tramped the streets of the national capital in a downpour of rain in eager expectancy of the nation's greatest of all pageants, the Presidential inauguration. The spirit of celebration is supreme and everything is in complete readiness for the great quardrennial event.

Mr. Taft will be the 27th President of the United States. He will be the fifth President to be elected from Ohio and the sixth President produced from that state.

The rush of visitors from all parts of the country continued unabated yesterday and the city is in the usual preinaugural state of congestion. It is estimated that fully 200,000 people are already here. Trains from all points are being run at intervals of a few minutes, in order to accommodate the crowds, and railroad officials estimate that upwards of 60,000 persons arrived here yesterday by rail up to midnight.

The latest estimate of the number of men who will march is placed at 50,000, not the least of which will be the governors of fourteen states, each accompanied by his staff.

Having encircled the globe with the battleship fleet, 3,000 bluejackets are here to take part in the parade.

Men who have been 50 years in the White House have no recollection of scenes such as marked the last day of President Roosevelt's administration. They declared it was unprecedented in the number of persons who called to exchange farewell words with the retiring chief executive. Although no exact count of the number of visitors was kept, it is estimated that between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. there were at least 2,500 of them.

MAN AND WOMAN CHARGED WITH STEALING MONEY ARE SENT UP FOR TRIAL

At an afternoon session of the police court yesterday John Southern and Susan Phillips were charged with having stolen $130, the property of John Hendley, of Spokane, on the night of February 22nd, The particulars of the affair as as follows.

The three engaged a horse and cutter from a local livery and set out to attend a dance at Burleigh. While making the journey it is said considerable liquor was disposed of and by the time the party reached Lakefield all three were considerably under the weather from the effects of the hard stuff.

The complainant did not have a very clear recollection of what exactly happened, only that his bank roll had disappeared and this led to his accusing the prisoners of the theft.

No evidence was taken and the accused were sent up for trial at the next criminal sessions in June.

The prisoners were released on a cash bail of $500.

Mr G. N. Gordon appeared for Southern.

IS STRANDED AT SHANGHAI

Ottawa, March 4.—It is rumored that Mackenzie King, M.P., who went to China in January to represent the Government of Canada at the opium conference, is stranded in Shanghai without the necessary money to pay his hotel bill and pay his passage home.

Before he left Ottawa he drew sufficient money to take him to China, expecting that he would be able to draw on the Finance Department for his return fare. The other day when the conference was concluded he wired for money, but, as there has been no appropriation for the trip, the auditor-general refused to endorse the expenditure, and Mr. Mackenzie King has been forced to rely on his own resources to get back home.

The cost of his trip will, however, be provided for in the supplementary estimates.

MR. COCHRANE INVESTIGATING

Mr. George Cochrane went to Havelock to-day to look into a case of neglected children. They will likely be brought up to-night and the case will come up before County Magistrate Edmison.

CAUGHT STEALING CUTS HIS THROAT

London, March 4.—A man giving the name of Dr. R. Pullman of Chicago, committed suicide at the Savoy Hotel by cutting his throat with a razor when he was discovered attempting to leave the premises with $10,000 in jewelry that had been sent in to him. He had only $3.75 in his pocket and his only baggage was a valise filled with newspapers. He was about 35 years old.

The jewelers' assistant, who took the goods to the hotel, became suspicious when Pullman passed from the room where they were talking into an adjoining room. He promptly grappled with Pullman, whereupon the would-be thief drew a razor and cut his throat. The assistant went to get help and when he returned Pullman had managed to climb through a window and was descending a fire escape. At the bottom, however, he fell dead.

HON. MR. FOY'S LAW REFORM BILL HAS BEEN INTRODUCED

Some Sweeping Changes Are Proposed.

Some of the Things it is Proposed to Abolish—Amendment to Pharmacy Act.

Toronto, March 4.—The Government's long-expected measure of law reform was introduced into the Legislature yesterday by Attorney-General Foy, who moved the first reading of "An Act for the better administration of justice, to lessen the number of appeals and the cost of litigation, and for other purposes." Hon. Mr. Foy explained that the bill was not printed for distribution to the members, and he merely moved the first reading in order that it might go to the printer and be placed in the hands of the members without further delay.

The bill has four main features: The abolition of appeals to the present Divisional Court; the limitation of appeals to the Privy Council; the increase of the jurisdiction of county and district courts, and the rendering permissible of contracts between solicitors and clients.

All division and divisional courts of the high court of justice are abolished, and two branches of the supreme court of judicature are to be established, to be known respectively as the appellate court of the supreme court and high court division. The court of appeal will be known as the appellate division of the supreme court of Ontario, and the bill states that this division shall not be deemed to be a new court, but only a continuation of the old court of appeal. The high court division will be similarly regarded as a continuation of the old or existing high court. All the jurisdiction power and authority of the old court is vested in the new appellate division. It is also provided that there shall be as many divisions of the appellate court as are necessary for the despatch of business. Neither the chief justice of Ontario, nor any of the present judges of the court of appeal shall, without their consent, be required to perform any duties except sitting on appeals.

Appeals may be heard and disposed of by a court of four judges, except in cases of controverted elections and criminal appeals. Appeal by right to the Privy Council is abolished and leave to appeal granted by His Majesty is also abolished except where some constitutional matter is concerned, or where the matter in controversy exceeds $10,000 in value exclusive of costs, and where the questions involved affect rights or interests of such magnitude or importance as to warrant an appeal—and the divisional court so certifies, and where the liberty of the subject is involved. In other words, the amount upon which an appeal can be taken is increased from $4,000 to $10,000.

An important feature of the bill is that relating to contracts between solicitor and client. A solicitor may make an agreement in writing with a client in respect of the amount to be paid him for his service, either in a gross sum or as a salary, but where the agreement is made in respect of business done in any court, except the division court, the amount payable shall not be received by the solicitor until it has been allowed by the taxing officer. If the taxing officer thinks the agreement unfair, he may require the opinion of the court or judge to be taken upon. In such cases the court or judge may reduce the amount to be paid under the agreement or order the costs to be taxed in the old way.

A solicitor will not be allowed to contract himself out of non-liability for negligence or improper conduct of litigation.

A solicitor, under the bill, cannot purchase any interest or part of his client in any action or other contentious proceeding. The object of this clause is to prevent cases being taken purely on speculation. Security may

Excitement in Lindsay Over an Assault on Chief of Police Shortt

There was a lot of excitement in Lindsay this morning when it was learned that Police Constable Shortt had been assaulted while on duty last night on the main street of the town. There are a large number of different rumors going around but the guilty parties have not been arrested yet and the policeman is in a precarious condition at the hospital and is unable to give any satisfactory information as to how the assault happened.

A FARMERS WIFE HEARD THE SHOTS

Was Passing Kinrade Home at Three O'Clock -- Police Not Notified Till 4.30 O'Clock

Special to the Review.

Hamilton, March 4— A report reached here today that a farmer's wife driving past the Kinrade home on Thursday afternoon last heard three shots fired in the house. The unusual sounds attracted her attention but she passed on. The peculiar thing about this statement is that the time was three o'clock while the police were not notified of the shooting until four o'clock.

The report corroborates Motorman Stone's statement.

Provincial Detective Miller returned from Toronto today and resumed work on this most mysterious case.

WEST PETERBORO' ELECTION PROTEST

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, it is said, by the Montreal Star and Ottawa papers, is to be rendered on Monday next, in the West Peterborough election protest. The giving out of the judgment is said by these papers to have been postponed from Wednesday of this week to that date by reason of the swearing-in of the new judge, Hon. F A. Anglin, on Wednesday.

TO TRY CASE AT NORWOOD

County Magistrate Edmison will go to Norwood tomorrow morning where he will try an assault case. Soleman Clarke is the complainant and Geo. Whetley is the defendant. Clarke charges Wheetley with using insulting and abusive language.

PRESENTATION AT LINDSAY TO REV. FATHER COLLINS

Lindsay, March 3.—A special meeting of the C.L.S. was held on Monday evening for the purpose of presenting a suitable token of esteem to Rev. Father Collins, who has taken a very deep interest in the society during the two years he has been in Lindsay.

It was decided that the managing committee on behalf of the members, present him with a purse of gold, and yesterday afternoon President Mr. Peter Kennedy and Messrs. Jos. Killen, Parnell McHugh and Basil Kingsley, made the presentation to Rev. Father Collins at his residence.

They all spoke briefly of their regret at his departure from town and wished him every success in his new home.

Rev. Father Collins was completely taken by surprise and in a few words thanked the members for their kind remembrance, and also that he regretted his removal from Lindsay very much.

Father Collins will be greatly missed by the C.L.S., as he at all times took a deep interest in the affairs of the society, and it is due chiefly to his good work that the society is a flourishing institution. Rev. Father Collins left this morning for his new home in Gananoque, and carries with him the good wishes of his many friends in Lindsay and vicinity.

A MUCH MARRIED PAIR AT PICTON

Picton Ont., March 3.—A wedding of unusual interest was celebrated in St. Andrew's church this afternoon when Mrs. Skinner was married to Mr. Stewart Brown. The bridegroom, who is 81, has been twice previously married and Mrs. Skinner is over 70 years of age. It is understood that by her marriage she forfeits some of her income according to the will of her former husband. She is wealthy, however, and so is Mr. Brown.

THE CLOVEN HOOF

Much violent language is used by the Toronto Globe today in repudiating the Mail and Empire's interpretation of a recent Globe editorial on the subject of Canadian national independence. The Mail and Empire construed that editorial to be an expression of opinion in favor of Canada's ultimate separation from the empire. Against this construction the Globe protests and accuses its esteemed contemporary of mendacity, wilful misrepresentation, dishonesty and other objectionable qualities and misdemeanors.

Our sympathy is with the Mail and Empire, because the Herald put the same interpretation upon the Globe article that the Mail and Empire did and this journal certainly did not intend to misrepresent the Globe's attitude. Here is a paragraph from the article, which, the Globe says, has been misinterpreted;

> The direction and progress of national evolution thus indicated may be too fast for some and not fast enough for others, but there need be no mistake about either, the fact of our progress or its direction. The answer to those who are impatient for "independence" is that our direction is that way, but that it is on the whole better that it should be so slow as to attract little attention and to cause no irritation.

Surely a reasonable and fair interpretation of that paragraph is that Canadian national evolution is in the direction of complete political independence, which of course, involves separation from the empire. If complete independence is not the goal indicated by the Globe, why should it be considered desirable that the evolutionary process be so slow as to attract little attention and to cause no irritation! Very few people either in Canada or Britain object to the largest possible measure of autonomy for Canada which is compatible with the imperial connection. If the goal to be obtained is not outside the empire the admonition to "go slow" in order to avoid irritation is meaningless.

Really, it looks as though the Globe had been seized with an attack of "cold feet," like those from which it suffered during the dying days of the Ross administration when it would occasionally print a bold and scathing "barnacles" article, and then spend several days in diluting its meaning and explaining it away.

There is nothing to be ashamed of in the advocacy of Canadian independence. No less a Canadian than Sir Wilfrid Laurier once upon a time publicly declared that national independence is Canada's destiny — that our country will in the fulness of time "drop like fruit from the parent tree," or words to that effect. Although the Herald believes that Canada can find full scope for all her national aspirations within the family of nations constituting the British empire, we can respect the man or the newspaper that favors complete national independence. But who can respect a man or newspaper that shouts for complete independence and then gets scared and runs away! Maybe it would be unjust to the Globe to say that this is what it has done; if so, the Globe, would do well to make its expressions of opinion less capable of more than one interpretation. — The Hamilton Herald.

CALM AND CLEAR

We have been requested to publish the following able editorial appearing in the Toronto World of Wednesday, March 3rd, and we do so with pleasure. It may be said to be a fair and reasonable presentation of an old-time Methodist's view of the present Carman-Jackson trouble. It will give comfort to many:

"In these days of doubt, dissension and plutocratic disorder, The World desires to put in a word for the old gospel, the old religion and the old standards now assailed in this city by the gentlemen who resent the criticism of the venerable Dr. Carman. When we take this position we recall the old circuit riders of our boyhood, the powerful ministrations, the fervent preachings of men like Egerton Ryerson, Samuel S. Nelles, Enoch Wood, Samuel D. Rice, John Carroll, John Wilkinson, Anson Green, Lachlin Taylor, and the other Wesleyan fathers of the Methodist church. We remember their fervor in the old wooden churches, in the old township meeting-houses, in the camp-meeting exercises, the revivals, the protracted meetings, times and places when men were a power unto righteousness. They founded the Methodist church here in the wilds of Canada because they believed in it and its doctrines, because in it there was for them and their followers salvation, because in its bosom were morality for the community and regeneration for all men who were not afraid to confess their sins and who sought a change of heart.

"Dr. Carman belongs to this noble past, and as long as he stands where he is with these old fathers he is on sure ground.

"It is so easy to assail the old religion and the old standards, the old doctrines and the old rules of life! Much as we respect J. W. Flavelle, Chester Massey, A. E. Kemp and the others who have rushed upon the old patriarch, still we must say that these men seem to us to be striving for something new, seem to be trying to destroy the old standards, and the old theology, trying to substitute the uncertain for the certain, something of a more modern day and something more mollifying to their conscience. They would put an extinguisher on the Bad Place if they could. Why?

"The Methodist church was not made for rich men, but for simple men and for men who believe in a personal Saviour and, who, contrariwise, fear a personal devil and an actual hell; and when men cannot accept these standards and these doctrines, and to disquiet the minds of thousands instead of trying to disrupt the church and thousands of plain men and women, rather is it their duty to withdraw from the communion and to seek other tabernacles where there is more room for diversity. We see an Anglican bishop in his sleeves of lawn beckoning to them.

"There are men who think, and apparently these men think that you can destroy the old edifice pulling it down brick by brick, and out of the old bricks build a new edifice on a new plan. They knew that if you pulled out one brick the whole structure must fall, and that chaos and destruction would come in its place if such were to be allowed.

The ordinary every day man wants some kind of standard that is perpetual, certain, infallible, pontifical, to which he can line up himself and can line up the conduct of every man or woman like himself. The efficacy of religion, according to this view and according to ours is altogether dependant on its certainty and on the power exercised by it over ordinary men which in consequence compels them to adjust themselves to the standards that have been erected and have been consecrated by time-honored tradition.

Those who would break down what are called heathen beliefs are just as far astray as are men who have gone back on the doctrines of John Wesley. There must be religion; there must be a moral standard by which men may judge themselves and whether it be the doctries of Confucius or the philosophy of the Greeks or the sacred writings of the Hindus they must be respected because the men who live under these doctrines have no other rule of life than that with which they are surrounded; and there can be no religious life in this or any country unless men respect the standards that they have inherited and live up to them.

Some of the men who are breaking away from the old Methodist standards may be able themselves to hold their feet because they were once upon the rock, but those who grow up after them, whose feet have never touched the rock, will in all probability fall into a quagmire from which there is no escape.

The Methodist church is the Methodist church of John Wesley in England and of Egerton Ryerson and S. S. Nelles in Canada, or it is nothing. It can't be refined and carpeted and turned into a modernized system of platitudes. It must have all its old fervor and standards. Its old beliefs, its old rewards, its old punishments and perpetual torments for those who fail to attain salvation.

Dr. Carman is on the rock where he stands; his language may be strong, but his convictions and his footing are sure and he still speaks for the ordinary, everyday Methodist people who live in this country of Canada; people of the little churches and the little meeting-houses that are scattered all over the side lines and in the villages and in the ordinary towns of our country. These people knew where they are and they are satisfied with the ancient standards. Why should these men, who are so high in wordly matters and have achieved such eminence in business leadership, why should they seek to undermine, to break down and to discourage the poor and the ordinary? The wrong they do is the doubt which they cause to arise in many a man and many a woman who heretofore has had a peaceful mind and a peaceful outlook as to the future.

We trust that The Christian Guardian is still with the old standards and the old foundations; restless mortals like the editor of the Globe and Joseph Atkinson of the Star may side with the Flavelles and the Kemps and the Masseys, and those who would remake John Wesley and recast Egerton Ryerson; but the Guardian can only be true to itself and its past when it is true to the circuit riders and the old fathers of the old connexion.

The old religion had its terrors but it had its comforts and its consolations; the new one has neither the one nor the other.

Wherefore the Old Doctor may have been somewhat peremptory in tone, somewhat lacking in graciousness of approach, even narrow some ways; yet his feet were on the rock and on the Book of Discipline. And when the Chief Pastor is so founded he must be pontifical to be effective. But his three critics are neither Shadrach, Meshach nor Abednego."

CHAPTER XVI.

DROOM'S intentions were clear. It was not a tender heart nor was it chivalry which prompted him to do the deed of valor just described. He had started out to do his duty by James Bansemer because he was in his hire, and he felt it still his duty to cover the tracks of his master as best he could. He knew that he was jeopardizing his own safety. The obstinate cunning of his nature insisted that the man he had watched was Bansemer, although his brief glimpse of the fugitive's face discouraged that belief.

The gaunt clerk kept his chin well covered with his great muffler; the broad collar of his ulster was turned up about his face. The rapid plan that dashed into his mind comprehended but two things, the effort to restore life to Frances Cable and the hope of escaping without being recognized. He felt that she had not been in the water long enough to drown. Every hope depended upon the force of the blow that he imagined had been delivered.

Chilled to the bone, his teeth chattering like castanets, the old man was stooping over the inanimate form on the ground when the two men came up. In answer to their startled questions he merely said that he had seen the struggle from across the street, but had been too late to prevent the tragedy.

"We must get her into one of these houses quick," he grunted. "Take hold of her, you. And you over there, hurry and ring a doorbell. Get inside and phone for a doctor—a doctor first and then the police. We may be able to save her life."

Chilled to the bone, his teeth chattering.

The first of the rich men's homes denied them admission. The man of the house said he would not "stand for the notoriety." Droom, supporting the head of the wet, icy figure, made a remark which the man was never to forget. At the second house they were admitted.

In an instant all was confusion. A card game was broken up, and guests of the house assisted their host and hostess in doing all manner of unnecessary things. Droom gave the commands which sooner or later resolved themselves into excited, wrathy demands upon the telephone operator, calls for a certain nearby doctor, calls for the police, calls for stimulants, maids, hot water bottles—everything.

"She's been robbed," said one of the men. "Her rings have been torn off. Look at the blood!"

"She's well dressed, too," said another. "Say, her face looks familiar"—

To the amazement of every one, the lips of the woman parted and a gasping, choking sound issued from between them, a slight shudder swept over her frame.

The men stood grouped in the hallway while the women tore the wet garments from the reviving victim and prepared a warm bed for her. Elias Droom was edging toward the door, bent on escape, when the awed, chattering voice of the young fellow who had assisted in carrying her to the house arrested him. A great sense of relief crept over him as he listened to the young man's story; his eyes blinked with satisfaction. He was forgetting his own remark of a minute ago that he was freezing and must get into some dry clothes at once. The young man was saying:

"It happened right out there by the sea wall—where the big break is. Harry and I were coming up the Drive, and I called attention to a man running south along the wall. Just then this gentleman ran over from this side of the street, and a minute or two later we saw him jump into the break over there. Suicide, I thought, but he wasn't a minute coming up. There was the woman! He'd pulled her out! By thunder, it was the bravest thing I ever saw! He'—

And then it was that everybody began to shower praise upon the man who only had tried to do his duty by the one who hired him to do ugly, not gallant, deeds.

"Did you watch which way the robber ran?" demanded Droom eagerly.

"Lost him in the dark. He ran like fury. You must have scared him off," said the second young man. "I wish we could have seen his face. Did you see it?"

"Not distinctly," answered Droom. "He struck me as being a slim young fellow, that's all." Of one thing he was assured—the evidence of these two men would prove that he had acted as a valiant protector and not as a thug, a fear which had not left his mind until now. They had seen the fleeing assailant, but there was only one person who could identify him. That person was Frances Cable, the victim. If it was not James Bansemer, then who could it have been?

The door opened, and an agitated young woman came out.

"It is Mrs. Cable!" she cried in trembling tones.

The physician arrived at that moment, and a few minutes later came an officer who had been hailed from the doorway. While the policeman was listening to the voluble young eyewitnesses Droom stood aloof, puzzling himself vainly in the effort to solve an inside mystery. He had been ready a few minutes before to curse himself for pulling the woman out of the water, but now as the belief grew stronger within him that her assailant was not James Bansemer his viewpoint changed. If such was the case there would be no need to fear Mrs. Cable's story if she revived sufficiently to tell it. On the other hand, if it was Bansemer, he had rescued her to an ill purpose. He was conscious finally that some one was speaking to him.

"What do you know of this?" demanded the policeman. Droom repeated his brief story. "What is your name and where do you live?"

"My name is Elias Droom, and I live over in Wells street."

"Could you identify the man?"

"I don't think so."

"What were you doing over in this part of town?"

"Walking up to see the skaters on the park lagoon. But what's that got to do with it? You'd better be out looking for the thief instead of wasting time on me here," snarled Droom. The officer gasped, and there is no telling what might have happened if the captain and a swarm of bluecoats had not appeared on the scene at that moment. Two minutes later they were off scouring the lake front in search of the mysterious holdup man. Two plain clothes men remained to question the witnesses and to inspect the neighborhood in which the crime was committed.

Word came from the inner room that Mrs. Cable was regaining consciousness.

"Does—can she throw any light on the affair?" asked Elias Droom.

"She has uttered no word except her husband's name. I think she is still calling upon him for help, poor thing," said the young woman who bore the news.

"Cable ought to be notified," said one of the men.

NEED NO LONGER FEAR THE KNIFE

Gravel Easily and Naturally Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Joseph Pelrine Who Suffered the Tortures of This Terrible Complaint for Nine Months Tells How the Old Reliable Kidney Remedy Cured Him.

Port Felix, East, Guysboro County, N.S., March 3—Special—That you need no longer fear the knife if troubled with gravel or other urinary troubles is the glad news that Joseph Pelrine, a well-known young fisherman here is telling his friends.

"I suffered intense pain from gravel and other urinary troubles for nine months," Mr Pelrine says; "But seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely. I heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any-one who is suffering from gravel or urinary troubles."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure gravel by curing the kidneys. The urinary organs are entirely dependent on the kidneys. If the kidneys are not in good working order they cannot filter out the uric acid and it combines with other products of the body and causes gravel. Healthy kidneys dissolve the stones and they pass off in the urine. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure gravel.

Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I decidedly endorse the view expressed by you regarding Mr Mason's action re Rev Mr Jackson's sermon.

The Christian world will do well to cling to the old Bible which in all ages has been the confidence of Saints and heroes. Far better would it be if all ministers strive to confirm and strengthen belief in God's word, for in this doubting age we must see to it that our faith stands in "in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."

Mrs. R. C. Small, of Ottawa, certainly ought to know a lot about Rheumatism. Goodness knows, she suffered long enough. For years, she was almost a cripple and at times, the pain was so severe that she was compelled to lie helpless in bed.

"About a year ago," writes Mrs. Small, "I saw Fruit-a-tives advertised and decided to try them for my Rheumatism. After I had taken two boxes, I was much better. I took six boxes in all — have had no pain for over six months—and feel that I am completely cured. I have gained over ten pounds in weight and am strong and well."

And yet there are some people suffering with Rheumatism, who have not given "Fruit-a-tives" a fair trial. Perhaps they don't want to get well.

"Fruit-a-tives" are a positive cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia and all troubles arising from impure blood.

BABY BURNED IN FOREST FIRES.

THROUGHOUT Canada the terrible forest fires, which raged last summer, carried great sorrow and suffering. Hundreds of people lost all they possessed, and not a few, still more unfortunate, lost their lives. Scores of people, running for dear life from the all-devouring flames, had their clothes burned, their limbs scorched, and sustained bruises more or less serious from the falling and burning timber. Zam-Buk in hundreds of cases eased the pain of severe burns, cuts, lacerations, &c.

Mrs. E. A. Simmonds, who now resides at 131, Niagara Street, Victoria, B.C., writes as follows:—"I am sending you an unsolicited testimonial, because I want people to know how wonderful a healer of burns is your great salve, Zam-Buk. We were in the great fire which destroyed Fernie on August 1st last year, and were fighting the flames from three o'clock in the afternoon until eleven o'clock at night. When we had to rush from the house, I made up a small parcel of necessities, and included a box of Zam-Buk. I then wrapped my baby up well, and put a cap on. In rushing past the flames, however, the netting caught fire, and I had to tear it off and throw it away. Just as we were nearing safety, a branch from a burning tree fell down upon us. It fell, all blazing and hissing, right across my baby's forehead; and I feared the little thing was killed. I rushed on, however, and we got down to the riverside. We sat on some stones in the middle of the river until four o'clock in the morning. I got out my tin of Zam-Buk and bandaged the baby's forehead, which was very badly burned and cut. The balm soothed the injury, and after a time enabled her to get a little sleep. When daylight came, we were able to walk several miles to Elko, and then on to Cranbrook, where we got food, and I could renew the Zam-Buk dressing on my baby's forehead.

"Not only did the Zam-Buk prove useful for baby, but for myself and several others who had sustained serious burns. It eased pain in a truly wonderful way, and we got more good from it than I would have thought possible. I may say that it has now healed my child's burn and cut completely; and what I am particularly thankful for is that, although the injury was so serious, Zam-Buk has healed it in such a way that no scarring is left. Our own burns are also healed.

"There are not many women who are burned in forest fires, but there are scores who sustain burns in their own houses, and I want all to know how they can get ease and cure for such burns, however serious, by using Zam-Buk."

WHAT MOTHERS SAY OF ZAM-BUK.

MRS. B. SWITZER, of Wetaskiwin (Alta.), says:—"Zam-Buk is the handiest balm possible for a woman to have in the house. It cures, in fine form, cuts, bruises, burns, and cold-sores. I have tried it for all these, and in every case it cured rapidly. I always keep it handy, and use it in emergencies. It is such an effective remedy that I would advise all women to keep it in the house."

Hundreds of mothers have expressed similar sentiments. Keep a box of this soothing first-aid in the handiest place. The kettle may boil over or lurch from the stove any moment, and there is daily risk of similar mishaps to men, women, and children alike. "A burnt child dreads the fire"—but if mother has applied Zam-Buk, it loves this pure healing balm ever afterwards.

The great advantages of Zam-Buk are its remarkable purity, and the fact of its being so readily absorbed by the skin. In Zam-Buk there are no rancid animal fats or mineral poisons to clog the pores and irritate a delicate skin. It contains only the pure rich balsams of the most healing plants, and these balsams are so refined that the skin absorbs them at once, and is immediately stimulated into healthy activity. Zam-Buk is the ideal healer for all diseased, irritated, and injured conditions of the skin.

Yonkers Homeopathic and Maternity Hospitals gets $450,000; for the establishment of a trade school, $240,000; Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, $50,000; and $50,000 to the Yonkers Public Library.

Want Magistrate Removed.

Montreal, March 4.—There is every probability that a large and strong deputation representing all religious denominations will shortly go to Quebec to demand the impeachment of Recorder Dupuis, on account of his attitude toward the regulation of houses of ill-fame.

Died In Dental Chair.

Ottawa, March 4.—Mrs. Louis Manville of 70 Clegg street went to the office of Dr. D. H. Baird yesterday morning to have some teeth extracted. She was given ether and died in the dental chair. She was of a highly nervous temperament.

Will Banquet Mr. Borden.

Ottawa, March 4.—To-night in the Parliamentary restaurant the Conservative members of both Houses will tender a banquet to R. L. Borden, and the House will rest from its duties to allow the function to go on according to program.

It is five years since Mr. Borden's followers have shown their appreciation of his services in this fashion.

The Franciscans In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., March 4.—Another great Roman Catholic institution is to be established here.

The Franciscans, an order of sisters originally founded in Brittany, France, to alleviate the lot of the leper, a work which they have carried out in all parts of the world, are going to found a home where Roman Catholic ladies may live.

Local Optionists Buy Hotel.

Brantford, March 4.—In view of the general local option campaign in Brant County, and to strengthen their case, Silas G. Kitchen and other influential residents of St. George have agreed to buy out the Cummings' Hotel in the village, and have already secured several $100 subscriptions.

Experimental Stage Passed.

New York, March 4.—Dr. Alexander Graham Bell's Aerial Experiment Association, which has been engaged in experimental work wih aeroplanes and tetrahedral kites for more than a year, will be formally disbanded at Baddeck, N.S., on March 31. The association has spent $35,000.

Ran Away In Boy's Clothes.

St. Thomas, March 4.—Susie Bissette, 16 years old, dressed up in man's clothes, and ran away from the house of Mrs. Marsh, Sparta, Sunday night. Susie is now in the Children's Shelter here, and will likely be sent to the Reformatory.

Ten Perish In Fire.

New York, March 4.—Cut off from escape by a burning stairway, ten persons met death early yesterday in a five-storey tenement house at 374 Seventh avenue. The victims, who were all Italians, with the exception of an unidentified Frenchman, ranged in age from 80 years to an infant girl of four.

There were about 30 families in the tenement and policemen and firemen rescued many by ladders and by swinging them across from windows to neighboring buildings. Several babies were thrown from the windows and caught by firemen.

Million Acre Reserve.

Toronto, March 4.—The Minister of Lands and Mines will recommend to the Government the setting apart of about one million acres of land in the Rainy River district, adjoining the international boundary, including Hunter's Island, and running westerly from the boundary line between Rainy River and Thunder Bay districts as a forest and game reserve.

It is understood that the State of Minnesota will set apart a similar area for this purpose, the two reserves adjoining. If the project is carried through it will be possible for the game wardens of Ontario and Minnesota to co-operate in maintaining the reserve against despoilation.

Insurance Company Quits.

Winnipeg, March 4.—At the annual meeting of the Canadian Masons' Mutual Life Association, which did business in the three prairie provinces, having some 3,000 risks on its books, considerable consternation was expressed at the announcement that the company was going out of business and that its assets and liabilities would be taken over by the Western Masons' Mutual Life, an American organization. It is understood that the Great West Life also made an offer for the company's business. John McKechnie is the president.

$100,000 Fire at Sorel.

Montreal, March 4.—A fire which originated shortly before 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning in the back shed of a grocery store on the main street of Sorel, caused nearly $100,000 damage to buildings and stocks in the centre of the lively little shipyard town. The sufferers are C. A. Trempe, P. E. Chevalier, G. A. Lussier, L. T. Trempe, A. A. Larochelle, P. E. Lizotte and Judge Bruneau.

A detachment of the Montreal fire department entrained on an emergency cable, but were stopped en route.

Her Majesty Is Ill.

London, March 4.—Queen Alexandra, who is suffering from a severe cold, decided not to attend the court at Buckingham Palace, which the King held alone last evening. The King's plan to proceed to the continent to-day has not been altered.

It is stated that the King practically has decided to purchase a seaside residence at Worthing, which is ten miles west of Brighton.

Dynamite Kills Three.

Prince Rupert, March 4.—John Samuelson and Eric Anderson were killed instantly and Fred Hoglund fatally injured, since dead, and two others have broken legs and may not recover, the result of a premature explosion of dynamite on rock cut in the G.T.P. construction camp at a telegraph point on Skeena River, 15 miles from Essington.

Sentenced For Burglary.

St. Thomas, March 4.—Thos. Flint was yesterday morning found guilty of burglary by Police Magistrate Glenn, and sentenced to serve three and a half years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

HON. MR. FOY'S LAW REFORM

Routine proceedings in the Legislature yesterday were entirely devoted to private bills.

P. H. Bowyer (East Kent) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Pharmacy Act. This, he stated, was designed to relieve an injustice now inflicted upon the farmers by the present act, which prevented country storekeepers from dispensing common and well-known drugs, except those provided in the list of twelve, which accompanies the present act. When the present act was passed no notification of its provisions was sent to the country storekeepers, who had been in the habit of keeping a limited line of drugs, thereby making it possible for the farmers to purchase such commodities as carbolic acid, hellebore and iodine. Last fall an officer of the Ontario College of Pharmacy descended upon the East Kent storekeepers and laid information, which resulted in a large number being fined $20, as provided in the act, half of which went to the informant and the other half to the College of Pharmacy.

The Minister of Education, Hon. Dr. Pyne, admitted there was a great deal in the bill to commend it to the House. One part, however, would cause discussion and perhaps dissension, and, therefore, in accepting the second reading he wished it to be sent to the municipal committee, where it could be dealt with in detail.

In moving the second reading of bill No. 103, to amend the Assessment Act, Mr. Fripp (East Ottawa) explained that this was intended to increase the income exemption on householders from $1,000 to $1,500 and on the incomes of non-householders from $600 to $900. He also wished to relieve the wage-earners, those "who are not employed by the year or month at a state wage or salary, and whose remuneration is dependent upon number of hours or days" worked. It was not intended to relieve the income tax upon investments, but to remove a hardship which is now imposed upon laboring men.

Morris Forms Cabinet.

St. John's, Nfld., March 4.—The Newfoundland Cabinet, headed by Sir Robert Bond, which resigned last week, vacated office yesterday, and the new Cabinet, formed by Sir Edward Morris, leader of the Opposition to Premier Bond, was sworn in. Robt. Bishop is leader of the Legislative Council; Donald Morrison, Minister of Justice; Michael Cashin, Minister of Finance; Sydney Bland, Minister of Public Works, and Robert Watson, Colonial Secretary.

Indians Not Dying Off.

Port Arthur, March 4.—Indian Agent McDougall has been investigating reports of wholesale mortality among Indians of the Nipigon band, as spread through eastern papers, and said to have been told in a letter from an unnamed missionary to a friend in Wingham.

McDougall finds that there is no truth in the reports. Only two Indians died at Nipigon in the last couple of months, and they in a natural way.

Deprived of an Estate.

Brantford, March 4.—The Six Nation Indian Council set aside the will of the late Joshua Williams, an Indian, who left a 200-acre farm, ferry boat at Ohsweken and a lump of money to his adopted son's wife, on the ground that the wife when she married the son, who was a white person, ceased to be an Indian. An [illegible] will be made [illegible] Ottawa.

JUDGMENT PENDING ON ONE CHARGE

authority. There certainly was no connection between Walsh's act and Mr. Maher. And Mr. Peck held, anyway, that under the Municipal Act bribery by an agent could not affect a protest in a municipal election. Mr. Peck read a judgment given by Mr. Justice Rose, who said a candidate could not be held responsible for the illegal action of an agent! But the agents were made, by the act, liable for their own misconduct.

Then here was a third ground—that of the payment to Martin McManus of 50 cents to pay his railway fare from Peterborough to Lakefield. This charge was one that arose out of the evidence, and therefore one of which the defendant had no notice. In connection with municipal elections Mr. Peck said it was not an illegal act to pay the travelling expenses of a candidate in a municipal election. It was in Provincial and Dominion elections, but the clause in reference to municipal elections did not state that it was illegal. The grounds advanced were too trival to unseat Reeve Moher said Mr. Peck in concluding his address.

Mr. McWilliams wanted an amendment to two charges in the affidavit. He was allowed to substitute the name of Edward Walsh for Michael Walsh, but his other request was not granted.

Mr. McWilliams said that if such actions were permissible under the Minicipal Elections Act and were to be known throughout the townships of the country as legal, they would have a very disastrous effect on municipal elections. He submitted that the facts sworn had shown strong grounds that the defendant had taken illegal procedure in contesting the election.

His Honor occupied some time in reviewing the facts of the cases. The statute showed what was meant by corrupt practices and showed what the punishment was. In cases of bribery and corrupt practices where the charges were proven that the guilty candidate should lose his seat and be ineligible for candidature; He should also be disfranchised for that length of time.

Any corrupt act, no matter how small, on the part of the candidate would have this effect. The law of the municipal act would have to be taken exactly as it was without regard to that governing provincial or Dominion elections.

When such a charge as the one being tried was laid, the relator should know at the outset exactly what he was doing and should not rely on the judge granting any amendment to help him.

There is no such thing as the word agent mentioned in the municipal act "By any person on his behalf" as was expressed by the municipal act meant by a person who was acting on behalf of the candidate, with the candidate's consent. How can it be said that that sort of thing can apply to the candidate if the candidate had no knowledge of it. Law is founded on what is just and right. Any law that could enable a stranger to the candidate to do all this kind of thing without authority would be absurd and that was why "on his behalf," was written in the act.

The act says, anyone taking pay for conveying a man to the poll is liable and in that case if the charges were upheld the Grand Trunk Railway would be liable for conveying McManus from Peterborough to Lakefield.

His Honor stated that in his opinion a railway train was not a vehicle within the meaning of the act. It did not say that where a candidate has offered to pay the transportation expenses of a voter it was illegal and perhaps in that not being expressed the law had fallen short in this particular respect of what was desired.

Two dollars was paid Wm White, Sr. by a man by the name of James Walsh. According to this statement Walsh had never seen Moher in regard to canvassing or paying White. If Mr Moher had paid the two dollars it would certainly have been an illegal act, but did Walsh pay the money with the knowledge or desire of Moher. If not, why should Moher be liable himself.

His Honor said he was unable to find that Mr Maher, under the circumstances of the payment, was guilty of corrupt practice. He did not find that James Walsh paid this two dollars on behalf of Moher, for Moher knew nothing about it according to the evidence so did not authorize the payment. Walsh acted on his own responsibility.

The other charge was the one of the paying of three dollars to Edward Walsh. Mr Moher paid Walsh for acting as scrutineer when he was at the home of Walsh canvassing for his support. The question was whether or not he paid the money for the purpose of influencing Moher to vote for him.

"As far as any intention of Mr. Moher to do any wrong I do not think he had it," said the court. "I must take some time to consider it."

Mr McWilliams and Mr Peck will argue this point in private with the Judge on Friday afternoon at three o'clock.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier may sit for Ottawa, and resign the Quebec seat.

A NEW CURATE FOR LINDSAY

Rev. Father Keeley to Succeed Rev. Father Collins.

His Grace Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston has selected Rev Father J. J Keeley of the archdiocese of Kingston to succeed Rev Father Collins as curate of St Mary's church, in Lindsay

He is a native of Railton, north of Kingston and was ordained to the priesthood during Christmas week of 1906. He pursued his theological studies at Ottawa university and the Grand Seminary, Montreal and was for two years curate at St. Peter's cathedral, London, Ont. Rev Father Keeley will arrive in town this week and the Post desires along with the people of St Mary's parish, and the citizens generally to extend to him a cordial welcome.

Rev. Father Halligan, who has been curate for Mgr. Mennier, at Windsor, will take Rev Father Keeley's place at St. Mary's cathedral, Kingston.—Lindsay Post.

A REALLY GOOD MUSICAL PLAY

"Forty Five Minutes From Broadway" Pleasing and Original

The tuneful breeze "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," is a really good musical play, and was a delight from the first to the last curtain to the large audience that saw it at the Grand last night. It was the first time that the theatregoers of Peterborough had an opportunity to see one of George M. Cohan's plays and they showed appreciation in a most expressive way. The applause and laughter were almost continuous and curtain calls came to Mary and Kid Burns to such an extent that many eager people of the stage meeting with the same approval would have seized the opportunity of making the much-worked curtain speech

The piece is full of inimitable Cohanisms and the originality of the Yankee Doodle comedian is always evident in the lines, music and business. As consistent a plot as would be possible in a musical comedy is told in the story of the play.

But the pleasant outstanding feature is the melody of the songs. There are only five musical numbers but there is more real music in them—of the light order, of course—than in the average comic opera score with fifteen numbers or so. "Mary is a Grand Old Name" and "So Long, Mary," have a haunting and tuneful strain to them, and "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" caught the audience at once.

Miss Frances Gordon as Mary satisfied the audience that she was not only a clever and entertaining comedienne with a good voice but a graceful actress as well. Scott Welsh as Kid Burns with his "line of talk" was a scream all the time and as a comedian is about unbeatable in his particular province. Mary E. Cunard showed decided ability in the rather unattractive part of Mrs. David Dean, and Eugene McGregor was favorably received as Tom Bennett.

The newspaper boys were bright in their work and the chorus was above the average in ability and attractiveness.

That "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" is one of the best musical plays that has appeared here was the general verdict of the large audience.

Hard Lines

The following was handed into the Review office at noon today, and the Review does not take the responsibility for it;

Oh England, Oh England,
  You have nothing now to sail,
You have sent your Shrubb to Canada,
  For an Indian here to whale.

Oh Canada, Oh Canada,
  You have lots to blow and boast,
For England hasn't got a Longboat,
  To sail upon her coast.

Oh Longboat, Oh Longboat,
  You've a dandy here to meet,
It will take a longer boat
  Than England's got
To beat you on your feet.

Oh Shrubb, Oh Shrubb,
  You have nothing now to boast
For Canada has a Longboat,
  That will run you from
The Atlantic to the coast.

RECEPTION TO CONGREGATION

Pleasant Event at St. Andrew's Church Last Evening

The reception to the congregation of St. Andrew's church by the Ladies' Aid Society last night was a decided success. In spite of the disagreeable weather a large number gathered in the assembly hall and enjoyed an exceptionally pleasant evening. The large hall was very tastefully arranged for the occasion. Many small tables were placed around from which refreshments were served.

An impromptu programme of music was given by local talent which added to the pleasure of the evening. Vocal solos were given by Miss May Laing Mr. Herbert Rush and Mr. Gordon Wright. Instrumental numbers were rendered by Mrs. McClellan and Miss Mary Potter. Mr. Johns gave several readings and Mr. Clarke several banjo selections.

Mr. R. Lees, on behalf of the Session, and Mr. Andrew McFarlane, on behalf of the Board of Managers, spoke appreciatively of the work of the Ladies' Aid, and special reference was made to the value of fostering the social side of the church.

The pastor, Rev Mr. Potter, stated that it was with pleasure that he could testify to the good work that had always characterised the Ladies' Aid Society during past years. He also referred to the willingness and readiness of the ladies to do their part whenever the occasion arose.

The gathering was dispersed with devotional exercises.

THE YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

The euchre tourney last evening resulted as follows;—1st prize, a handsome pipe; Mr. Peter Gardner, 2nd prize, a clasp knife, Mr. G. Evans 3rd prize, box of tobacco, Mr. W. B. Holmes. There was a large turn-out. To-night (Thursday) the Mock Parliament holds its session when the celebrated "Tax on Bachelors" bill comes up for discussion. There will likely be a hot time in the old club to-night.

The delicious flavor and aroma of "Salada" Tea, is preserved by the use of sealed lead packets. It is never exposed to the sun dust dirt or air, as bulk or loose teas are. A teapot test will show the difference.

TO CONNECT PORT HOPE WITH C.P.R.

The Port Hope Guide, reporting a meeting of the Board of Trade of that town, says:

A letter was read from Mr J F. Clark who was unavoidably absent, submitting a proposal for railway connection with the C.P.R. near Pontypool via the Ganeraska valley, a distance of 21 miles from Port Hope, and 28 from Cobourg. A sketch accompanied the communication together with details regarding the proposed route. If the proposition received the favorable consideration of the Board of Trade, Mr Clark suggested that a Railway Committee be appointed to consider the advisability of applying for a charter.

KING OF SIAM SENDS THANKS TO THE FATHER OF A PETERBOROUGH MAN

The following letter from Sergt.-Major Rundle, father of Mr W. G. Rundle of this city appeared in the Toronto Sunday World;

Editor Sunday World;

Fifty years ago when my regiment was quartered in Aldershot, the crown prince, now the King Siam, was attached to our brigade for a course of training. I was sergeant at the time and had the honor of being associated with H. R. H. military education.

In November last I read of the rejoicing in Siam on the occasion of the anniversary of the 40th year of His Majesty's reign and remembering some incidents that happened while His Majesty was performing the duties of a British officer, half a century back, wrote a letter of congratulation to His Majesty on the happy event and have just received a reply.

The reply reads;

Private Secretary Office

Bangkok,
January 11th, 1909

Sir,—His Majesty the King, thanks you for the kind wishes expressed in your letter of the 13th November last congratulating His Majesty upon the occasion of the 40th anniversary.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant.
SOMMOT,
(Private Secretary to His Majesty the King of Siam.

THE PROPOSED ABOLITION OF RAILWAY CROSSINGS

The Review has received a copy of an elaborate and highly commended paper on "The Railway Crossing," by F. L. Somerville, MC, Soc.CE. reprinted from The Canadian Engineer. It traces the rise of the level crossing, which Mr Somerville ascribes to the necessities of a young and undeveloped country. He gives a full history of legal enactments bearing on the whole question in Canada and elsewhere and concludes by saying that—

"In the urban districts and on main lines of heavy and fast traffic the grade crossing question is a serious one—the public demands and the railways are forced to run frequent and fast trains with the result that every grade crossing is a source of danger. Every accident is regretted by the officials of the railways, but no railway in Canada has the money, nor has it the means to raise the money to properly protect every crossing, and many of the municipalities are so situated financially that they can only contribute a small amount, if any, towards this object. In the United States where each State has separate jurisdiction many of them have contributed large sums of money to promote increased safety, but in Canada, where nearly all the steam railways are under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government, the provincial authorities have so far done nothing.

Both the Federal and Provincial Governments are the guardians of the public interests, and it is the opinion of the writer that no new railway should be authorized in the more thickly settled districts unless all crossings are protected, and that on the older roads some course should be adopted whereby one or both Governments should contribute towards the expense of eliminating the unprotected crossing.

This is not beyond the powers of legislation and the writer would suggest that each Government set aside a sum of money each year to be spent for this purpose, such sums to be apportioned as regard the contribution of the Federal Government by the Dominion Railway Commission and as regards the contribution of the provincial government by a board to be appointed by the Government."

The mother of the infant found at the Stanley Mills store at Hamilton claimed it at the Infants' Home.

SPORTING NEWS

GREAT INTEREST IN CHURCH LEAGUE GAME THIS EVENING

Great interest is being taken in the games at Brock street rink to-night, and there promises to be a large crowd on hand to witness the games. The chief attraction will be the contest between Knox church and St. Andrew's for the championship of the Church League which will be played between 9 and 10. Both these teams will have on their strongest line-ups and can be depended on to put up a fast exhibition of hockey. St. Andrew's had their final practice last night at Brock street rink and made a fine impression with the large number of fans who were on hand to see the work-out. The Knox church bunch have been hard at it all week and are in the best of shape and will go into the game to-night with the intention of carrying off the silverware. The Quakers will met the C.G.E. in the final game for the championship of the Mercantile League between 8 and 9, and as the teams are pretty evenly matched the quality of hockey dished up should be of a high order. The Rink Rats will meet the Wild Cats from 7 to 8 and there promises to be an interesting struggle. The Wild Cats claim they have the Rink Rats scared to death, but the Rats don't see it that way and the outcome will be watched with interest. Cressman's meet the grocers from 10 to 11 and all four games will have efficient referees who will make the teams play their best all the time. The admission to all the games will be 10 cents for ladies and 15 cents for gentlemen and as this will practically finish the hockey season for this year, a large crowd should be at the rink to root for their respective teams.

HOAGLAND HAD NO TROUBLE WINNING 4 NIGHTS WALK

The Auburn Advertiser says:

Hoagland had no trouble in winning the four nights' walk, which closed at the Armory Saturday night, taking first money over Brown by five laps. To do this he had to gain a total of seven laps, and he did it. When the race started Hoagland was two laps behind Brown. He gathered these and then to show that he was in good shape added five more, walking an exhibition quarter of a mile during the evening in 1.45 at the rate of a mile in seven minutes.

Brown finished second, nine laps ahead of West, who beat Holihan for third place by one lap. Adle jumped from sixth place to fifth, beating Loeslein by two laps, while Fenton was seventh, beating Dixon 14 laps. Howell was six laps behind Dixon and Allen brought up the rear with 54 miles and 6 laps, six miles and 16 laps behind Howell.

The standing was:

	Miles	Laps
Hoagland	65	5
Brown	65	0
West	64	11
Holihan	64	10
Adle	63	12
Loeslein	63	11
Fenton	62	2
Dixon	61	8
Howell	61	2
Allen	54	6

THE EMPRESS IS RE-PLANKED

Mr. Geo. Hickey has returned from Young's Point where he has been re-planking the steamer Empress. The planking is of elm and it is the first time the boat has been re-planked since it was built, nine or ten years ago.

The lumber was supplied at Kelly's mill, Bridgenorth.

SILVA WILL MEET YANKEE ROGERS

Frank A Gotch the "lion tamer" has shown his hand and the "unknown" is now named. Emil Silva, the famous champion of Italy, whom Siegfreid refused to meet in New York when challenged last week, is the man the champion thinks will beat the big Yankee Rogers for this son of Italy is the surprise packet that Frank has handed out.

Silva will arrive this morning from Buffalo where he has been training with Champion Gotch. This will be Silva's premier match to a finish in this country.

HOCKEY

The Pig Iron Seven of the Peterborough Hardware met and defeated the Furriers in an interesting game of hockey at Brock street rink last night from 6 to 7. The Furriers are a new organization and considering that they have never played together before, did remarkably well. The score which was 8—2, hardly indicates the play as the fur handlers were always prominent with the puck, but could not connect with the nets, principally on the part of Blewitt, who played a star game for the Hardware people.

The game was not rough and neither teams suffered much from the decisions of Mort. Johnson, who kept the players well in hand and gave good satisfaction with the bell. The following players represented the Pig Iron team;—Goal, Blewett; point, Morgan; cover, Squires; rover, Flanagan; centre, Munro; right wing, Quartermaine; left wing, Butcher.

The Ex-convicts Challenge

The Ex-Convicts challenge the Gay Cats to a game of hockey to be played as soon as the rink can be arranged for. A practice of the Ex-Convicts is called for tonight and all former prisoners are asked to turn out.

CURLING

There were three interesting games at the curling rink last night, Skip Hall and Skip Baptie tied their game, which was hotly contested and the other two rinks were close and exciting as the scores indicate;

MANY HOUSES TO BE BUILT

Statement Made by a Local Contractor—Two Permits Taken Out To-day

Two building permits were taken out at the city clerk's office to-day. They were for two brick veneer houses on Rogers street, to cost $1,600 each. The permits were taken out by Mr. S. Crowe.

Very few permits have been taken out since the first of the year, but it is expected that activity will soon characterize the building trade.

"I expect that fully as many houses will be erected in Peterborough in 1909 as there were last year," said a contractor to the Review to-day.

"BILLY" BUCHANAN LIBERAL CHOICE

Will Contest Lethbridge in Election for the Alberta House

Calgary Alta., March 3.—W. A. Buchanan editor of the Lethbridge Herald Herald, was the choice of Lethbridge city Liberals at the convention held there yesterday. (Dr.) R. Ivera, mayor Raymond was nominated for Lethbridge district. C. Herbert late Conservative member, will contest Didsbury as an independent. Wm. Stewart, of Killam, will represent the Liberals in Sedgwick. Dr. Brett it is expected, will be the Conservative nominee in Okotoks. Premier Rutherford will have opposition in Strathcona from a farmers' candidate Rice Sheppard.

ANOTHER CASE SCARLET FEVER

Another case of scarlet fever is reported in the north end of the town to-day. This is the first case of this kind in nearly two weeks and it is to be hoped the city will be soon rid of the disease entirely.

Ottawa Chinaman

Wing On, an Ottawa Chinaman, has been in the city for a few days, a guest at the Dominion Chinese cafe. He has a Chinese store on Bank St

Shoved Chisel Down Throats.

St. Thomas March 4.—The Englishman, Plumbridge, who terrorized the farmers in the western portion of Elgin County by his freakish method of killing their cattle, such as poking a chisel down the throats of the animals, causing them to bleed internally, and depriving them of their eating and drinking organs, and ultimately causing them to die, was adjudged insane yesterday morning by Magistrate Hunt, after expert testimony was given by several physicians.

Plumbridge will probably be deported.

Royalists Active.

Paris, March 4.—A number of statues in the garden of the Luxemburg were mutilated Tuesday night by a band of royalist students, and at the same time they were covered with such inscriptions as "Down With the Republic," and "Long Live the King."

Royalist demonstrations have been active of late, and Tuesday night an attempt was made also to pull down the statue of Emile Zola at Versailles. This, however, was not successful.

Big Dredge Crossed Pacific.

Victoria, B.C., March 4.—The German dredge Fruhling, the first dredger to cross the Pacific, has reached port from Kiel, by way of Algiers, Sabang and Moji, where calls were made for coal, on the world-circling cruise, bound to the Fraser river, to be delivered by Capt. H. Klausen to the Canadian Government, which purchased the suction dredge at a cost of $250,000, to deepen the Fraser river to 30 feet between New Westminster and the Gulf.

Says She Won't Return.

Sarnia, March 3.—Mrs. Alfred Osborne, the 52-year-old woman whose mysterious disappearance on Tuesday last in Port Huron, led to the belief that she had gone away and killed herself, as did her father in Sarnia four years ago, is alive and well.

Relatives of the woman have received a letter from her. In part it read: "Do not worry about me; I am well; am at the home of friends. I do not want to return, and I will not."

The letter was postmarked Port Huron.

Admiral Evans' Son Court-Martialled.

Washington, March 3.—Upon the recommendation of Secretary of the Navy Newberry, President Roosevelt yesterday reduced the sentence of Lieut. Frank T. Evans, son of Rear Admiral Evans, to a loss of fifty numbers and a reprimand.

Lieut. Evans was court-martialled for various offences while the Atlantic fleet was in the Philippine waters, and sentenced to a loss of 150 numbers and a reprimand.

Bought Redpath Estate.

Montreal, March 3.—The estate of the late John Redpath, one of the most valuable residential properties in Montreal, has been purchased for $400,000 by a syndicate at the head of which are George A. Grier and David Yuile. It will be cut up into building lots and new streets run through to the mountain. The property is situated on Sherbrooke street and contains about 400,000 square feet.

Called Freemasonry; Libelled.

Montreal, March 3.—During the last civic election Ald. Duquette, one of the ward candidates, was styled by several people as a Freemason. Duquette regarded this as a libel on his character, and the people making the statement were in court yesterday. One and all stated that they had no reason for making the statement and were sorry that they had made it, and were dismissed.

B.C. Plebiscite on Local Option.

Victoria, B.C., March 3.—Premier McBride has given an answer to the deputation headed by Rev. Dr. Spencer, which recently interviewed the Government in reference to local option. The leader of the Government has informed Dr. Spencer that the question of local option will be submitted to the people in the form of a plebiscite.

SECONDS

Miss Maude Adams.
Miss Lila Finlay.
Herb. McMillan.
Sidney A. Smithson.

Eighteen more days of the contest. Keep them in mind. Keep track of the number as they decrease and don't wait until to-morrow to start getting four, five or six subscriptions a day, the number you think you will need to swing the prize, but begin to-night, for that much-talked-of day, to-morrow, never comes. Take a pencil, collect your thoughts, put down the names of all prospective subscribers, map out the territory and forthwith start anew as it were, with all the enthusiasm, vim and energy you had on the day you thought of making the grand tour of Scotland, England and France, or wearing one of the elegant diamonds or watches.

There is still ample time for any live candidate to win out. Get busy and do the best you are capable of doing, for it is in the finish the race is lost or won. Another thing to keep in mind while you are thinking is this: You have a better chance now than you had at the start. Sounds a little bald on the face of it but true nevertheless. While you have been plugging steadily along, working fitfully, or possibly just doing enough to keep in the race, others have become the victim of that common malady, cold feet, and have practically dropped out of the race. See the opportunity? Instead of forty hustling competitors, as you might have had if they had all been game to the finish, you only have about twenty. This would make about one winner in about every two. Take advantage of the chance. Stay in and see the finish. Make good.

The last lap of the race is always the most interesting. Nobody cares much for the preliminary canter. It helps to give a line on the condition and fitness of the various entrants, but the real test comes in the driving finish when the real game qualities are brought to the front.

The next few days will be devoted to securing as many clubs as possible by the harder working and wiser candidates. From now on it will be a race animated largely by the desire to be ahead of some particular candidate.

With the closing of the club offer Monday night of the Review's great European tour and Diamond contest but two weeks more remain. However, they bid fair to be about the warmest two weeks the various candidates have ever experienced.

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number scheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

FIELD CROP COMPETITION WILL BE INAUGURATED

White Oats Will be Crop—Good Prizes and Many Advantages Generally—Under Auspices West Peterboro' Agricultural Society.

A new feature, and one that should appeal strongly to the farmers of this district, will be the annual field crop competition that will be held this year in connection with the Peterborough Industrial Fair. It has been decided by the directors that white oats shall be the competition crop and five prizes will be given of fifteen dollars, twelve, ten, eight and five.

A great advantage beside the possibility of securing the prizes offered by the West Peterborough Agricultural society is that the competitors will have a chance of exhibiting their grain at Guelph and Ottawa. The way for doing this without expense is paid by the Government, which will supply bags and ship the grain free of charge. Further than this, the Government will sell the grain for the competitors or ship it back as may be desired.

The demand for good oats is a constant one, and at the sales at both Guelph and Ottawa have never brought less than $1 per bushel. Some of the first prize oats sold at $2.50 per bushel and other prize winners received 30 per cent. above the market price and that without leaving their homes, showing the great demand for grains free from weed seeds.

THE MAIN OBJECTS.

The main objects of the competition may be enumerated as follows;

1 To stimulate a greater interest in the growing of first class seed grain.

2 To encourage the practice of growing seed for next year's crop, in a field by itself using only the best obtainable seed, sowing it on the cleanest and best prepared land, allowing it to ripen, and threshing and storing it separately.

3 To obtain pure see, ie. free from other varieties the presence of which can best be detected when the crop is growing.

4 To encourage the use of seed from heavy yielding strains.

5 To promote the sowing of seed from clean, vigorous crops of uniform stand with bright stiff straw.

6 To encourage careful and intelligent farming and the production of seed free from weeds.

The competition will be carried on by the co-operation of the agricultural societies branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and the seed branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. It's great vaule can readily be appreciated by the progressive agriculturist. If the oats he raises are of a superior quality he will have an opportunity of establishing himself as a producer and will also be able to realize quite a handsome sum in prize money at no expense to himself or may have the oats sold as well at the highest figure. It is to be hoped that the farmers of this district will be encouraged by the prospects of the competition. It will also give them an opportunity of showing what quality of oats can be grown in this part of the province.

NATURE OF COMPETITION.

Competitions shall be limited to one crop, to be selected by the society, which should be the one of most importance to the farmers of the district. Entries for competition must consist of a field of not less than five acres, and where beans and potatoes are entered the minimum plot not less than one acre.

Competition shall be limited to members of Agricultural Societies, and the fields entered must not be allowed to make entry in only one society and but one entry can be made by each competitor.

CROP FOR CURRENT YEAR.

The oat crop of Ontario for the current year has been estimated at approximately 100,000,000 bushels, and that of wheat at 18,800,000 bushels, and the annual total value of all the field crops in Ontario at $140,000,000. If the yield at the present time under what are, to a considerable extent, crude and unsatisfactory methods of farming, bulks so largely (although the average yield per acre is far below what it should be) it can be easily seen how the income of the Ontario farmer would be largely increased if by better methods of land cultivation and seed selection he secured an increase of yield in his crops of even a few bushels per acre.

NORWOOD

Miss Lila Finlay of town, is one of the candidates in the contest for the Peterborough Review. Miss Finlay is doing well having reached the seconds now. We hope she will reach the first before the contest is over.

While coming down stairs at the home of Mrs H. Howson, Mrs T. Howson slipped on a step and fell to the bottom, breaking two of her ribs. Medical assistance was quickly summoned and Mrs Howson is now able to be around again.

Mrs Dr Wilson has returned after visiting in Lindsay.

Mrs A. Davidson has returned after visiting in Havelock.

Mr W. Rhyne of Havelock was in town on Sunday.

Mr J. Weir has rented his brick residence on Peterborough street and intends moving to the frame residence on Spring street owned by Mrs Smith of Toronto, in a few days.

Mr Lou Comstock of Westwood was in town on Monday.

Mrs. Garlick will commence her duties as organist in the Methodist church on Sunday next. Mrs Callander played for the last time on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs Callander intend moving to their home in Lindsay in a few days.

Mr G. Duffield has been appointed choir leader for the Methodist church.

Miss Ruby Comstock visited at her home in Westwood on Saturday and Sunday.

A concert was given in the town hall on Friday evening last under the auspices of the piano committee of the Presbyterian church. Along with our own local talent, Miss Belle Thompson, elocutionist of Toronto, and Mrs J. McGilpin, soprano soloist of Burkley street Methodist church of Toronto took part. The concert was a decided success and was enjoyed by all who attended.

Mr J A. Lillie of Peterborough was in town over Sunday.

Mr. Harold Howson has sold his stock of undertaking supplies to Mr. C I. Puffer, furniture dealer of town.

Mr and Mrs Belle of Bintaluta, Sask., are visiting at the home of their daughter, Mrs H. Elliott.

Rev. Mr. Frost of Dummer was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. Oliver Buck, who has recently sold his farm implements is moving into town and will occupy the frame dwelling on Queens street owned by Rev. Mr Peere of Saskatchewan.

Miss Blanche Pearce has returned after visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. Ernest Haig, who was the recent victim of a dynamite explosion left here a few days ago for the Old Country.

CANADIAN MAGAZINE FOR THIS MONTH

The Canadian Magazine for March contains a finely illustrated article by A H D Ross, of the Faculty of Forestry, University of Toronto, entitled, "Our Vanishing Birthright." This article shows in a very conclusive way what the loss to Canada will mean if the timber areas are permitted to be sacrificed. Mr Melvin O. Hammond contributes an appreciative sketch of Frederick George Scott, whom he calls "The Poet of the Laurentians." There is a splendid Canadian story by N de Bertrand Lugrin, entitled "The Woman at Stewart River." This is a north country story written by one who knows conditions there. Other contributions are: A sketch of Sir Hugh Graham, by Geo. Murray; a sketch of Frederic Chopin, by Mrs J W Harrison; Canadian Journalism, by Robson Black; Mountaineering in the Canadian Rockies, by Frank Yeigh; an article on an unusual subject, "Euphemisms," by E. Blake Crofton, several short stories, and verse by S A White, John Boyd, Louise C. Glasgow, J D Logan, E M. Yeoman, Lilian Vaux Mackinnon, Jas P Haverson and J Edgar Middleton.

PASSED RESOLUTION FAVORING PROPOSED ELECTRIC RAILWAY

Hastings, March 3.—There was a splendid turnout at the railway meeting held in Warkworth town hall on Wednesday 17th inst. Everybody is anxious for a railroad. After the meeting the Township Council held a special meeting at which the following resolution was passed;

Walker-Armour, that whereas the Ontario Gazette, the official organ of the Province of Ontario in its issue of Feb. 6th, 1909, contains two applications to Parliament for Electric Railway charters passing through this municipality. The first by D. E. Ewing, Esq., of Cobourg, dated Jan. 8th, 1909, the second by H. A. Ward, Esq., of Port Hope, dated Jan. 20th, 1909, from Cobourg to Havelock, passing over the same route asked for by Mr. Ewing and that both of the proposed companies have had an opportunity of addressing the members of this Council and the residents of Warkworth at a public meeting held for that purpose therefore be it resolved that the municipal council of the township of Percy do heartily endorse the Cobourg Peterborough and Kwartha Lakes and Electric Railway Company, proposed by Mr. Ewing and that we respectfully request the Legislature of the Province of Ontario to grant the said company a charter instead of the other company proposed by Mr. Ward for the following reasons, viz;

1. The Cobourg, Peterborough and Kawartha Lakes Electric Railway Co. was the first to make application for a charter in the last twelve days before the other company.

2. The first section of their route from Cobourg passed through the township of Percy and the village of Warkworth to Havelock which interests us more particularly as Warkworth is sixteen miles from the main line of G.T.R. and ten mile from its branch line at Campbellford or Hasting the road will greatly benefit the south part of this township and the branch line from Roseneath to Hasting will benefit the north part of the township a station to be built within half a mile of Warkworth town hall.

3. That some of the men of the first company are connected with the Provincial Steel Rail for electric and other railroad and as the rails are one of the large items in railway construction we believe this is a guarantee of the early completion of the road while the second company is composed of men who about three year ago obtained a charter for the development of the water power at Healey Fall, but thus far nothing has been done we cannot therefore consent to have a Railway charter tied up also. We therefore request that the Legislature grant a charter to the said Cobourg, Peterborough and Kawartha Lake Electric Railway Co., and that the Reeve and Clerk design this resolution and attach the corporate seal thereto.—Carried.

P. S. Ewing, Clerk; A. L. Boyce, Reeve.

The Council then adjourned.

SOME WIND, SOME RAIN, SOME WARM WEATHER IN MARCH

The Predictions of Irl Hicks for the Month—Cold Snaps too Figure in the Outlook.

According to the predictions of Irl Hicks our March weather will vary between electric storms and a few cold snaps and warm weather. Variety will be one of the features of the month as will be seen from the following forecast;

A reactionary storm period has its centre on the 3rd, 4th and 5th. This period is at the culmination of the Mercury period, with full moon in apogee following immediately on the 6th. The storm diagram shows also that a Mars disturbance enters about this time. A continued spell of unsettled Mercurial weather will most probably come over from the close of February but about the 4th to 6th storm conditions will be quickened and decided areas of rain, sleet and snow will spread progressively from the west to the east across the country.

The opposition of the planet Jupiter with earth and sun February 28, is a most important factor in storms and all terrestrial phenomena for at least two weeks before and after that date. Look for high barometer and cold wave close on the heels of storms of this period. Do not be surprised if blizzards sweep the north and west not far from the 4th, 5th and 6th. The 4th to the 9th also constitutes a decided seismic period having its centre on the 6th. There will be quickened volcanic activity with seismic shakes in many parts of the earth at this and a later period in March.

A regular storm period extends from the 8th to the 13th, central on the 10th. This is exactly coincident with the annual crisis of solar magnetic perturbations.

Low barometer and electric storms will begin in western parts by the 9th and during the 10th to the 13th storms of marked force will be natural in most parts of the country moving, of course, in regular order from west to east. The combined periods of earth and Mars bear forcibly on this period, greatly increasing probabilities of West India storms. High barometer and blizzardous gales from the northwest will wind up this period, bringing change to much colder to most parts of the country.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 15th, 16th and 17th. This period leads directly into the Venus period, combined with the growing Mars disturbances and near the centre of earth's equinox. The character of storms and weather at this time is problematical as the Mars' influence will begin to dominate the elements and it cannot be positively foreseen which way its influence will turn. In any event, the storm days turn. In any event the storm days will show an excess of perturbations—that is, storms of rain, thunder and wind, or of snow and boreal winds, will be of very decided character. We believe that the latter will prevail, and that the Mars influence about this time will set a winter pace, which will characterise the weather generally far into April.

A regular storm period is central on the 21st covering the 19th to the 23rd. This is also at the centre of vernal equinox, and on the 21st the moon is both in perigee and on the celestial equator.

A phenomenally low barometer, great humidity and high temperature will be a warning of violent storms anywhere from Friday the 19th to Tuesday the 23rd, notably on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, the 21st, 22nd and 23rd. In all probability, will first bring storms of vicious Venus lightning and thunder; high winds and possible tornadoes to the southward, all followed by furious gales from the northwest, with blockading blizzards and drifts of snow.

Very low barometer anywhere in the Gulf region must be regarded as an omen of possible West India cyclones. This period, 19th to 23rd, constitutes the most marked seismic period of the month. Watch telegraph reports on and about the 21st, 22nd and 23rd. If a decided wintry aspect does not attend and follow the storms of this period the remainder period will probably bring weather of warmer type. Whatever is at this time will foreshadow in a large degree what may be expected far in April.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 27th, 28th and 29th with the moon at first quarter and extreme north declination. On account of the prevailing periods of Venus, earth and Mars, there will be constant tendency to storms and unsettled weather all through this part of March. But the barometer will show decided storm conditions about the 27th to 29th, and storms of rain, turning to snow in northern parts, will march eastward over the country.

MAKING FUN OF THE T.V.C. THE RECORD OF A LIFETIME

The following is from the Toronto Star (Liberal):

Ottawa, March 3.—The Trent Valley Canal is the sea serpent of Canadian politics. Its marine habitat is somewhere between the Bay of Quinte and the Georgian Bay, though political mariners at one time thought they saw it in the neighborhood of Port Hope. It has a serpentine length of 160 miles, but neither head nor tail. With these appendages it would measure 200 miles or more, but they are seen to best advantage before elections, when they have been visible from many platforms. Nominally, they are located at Trenton and the Georgian Bay. Actually, the canal runs nowhere to nowhere and back, affording no little enjoyment to the owners of pleasure boats along its route, but absolutely no convenience to the through traffic for which it was intended.

The Trent Valley Canal, in a word, is unique among similar marine achievements, in that it is without either inlet or outlet. It is all middle and no ends. Also, it is 72 years of age, which makes it the ichthyosaurus as well as the sea serpent of uncompleted undertakings.

COMMENCED IN 1837.

Early in the last century somebody had a vision of the Trent Valley Canal, and in 1837 the Parliament of Upper Canada endorsed the project. It passed "an Act respecting the improvement of the navigation of the River Trent," and it authorized an expenditure thereon of £77,507 11s. 4 1-2d. Don't forget the ha'penny. It is one of the 667,673,283 honorable ha'pennies which have brought the work to its present state of glorious incompletion.

This early expenditure was designed to assist navigation from the Bay of Quinte to Rice Lake. The money was spent, but navigation is still unassisted, for the stretch of canal available for navigation to-day is all inland, comprising the 160 miles from Orillia to Healey's Falls, which is 16 miles below the village of Hastings.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD.

Canada took the Trent canal to its bosom in 1837, and has been a faithful partner to it ever since. Engineering parties joined the two in the bonds of matrimony, and no one has ever been able to effect a separation. These engineers, said the Act, have power "to designate and establish, take, appropriate, have and hold, to and for the use of this province, the line and boundary of a canal." Also it gave the five commissioners who were to be appointed, full authority to "explore" the country lying between the mouth of the Trent and Percy Landing—wherever that was.

Up to the time of Confederation the sum of $300,371.31 had been spent upon the Trent canal. For years the scheme was dormant; dormant, but not dead, for in 1880 appears a small expenditure on capital account, and in 1883 the sum of $40,767 was spent on construction. The Trent redivivus. Since then it has been "a friend in need at every election; five and a half millions of dollars have been spent on capital account and almost another million on renewals, repairs, and staff. The Trent capital to-day is a six and one-half million dollar monument to political ingenuity.

POLITICAL PLAYTHING.

Both parties have used it; the Liberals, be it said to their credit, with some measure of fulfillment as well as of promise. It has been dangled before the eyes of almost every constituency between the Georgian Bay and the eastern part of Lake Ontario. Barrie has wanted it. So has Port Hope. As long ago as 1880, a survey from Port Hope to Rice Lake was defended in the House by the Conservative party. "This project" said the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie on that occasion "has been deliberately abandoned by the Government for 25 or 30 years. It is a pure farce."

Under Conservative rule a farce it certainly was. Since 1898 some effort has been made to remove the canal from the realm of platform oratory to that of fact. It has still been orated about but real progress has been made in construction. Some day it may be completed as it might have been long ago, for so many are the waterways in its course that there is less than twenty miles of canal in the two hundred.

In that far day Ontario will have a long, new canal with six feet of water on the sills. No one knows what tonnage of this magnificent draft will pass along it. "We have no such report," said the Hon. Mr. Graham, the other day, "although we are spending millions on the canal."

Somebody asked in the House recently as to the superintendency of the completed work.

"Of course," said Mr Graham, "it is a little difficult to speak so far ahead. Not that I mean to say it will be a long time before this canal will be constructed but it has been in progress ever since 1833, I believe and if a man had been asked about the policy then—"

He did not complete the sentence.

The name Holland naturally suggests canals. When somebody in the marine business discovered that Holland River, runs from Cook's Bay, on Lake Simcoe, in the direction of Newmarket, he just could not resist the fierce impulse which seized him to suggest that a "branch" of the Trent canal be built along its course to the future metropolis hereinbefore mentioned; which, by the way, has a consuming desire to consume logs. No one has ever been able to quite figure out why this projected twelve miles of waterway should be called an offshoot of the Trent, for it does not promise to contribute to the Trent's traffic.

The estimates however, bulk together the expenditures said to be necessary for both these projects, and Captain Tom Wallace has a question on the order paper whereby he is endeavoring to find out how much was spent on the Holland division just prior to the last election. The cruel insinuation is, of course, that the "branch" was intended to feed the Liberal majority rather than the traffic on the Trent; as to which insinuation it would be rash to make a pronouncement.

It is not useful, the marine link between Newmarket and Lake Simcoe is at least interesting, for it exemplifies the mysterious growth of estimated costs, a phenomenon which any citizen can witness for himself by taking an architect to his bosom and building himself a house.

In 1906 the cost of the Holland division was estimated at $291,000. The sum of $260,000 has now been spent, and the estimate has grown to $600,000.

WATER FROM NOWHERE.

But the lack of a raison d'etre is not the most serious fault which is laid to the charge of the "Newmarket ditch." The river, 'tis alleged, is of the jump-across variety, and so shallow that the fish in it suffer from sunstroke every summer.

A learned discussion took place on this phase of the subject in 1906, when the House humbly considered the question of whether the flow of this thundering cataract should not have been measured in the summer time; but not so. The engineers, anxious to give that river, as it were, a fair chance to live up to its name, had gauged its might at a more propitious season, and had said "'Tis enough."

On this assumption the canal went on. In 1906 a dredging company got the contract. It took them until May of 1907 to build their dredge. Since then the great work, the magnificent achievement which is to give the markets of the world a whack at the trade of Newmarket, has been going on with more or less expedition; and the markets have been waiting, in a frenzy of impatience, for its completion.

THE GLORIOUS VISION.

It is admitted, to be sure, that reservoirs must be built to conserve the Holland's branch's supply of water. Its enemies, indeed, are so cruel as to say that the necessary fluid will have to be taken to Newmarket from Lake Simcoe in watering carts. But perish all doubters; some day the canal may be completed.

And then. Then, the trade of Newmarket, faring forth boldly out across Lake Simcoe, down the rejuvenated Trent to Trenton, out by the St. Lawrence, out and out and out to the great sea—oh, johnnycake!

In the meantime the past of the Trent canal is lost in antiquity, and the future of the Holland division is lost in the smiles of the contractors.

THE BUDGET IS PRESENTED BY TREASURER OF ONTARIO

Who Explains Accounts of Province.

Receipts Exceed the Estimates in Nearly Every Case---Criticism From Clarke.

Toronto, March 5.—Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, presented the budget yesterday afternoon. The financial statement showed that the estimated revenue for the past year has been exceeded in almost every item, while the expenditures have been kept well within the appropriations and the amount of cash on hand to-day is largely in excess of the amount four years ago.

The total receipts amounted to $8,602,962, or $381,000 in excess of the estimate. Cash in the bank on Dec. 31, 1908, was $3,072,000, or $216,000 more than in 1907, and the province has accumulated $97,500 towards sinking fund account against the English loan. The present amount of railway and municipal subsidies, notwithstanding that during the year $360,000 had been paid to the Grand Trunk Pacific for 132 miles of railway, under an arrangement by the late Liberal Government, and $43,500 to the Ontario Central Railway, is $98,460 less than four years ago. During the past four years the excess of revenue over expenditure has been $1,800,000, and, after deducting $500,000 treasury certificates given to Toronto University, the assets of the province are $1,300,000 more than they were in 1904.

In every case, said Col. Matheson, the receipts had exceeded the estimates with the exception of casual revenue and crown lands receipts. In the former there has been a slight oversight in the estimate which should have been $110,000 instead of $140,000, accounted for by a fine of $23,000 paid to the Town of Essex by the Michigan Central Railroad, in connection with the explosion of a car of dynamite, and $8,000 on account of the sale of land.

In regard to crown lands revenue, there was a deficiency of $630,000, due to the trade depression of a year ago, from which the lumbering industry had not yet recovered, and the Government deemed it advisable not to press lumbermen for the amount payable in view of the difficulty referred to.

The amounts received in excess of the estimated revenue are from: Interest $100,000; public institutions, $38,000; Central Prison industries, $15,000; education, $8,000; Provincial Secretary's Department, $22,000; agriculture, $13,000; succession duties, $525,000; supplementary revenue $25,000; licenses, $27,000; law stamps, $5,000; Government railway, $50,000.

MAY CONTROL THE UTILITIES

Nova Scotia Government Introduces Act Establishing Commission.

Halifax, N.S., March 5.—The Government has introduced a bill providing for the creation of a public utilities commission in Nova Scotia.

Public utilities are defined in the preamble as "every corporation, company, person, association of persons, their lessees, trustees, liquidators or receivers appointed by any court, and every city, town, municipality or county that now or hereafter owns or may own, operate, manage or control any plant or equipment for conveyance of telephone messages, or for production, transmission, delivery or furnishing of heat, light, water or power, either directly or indirectly to or for the public."

The board is to consist of three persons, who shall receive a salary. The annual expense is to be borne by the public utilities according to their gross earnings. The board is to have general supervision of all public utilities and the act will establish complete and effective control and regulation of public utilities in the province.

Three Years and Thirty Lashes.

Belleville, March 5.—Before Judge Deroche yesterday Joseph Samuel Smith of Coe Hill, a married man, about 50 years old, was found guilty of improper relations with Gertrude Hearns, a girl under 14, who lived in his house.

He was sentenced to three years in penitentiary, with 30 lashes. Smith has been twice married.

May Amalgamate Plants.

Brockville, March 5.—Brockville is seriously considering the advisability of amalgamating the light and water plants, in view of extensive improvements being urgently needed in both departments. It has been decided to employ the services of an expert engineer for a report, including the question of the transmission of cheap power from Iroquois.

Broker Suicides.

New York, March 5.—Frank C. Hollins, head of the firm of F. C. Hollins & Co., 11 Wall street, dealers in investment securities, committed suicide Wednesday night at a hotel in this city. He had been in ill-health.

Trolley Cars In a Heap.

Boston, Mass., March 5.—One man was killed, two probably fatally injured and eight other persons hurt by the piling up of six trolley cars on a steep down grade of Blue Hill avenue.

DYNAMITARD WALSH DEAD

Irishman Who Tried to Blow up Canal Dies of Liver Trouble at Kingston.

Kingston, March 5.—After an illness extending over three years, John Walsh, one of three men sentenced in April, 1900, to life imprisonment, for dynamiting the Welland Canal, died yesterday. He was 42 years old and suffered from cirrhosis of the liver. It is said he has a wife living in Dublin, Ireland, but no relatives in this country.

Nolan and Dullman, sentenced at the same time, are still in the penitentiary. It was believed Dullman was leader in the plot.

After entering prison, the deceased worked in the tailor shop for over a year, but when health failed him was transferred to the library. He was always regarded as a model prisoner.

On one occasion he remarked that the whole trouble was due to a drunken spree. It is believed that the dynamiting of the canal was not intended as an act of hostility by Fenians, but was rather intended to aid the grain-handlers of Buffalo who were then on strike.

HE BROKE THE SEAL

And Stole From Car—Twenty Dollars—Fine Imposed.

Albert Brandt, who hails from Uxbridge, was charged with breaking into a sealed car at the Grand Trunk station and stealing a quantity of currants on March 4th. The young man pleaded guilty, but claimed he was drunk and would not have broken into the car otherwise. A railway official was called and stated that the quantity was small, but the magistrate said that it was not a matter of the amount that was stolen, but breaking into a sealed car was a serious offense. He fined the prisoner $20, or in default of payment, 30 days in gaol with hard labor. The accused didn't have the necessary amount and had to take the time.

A gentleman left a black mask at the Review office to-day. He said he picked it up on George street last night. It is made out of black cotton and has an elastic fastener.

Burglars Scared Away.

Chatham, March 5.—Thieves broke into Nelson Stringer's fur and seed store about 11.30 Wednesday night and were in the act of carrying away $50 worth of furs when they were surprised by Peter Metgis, a Greek peanut vendor, who keeps his portable stand behind the warerooms. Metgis fired a couple of shots and the thieves beat a retreat.

Malpractice Proven.

Detroit, March 5.—After three hours' deliberation, the jury in the case of "Dr." Eliza Landau, aged 70, charged with the murder of Etta Sowler, the 18-year-old London, Ont., girl, upon whom it is alleged that criminal malpractice was performed at the Landau house, was found guilty as charged.

Candidates In Alberta.

Calgary, March 5.—Dr. R. G. Brett will represent the Conservatives of Cochrane in the Alberta elections. His opponent will be C. W. Fisher, Speaker of the late Legislature. In Didsbury C. Piebert, Independent Conservative, will be opposed by a straight Conservative candidate yet to be named, and by James Stauffer, Liberal. E. H. Riley, the present member, will again be the Liberal candidate in Gleichen. Charles Stewart will be the Liberal candidate for Sedgewick, McHardy for Kotoks, and Colin Genge for Macleod.

Manitoba 'Phone Overdraft.

Winnipeg, March 5.—That the telephone department has an overdraft of $229,000 at the bank was shown at the investigation before the public accounts committee yesterday. One hundred thousand dollars of the overdraft is for operation and the balance for construction.

It was also shown that only about a dozen 'phones will profit by the party line reduction, that being the number in the city where the total list exceeds nine thousand, and not more than a thousand 'phones will share in the extension cut.

MR. BORDEN IS FETED BY CONSERVATIVE MEMBERS

Chieftain in Address Declares That if Grand Trunk Pacific is Looking for a Fight Conservative Party Will Take up Gage of Battle.

Ottawa, March 5.—The Conservative members of the House of Commons and Senate, to the number of about 100, tendered a banquet in the Commons' restaurant last night to R. L. Borden. It was a most enthusiastic affair, practically the whole representation of the party in the two Houses being present.

F. D. Monk, chief lieutenant from Quebec, presided, and proposed the toast of the guest of the evening.

The company acclaimed the leader with loud applause, many times renewed. Mr. Borden, in replying, featured the appearance of "The Duty of the Hour" and the part of the Grand Trunk Railway in the recent contest.

"We desire no feud and seek no alliance with any great railway corporation," he said. "But if any great railway corporation insists on projecting its open influence into every election contest, it is well that the directors of that corporation should be given to understand that some day the gage of battle will be taken up.

"In this connection let it be remembered that the 87 Conservative members of Parliament represent more than one-half of the honest and independent vote of the electorate of Canada. It is especially noteworthy that notwithstanding the frantic and unworthy appeals of our opponents, the Conservative vote in Quebec increased by nearly 20,000.

"The credit and resources of Canada are too great for even this Government to destroy or dissipate in a measurable term of years, but if they had intended to accomplish that undesirable result their course could not have differed in any marked degree from that which they have pursued.

"The Government during the past twelve months has plunged this country into debt to the tune of $48,721,413. What does that mean? It means an annual interest charge of nearly two million dollars upon the people of Canada for ever. How long is this pace to continue? Ordinary prudence has been so far forgotten that the conditions are becoming alarming.

"We have in our ranks men who can do splendid work in the public service," said Mr. Borden, after referring to the work that has to be done in Canada. "It is no discredit to the old members of this house, it is no discredit to the Conservative membership of former Parliaments to say that the present Opposition musters a stronger and more effective force than at any time since 1896."

Mr. Borden closed with the quotation: "Life is neither a pleasure nor a sorrow, but a serious matter, which has been committed to our charge and which we are bound to carry on and bring to a conclusion with honor to ourselves."

To the toast "New Members," responses were given by Goodeve, British Columbia; Magrath, Alberta; Haggart, Manitoba; ex-Mayor Stewart of Hamilton, for Ontario; Blondin, Quebec; Crosby, Nova Scotia; Doherty, Quebec. There were but four toasts.

A BLIZZARD GREETS THE NEW PRESIDENT OF THE U.S.

Washington, March 5.—The first chief executive to take the oath of office in the chamber of the Senate in 76 years, William Howard Taft, yesterday became President of the United States. Andrew Jackson was the last one.

Accompanied to the capital by President Roosevelt and a guard of honor, through a swirl of blinding snow, Mr. Taft returned to the White House just as the sun began to force its way through the thinning clouds of grey. A sudden blizzard sweeping in from the northwest Wednesday night, to set awry the weather bureau's optimistic promise of "fair and somewhat cooler," caused an abandonment of the outdoor ceremonies on the famous east front of the capitol, much to Mr. Taft's chagrin, and threatened for a time to stop the brilliant pageant of the afternoon.

By almost superhuman efforts a passageway was cleared along the centre of Pennsylvania avenue, however, and for nearly three hours President Taft and Vice-President Sherman reviewed a passing column which was replete with martial splendor and picturesque with civic display.

Following the brilliant and impressive ceremonies in the Senate, during which both President and vice-president took the oath of office, President Roosevelt, again a private citizen, bade an affectionate adieu to his successor, while all in the historic chamber looked on in silence. Then he hurried away through a side door to take a train for New York.

President Taft won applause at the very outset by announcing his adherence to the Roosevelt policies and his intention to carry them out by means of further legislation which would also have for its purpose the freeing from harm of those pursuing "proper and progressive business methods."

WOMAN WHO MURDERED SON AND THEN COMMITTED SUICIDE WAS KNOWN HERE

Mrs. Wm. Finlayson, who recently murdered her three-year-old son and then committed suicide at Regina, in a temporary fit of insanity, had a number of friends in this city. She formerly resided in Lindsay and was highly esteemed in that town. Her husband is also known here, having visited Peterborough with the Galt football team a few years ago.

A Regina despatch referring to the sad affair, says:

Regina, Sask., March 2.—Mrs. Wm. Finlayson this morning murdered her three-year-old son, Warren, and then committed suicide. The deed was done in a moment of insanity, brought on by illness.

Mr. Finlayson left the house at 7 o'clock this morning to open his store, and when he returned an hour later for breakfast he found the place locked. He knew his wife was ill and was fearful of her actions. Accordingly he broke into the house and, after searching, found the body of his wife and son in a tank of water. The tank was located in the basement of the house, and reached nearly to the ceiling.

The woman has evidently thrown the child in and then crawled through a small space between the top of the tank and joists and drowned herself. The tank was opened and the bodies removed immediately. Mrs. Finlayson, who was only 27 years old, had been married five years. She was the daughter of Wm. W. Slathe, a carpenter, of Seaforth, Ont., and came west to Regina two years ago. Her husband is engaged in business here, and is well-known.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Good Roads Conference.

Toronto, March 5.—Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Wrks, addressed the Good Roads Convention yesterday. His Department was keeping a record of roads all over the province, "and," he said, "we are watching with interest the working out of certain plans now in vogue. In new Ontario the roads are paying their own share of maintenance, but in some of the older counties they are not. I want to make these old counties which have been dragging on Government support, self-supporting."

The old officers were re-elected.

Anarchists Active In Madrid.

Madrid, March 5.—The correspondent stated that a bomb with a burning fuse was found on Wednesday against the wall of the Royal Palace. The Minister of the Interior, however, declares that it was a postcard enveloped in thick paper and fully 500 yards from the palace.

Penny Postage With France.

London, March 5.—In urging the association of the Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom to agitate penny postage with France, a member of the British Chamber of Commerce in France, said that France and America have concluded negotiations to this same end.

19-Year-Old Girl a Bigamist.

Ottawa, March 5.—Mabel Hillier, an English girl, 19 years of age, appeared in the Police Court yesterday charged with bigamy. She is charged with having married Alphonse Pommerville and not being satisfied with him, she is alleged to have married George Bourassa, both of Ottawa. Both men were in court, but the case was adjourned.

Navy For Australia.

Adelaide, Australia, March 5.—Minister of Defence Pearce said the vast majority was behind his party on the Australian navy question. An attempt had been made to make Australians believe the Admiralty opposed the idea of an Australian navy, but from despatches he had seen he believed the British authorities emphatically favored it.

Health Board Resigns.

Kingston, March 5.—Because the City Council repealed the Compulsory Vaccination Act, four members of the Board of Health have resigned, Drs. Knight and Connell, Etherington and Francis King, and have passed a resolution condemning the action of the City Council.

The salary of the Mayor of Berlin has been increased from $400 to $600.

ESTABLISHMENT OF FOREIGN OFFICE CAUSES DISCUSSION

Premier and Hon. Mr. Murphy Favor It.

But Messrs. Borden, Foster and Sproule Are Opposed to the Idea.

Ottawa, March 5.—Does Canada need a new department to deal with her foreign relations or should the Secretary of State be given something to do? was the question which occupied the attention of the House for a space yesterday afternoon. The Prime Minister and the Secretary of State think a new department is necessary. Mr. Borden, Hon. G. E. Foster and Mr. Sproule think otherwise.

The discussion arose on a motion of Mr. Murphy to go into committee to consider a resolution for the creation of a department of external affairs. It was felt, he said, that the present system was inadequate to the situation and that it would be of great advantage for all communications relating to our external affairs to be sent to a special department.

Mr. Borden observed that it had not been made clear why the department of the Secretary of State should not be made the common centre for the more convenient working out of all matters of international concern.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier then entered into fuller explantions. All Governments had departments whose whole business was to deal with matters affecting foreign relations, and Canada had reached that stage when it would be an advantage to have an independent department. We had reached the standard of a nation.

Under the present system all communications of a foreign nature came direct to the Governor-General, and were by him transmitted to the Privy Council. It was not the intention to disturb that, but whereas all such communications were now referred by the Privy Council to the various departments it was now the intention to submit them to the new department of external affairs, where they would be digested and information procured to be returned to the new department, where the despatch would be framed in reply.

Mr. Foster declared that Canada's relations with foreign countries had not begun in recent years. To make an external affairs department effective, there would have to be a replica of every department combined in the new department. His suggestion was to add a body of clerks at the disposal of the Prime Minister, and have them docket and index the foreign correspondence.

Dr. Sproule also spoke against the motion.

TWO MEN SHOT AT HAMILTON

Policeman and Civilian Wounded by Burglar---Discovered in a House.

Hamilton, March 5.—Constable H. Smith was shot by a burglar, whom he was going to arrest last night, about 9.15, near the corner of Ray and Market streets, and James Hanley, 14 Ray street, who was with him to render assistance, was shot in the temple. Both men were at once taken to the city hospital and operated on. It is believed that they will recover, though their injuries are critical. Their assailant got out of the house in the excitement and made his escape.

He was discovered in the house of E. W. Kappele, southeast corner of Ray and Market street, about 9 o'clock by the constable, who at once asked several neighbors to assist him in surrounding the house. They were passing through a side alley to enter the house from the rear when the burglars opened fire on them from the rear of the house.

It is understood that a third shot was fired, which also hit Mr. Smith. Both men fell to the ground, but did not lose consciousness. When they were picked up they were able to walk to the street, and the ambulance being called, they were taken to the hospital.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

No anti-Japanese legislation will pass the Montana Legislature at this session.

The breaking of a journal on an M.C.R. freight train wrecked a dozen grain cars near Cayuga.

Peters & Co., Kingston, confectioners, were fined $50 and costs for selling brandy chocolates.

Mrs. Mary McKinnon, aged 78, of Scanlon's Corners, near Welland, was found dead on the kitchen floor.

There is a report that war is inevitable between Nicaragua and Salvador, and that troops are being mobilized by both countries.

Despondent and ill, Howard H. Hascall, aged 21, returned to Rutland, Vt., his native city, after an absence of two years, and shot himself.

Richard Scott, an "Indian list" man at London, for refusing to tell where he was supplied with liquor was yesterday sentenced to three months in jail.

Five hundred iron shipbuilders and boilermakers employed by the Chicago Shipbuilding Co., South Chicago, are out on strike against a ten per cent. cut in wages.

United States Congress rejected the bill providing for the acceptance by the United States of an invitation to participate in a universal and international exposition to be held in Brussels in 1910.

The Associated Chamber of Commerce of London has passed a resolution in favor of cheaper telegraphic communication throughout the Empire by the adoption of a policy of state-owned cables.

That Hon. Hugh John Macdonald shared in the transaction to the extent of $500 was shown in the further examination of Guinan upon his land deal with the Manitoba Government, in which he secured a tract of sixteen thousand acres for about two to three dollars per acre less than the market value.

BEAUTIFYING THE CEMETERY

Little Lake Burying Ground to be Made More Beautiful Than Ever

The superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery is in Toronto to obtain an assistant, who during the coming season will devote his services specially to the beautifying of the cemetery. An effort in this direction has been decided on to surpass any former year, and with the support of the many interested, we may confidently expect the grounds to present an attractiveness not attained in the past. The Review is assured no effort will be spared to secure the end in view.

An Anti-Spitting Order.

Ottawa, March 5.—The Railway Commission has issued a draft order prohibiting spitting, except in proper receptacles, in passenger cars, stations or waiting-rooms of railways in Canada. This is the result of an application from the Montreal Board of Trade.

Big Fire In Yarmouth, N.S.

Halifax, N.S., March 5.—Fire at Yarmouth yesterday morning destroyed the greater portion of the buildings and plant of the Burrell-Johnson Iron Co. Two hundred men are thrown out of work. Loss $100,000; insurance $30,000.

Des Moines to Import Girls.

Des Moines, Ia., March 5.—Members of the Greater Des Moines Committee have practically determined to import 500 girls from New York and put them at work in the local factories.

COLLEEN WEDS A CHINAMAN

Brantford, March 5.—A happy culmination of her arrest as a vagrant by the local police came to Norah McLaughlin, a winsome Irish girl, aged 19 years, fresh from Dublin, at the police station here last evening, when her marriage with Harry Chong, a prosperous local Chinese restaurant keeper, was solemnised by Rev. H. R. Cracken.

Magistrate Livingston, Chief Slemin and the Chinaman's lawyer were the only witnesses. In court yesterday morning the bride was given the chance to go to the Salvation Army or go to jail. Chong heard tell of her predicament, and having previously seen her made the offer of marriage to a lawyer.

The magistrate was glad to make the desired release, and the happy couple repaired to the restaurant after the ceremony.

Passes U. S. Senate.

Washington, March 5.—The Canadian boundary waterway treaty was ratified by the Senate yesterday, with a resolution attached to meet the objections of Senator Smith of Michigan.

Suicide at Monte Carlo.

Monte Carlo, March 5.—An unknown man, who had lost his all at gaming, shot himself dead last night in a well-known restaurant before a crowd of diners.

Franco-Canadian Treaty.

Paris, March 5.—The tariff commission, which already has adopted the amended Franco-Canadian treaty, yesterday approved a report of the subcommittee, which, while recommending the ratification of the treaty as a whole, suggests certain reservations. The matter soon will be discussed in the Senate.

Servia Is Satisfied.

Berlin, March 5.—Despatches received at the Foreign Office here confirm the reports that the Servian Premier has declared that Servia on the advice of Russia, France, Great Britain and Italy, does not insist upon territorial compensation from Austria-Hungary.

Puts It Up to Dominion.

Winnipeg, March 5.—Premier Roblin has moved a resolution memorializing the Dominion Government in regard to the elevator question either to establish public-owned grain elevators or give the provinces the right to do so.

Fatal Tenement Fire.

New York, March 5.—Fire in a big tenement building on Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday, caused the death of two members of a family of five and serious injury to the remaining three. Five firemen were injured.

A SLACK ADMINISTRATION

Slackness is a vice. It is admitted by all to be so. It is the subterfuge most used by the crooked. It is the birth right of the selfish. A selfish man can pretend to be careless or unsuspecting, simple-minded or without guile, just as he pleases if he is only slack. The escape of Bill Miner comes under this head. He is only one of a long series that have left this particular state penal abode without apparently, the state's consent. But they have gone. Arrested at great expense they have departed in peace and the authorities in whose hands they were placed, resent criticism. Now this sort of thing opens the door for the escape of any sort of a prisoner whether he be merely a common one or one of the importance of Riel. Moreover what is the good of having inspectors if they are to be merely a matter of form? The authorities in charge of the penitentiary with the open door are in charge yet. From one end of Canada to the other extends the trail of the serpent. Gas buoys, bogus contracts, patronage-lists, rake-offs! These represent the "achievements" of the present Government. But all connected with these scandals escape. Bill Miner is only one of a number.

THE MIDDLEMAN AGAIN

The middleman is still getting in his work. A neat job of his was disclosed in supply on Thursday, (Hansard unrevised 1666). These facts are admitted by the minister:

Mr. O'Leary, of Richibucto, N.B., owned a wharf, which he desired to sell. He understood that the government wanted the property and offered it for $1,000 to Mr. Waterbury, an officer of the Public Works Department.

Mr. Murray, a prominent Liberal, bought the wharf from Mr. O'Leary for $1,000, which was the price at which the owner offered it in the open market to the government or any other purchaser.

Immediately the government bought it from Mr. Murray, for $5,000.

$4,000 for the middleman!

$1,000 for the owner!

And the government could have bought the wharf any time from the Conservative owner at the same price that Mr. Murray paid. Everybody knows that Mr. Murray bought the wharf in order to sell it to the government. Mr. Pugsley sent a convenient engineer who reported that the price of $5,000 was fair, just as another engineer reported that the price of the Moncton and Halifax land deals was just, and yet another engineer reported 75 cents a yard a fair price for dredging, when the same officer was accepting 15 cents for the government dredge that was doing the work.

SIR WILFRID AND HIS COMBINES

A short time ago we put before the people a number of views on the desirability of promptly enforcing laws, especially those which weigh heavily upon the people. Combines as the Toronto Star (Liberal) has shown in a long series of masterly articles, are bleeding the great body of the people slowly to death. The crime we affirmed must be laid at the door of those who should enforce the laws. Whereupon our evening contemporary the Examiner woke up long enough to cry out that Whitney was the man to blame for not enforcing the laws." The following extract from the Farmer's Sun of February 3rd, 1909, shows that the position is not as stated in the Examiner, but, as stated by the Review. The Laurier Government spends its sparemoments in telling the people what it has done for them while a subsidised press aids, to the best of its power, in the "good work." It is not too late to have a commission inquire into the relations of the Liberal press, and for that matter of all journals on the famous patronage list to the Laurier Government. There are many of the elements of Russian bureaucracy in the federal government of this country.

The Farmers' Sun says:—

When the Tariff Commission went through Ontario some three years ago statements were made before it by a number of dealers which indicated the existence of combines in many lines of domestic manufacturing for the purpose of arbitrarily fixing the prices which consumers must pay. A good deal of evidence has been collected since then to the same effect. Indeed, there can be no doubt that in many lines domestic manufacturers have combined under the protective tariff for the purpose of exacting the last dollar which the tariff enables them to collect from the Canadian consumer.

On Friday last a deputation appeared before the Hon. Mr. Fielding and Sir Richard Cartwright to ask that consumers be relieved from the exactions which these trade combinations have been collecting under the protection of a tariff framed and maintained by the present Government.

This deputation consisted of E. C. Drury, Master of the Dominion Grange; James McEwing, M.P.; H. J. Pettypiece, ex-M.P.; J. W. Woods, of the Gordon Mackay Co., and J. W. Curry, K.C.

GUY FAWKES

Was there such a man as Guy Fawkes and what did he do to the English Parliament?

> Yes, there was such a man as Guy Fawkes. He did not do anything to the English Parliament—but it wasn't his fault that he didn't. You are not bound to apologize for all the bad Catholics who have lived, especially hundreds of years ago.—Catholic Register.

It has been generally understood or rather generally misunderstood that Catholics denied that there was ever such a man as Guy Fawkes or as the Review's helper says, "such a guy as Fawkes." The chief feature of the celebration of the miscreant's well-merited punishment, has evidently been founded upon the idea that the Catholic Church was only sorry that the said Fawkes had not raised the House of Commons to an unenviable eminence in comparison with which an elevation to the peerage was merely like a lift of the foot. Here however, we have a plain categorical statement by the official organ of the Hierarchy in Ontario. That statement makes it plain that history has not been perverted with respect to the dark man with the tall sombrero and Hessian boots, except in so far as it identifies his felonious undertaking with the principles and precepts of Catholic belief. It is in justice to both sides that we bring this statement to the notice of our readers.

THE LUMBER DUTY

A majority of the Republican members were formerly disposed to slash heavily into the lumber schedule, and there were indications that lumber would be placed on the free list. The showing made by the manufacturers, coupled with the investigation which the committee made on its own account, and the information received from Government sources, led to a change in sentiment, and in consequence an agreement was reached to make the reduction only fifty cents. The labor unions to a large extent, as well as bankers and manufacturers and industries allied with the lumber trade, also urged the retention of the duty.—The Globe.

The immense Protectionist majority in the Glasgow bye-election when the well-known T. Gibson Bowles, M.P. was beaten by over 2,000, appears in the Globe alongside of the report of the U.S. Ways and Means Committee, which met at Washington, D.C., to consider a revision of the lumber duty. The full import of the report appears in the quotation from the head of this article. Cases multiply of the determination of nations to protect themselves and to use tariffs to preserve a just balance of trade. The cloven hoof of the fanatical free-trader appears in Liberal journals at any and every opportunity, where the slightest opening presents itself, but theory must yield to common sense. Britain is rapidly swinging over to Protection. France has increased her duty by 20 per cent! Canada alone plays with fire. The loss of Glasgow, which has suffered severely from free trade, will be a staggering blow. It represents a turnover of 5,000.

According to Rev. Mr. Jackson's conception, the Book of Genesis must be pretty much the same as the Toronto Telegram's editorial page — fantastically mythical.—Hamilton Spectator.

This reminds us of the remark of a very well known Sunday school teacher who used to live here. He remarked that if he had had the writing of the Bible he would have made a much simpler and more sensible book of it. Selah!

(Ottawa Free Press.)

No matter how much we may share Sir Richard Cartwright's opinion that the remedy lies in "rooting out the protective system," we must acknowledge that we have to face conditions as they are to-day, and that we must be bound by those conditions. Canada is apparently wedded to the system of moderate protection for the present at least, and if we cannot find the remedy in the abolition of the tariff we must look elsewhere for it. And that would seem to be in the enforcement of an officer whose sole duty it would be to see to it that combinations in restraint of trade are quickly and effectively stamped out. This is an effective reply to the Examiner from a Liberal source, in its attack upon the Whitney Government for not enforcing the anti-combine laws.

OF INTEREST

Queen Helena, the idol and almost the patron saint of the Italian people, has recently awakened a world-wide interest in her personality through her heroic work among the unfortunates in Sicily and Calabria. Helena was a Montenegrin princess. She was born and still remains, a mountaineer in spirit and courage. A writer in the February Review of Reviews tells of her early girlhood.

Her father, Nicolas, Prince of Montenegro, lives in a low roofed, one-storied palace at Cettenje, in a deep valley, surrounded by mountains and 2000 feet above the level of the sea. Cettinje looks more like a village than the capital of a state, yet the tall kilted sentinels that stand at the gate of that humble palace are prouder of their prince and of their country than if they served the Czar of all the Russians. In this palace Helena was born in 1872, one of a family of nine. The civil list of the prince of Montenegro amounts to about $25,000 and the revenue is strained to supply his two elder sons with $5000 each. His six daughters, therefore, were brought up in the strictest economy.

Helena was always fond of an out-door life. There are practically no roads in Montenegro, for the inhabitants will not make it easy for cavalry or artillery to invade their country. The young princess, however, knew well the narrow, winding foot paths of Tsernegora, the Black Mountain, and like a real Highland girl, could trap the fox and accompany her brothers in hunting the bear. She could handle the rifle as well as they could, and was always made welcome at the peasant cottages with their single door and window, where a draft of milk refreshed her after the chase. The Montenegrins are, of course, Servians, or, at least Slavs. Two things they are brought up to hate, the Austrians —"Schwabs" as they opprobriously style them — and the Turks. Among the courts of Europe the palace at Cettinje was like the simple parsonage house in a parish of millionaires. It was a palace of plain living and high thinking, the home of purity, honesty, of truthfulness and patriotism.

The young princess however, was not destined to spend her life in the almost forgotten castles of the Balkans. The house of Montenegro had a rich relative in the person of the Czar Alexander. He it was who brought Helena to St. Petersburg and educated her. It was at Vienna, some years later, that the heir apparent to the Italian throne met the princess and her marriage was celebrated on October 4, 1896. Queen Helena's work for Italian women began with her marriage.

We read:

While Queen Helena has not been too eager for the honors of royalty, she has labored hard in fulfilling the duties of her rank. She began at home. The frugality of the Montenegrin was shown in the way in which she cut down all the unnecessary and extravagant expenses of the palace, both in the kitchen and the servants hall. The same spirit is shown in her simplicity in dress. The ladies of Rome —especially the milliners— complain that she has no love of finery, but singular to say, the aristocrats are actually following her example. At a recent afternoon meeting of ladies, held for the promotion of female education, there appeared to be a noticeable lack of rich or elaborate toilets, and the Queen was as simply dressed as any of them. Plenty of beautiful faces, and the sound of sweet, soft voices, but no laces or jewelry. There were dresses of blue, gray or brown, and street bonnets in abundance, and the Queen set the example of showing that business is business. The particular business of the meeting was the education of girls and women to such a degree as would enable them to earn a comfortable living for themselves and their families.

Queen Helena is no feminist in the extreme meaning of the term, but she is anxious that her fellow country women should enter all the walks of life in business education or scientific professionalism fro which they manifest capacity or aptitude. It is said that she has not only roused the fashionable drones of Italy to take some interest in professional pursuits, but she has done much to help girls who work in shops and factories to study at the night schools of Rome and acquire attainments or even accomplishments which enable them to obtain better and more lucrative positions—Literary Digest.

CANALS AND THE FUTURE.

The people of the State of Illinois voted recently to authorize a $20,000,000 bond issue to deepen the Chicago canal from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi to 14 feet. The Illinois Internal Improvement Commission is urging that an advance be made at once to a plan for 24 feet depth. Congressman Lorimer, of Illinois, proposes that to assist in this the United States Government, for the construction of the locks, and is moving to get a joint committee of Congress and the Illinois Legislature for the great purpose.

Canada must expect to see sooner or later the ocean-going trade of the great lakes (which means a great part of our Northwest business) taking the Mississippi route, unless we make our waterway to the ocean a deep-draught one. And let us remember that we need to start to work ahead of our neighbors. To construct a deep waterway from Chicago to the Mississippi will be a shorter job once undertaken, than ours can be. And trade channels once established do not easily change.

The choice Canada has, as the Journal before has outlined, is, between the Georgian Bay canal with 22 feet channel and deepening the St. Lawrence canals to that draught. The engineers say the Georgian scheme will cost $100,000,000. They say the St. Lawrence scheme will cost $200,000,000. Which is preferable?

In a recent discussion on the point, one of the London, Ont., papers, the Advertiser or Free Press, we forget which, stated that to deepen the St. Lawrence canals would cost fifty millions. The Journal replied two hundred and asked for the authority for the other figure. We did not notice any reply at the time, but have since received a clipping from the London paper quoting an estimate of fifty millions by somebody but without giving the depth to be got for the money. We will be more definite. The late George Y. Wisner, of Detroit, one of the leading engineers of the United States, said in his evidence before the Transportation Commission in 1904, that to deepen the St. Lawrence waterway to the ocean to 22 feet would cost $200,00,000.

The existing depth of water on the lock sills of the Welland canal and the St. Lawrence river system is 14 feet, and the length of the locks is 270 feet.

In order to accommodate a large lake freighter the following dimensions would have to be provided for, viz., depth of water, 22 feet, and length of lock 650 feet. The width of the channel would have also to be increased to at least 200 feet.

What would it cost to deepen and widen the Welland canal? No exact surveys or estimates are available to calculate this, but it is not such a difficult matter for a non-technical mind to compute with certain data available.

According to the Railway and Canals Department report the cost of the Welland canal up to March 31, 1907, was $27,275,859. This sum gave us a canal of 14 feet deep, about 100 feet wide and with 26 locks 270 feet long and 45 feet wide.

A new canal to take a large lake freighter would have to be 22 feet deep and 200 feet wide in the bottom with locks 650 feet long and 70 feet wide. Even if the drop were done in 13 locks, instead of 26, these enlarged locks alone would cost $13,000,000, the government engineer's estimate for the Georgian Bay canal for 27 locks the same size being $26,997,926, or practically $1,000,000 each.

Comparing the two waterways mentioned above, it will be seen that the existing Welland—14 feet x 100 feet, equal to 1,400 square feet—cost $27,275,859. What will be the proposed new one—22 feet x 200 feet equal to 4,400 square feet, or more than three times as large in area of its waterway, with locks two and a half times as long and more than one and a half-times as wide—cost? Clearly a low estimate for this 27 miles would be $50,000,000.

The amount already spent to March 31, 1907, on the St. Lawrence river and its canals from Lake Ontario to Montreal has been $32,774,997, which has given a waterway with 14 feet depth, 100 feet wide, and locks 270 feet long. As we have shown in dealing with the Welland canal to take a large lake freighter must be 22 feet deep and 200 feet wide or the cutting nearly three times the size of the existing one. In addition to this, work would have to be done in river reaches, which naturally have 14 feet of water, but to give an artificial depth of 22 feet would entail a very large expenditure in dredging. It may therefore be conservatively estimated that this section alone would cost $150,000,000 —or, with an enlarged Welland canal, $200,000,000 all told—from Port Colborne to Montreal, and even then a navigation is obtained which for many reasons would not be as remunerative a one as the Georgian Bay canal dispute.—Ottawa Journal.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. TOM SLATER CLAIMS THAT HE WOULDN'T THROW RACE

Auburn, March 5—The expected has happened and the professional distance running craze has received a serious set back in Auburn.

Johnny Hayes ran here the other night and won from a relay of three runners but he originally intended to run against Tom Slater, a man who has gained some fame as a walker. Slater claims that Hayes' manager wanted him to throw the race, and when he refused to do so, Hayes wanted him to walk seven miles while he ran ten. Slater claimed that as he had been training four weeks for a running race he was not in shape to walk and, after a lengthy argument the race was called off and Hayes ran against a relay of three men, winning handily. If what Slater says is true, it will not be to the credit of the Olympic Marathon winner.

FRED SIMPSON TOO GOOD A RUNNER TO OVERLOOK

There is a disposition in certain quarters in Toronto and Hamilton to confine the game to a certain clique, Shrubb, Dorando, Longboat and the rest of the Powers' stable. Although Shrubb is his own boss, he is necessary to the Powers' interests and he is kept in the bunch. However, Fred Simpson and a couple more of them are not in the swim and find it exceedingly troublesome to get a race, owing to the fact that Powers and Flanagan are bent upon cornering the market. Simpson is too good a man for them to overlook, yet he is not in their stable, and therefore not wanted. However, Simpson will demand, and will have to be given, a race very shortly, his record and ability giving him the right to every consideration.

An effort was made to bring Simpson and Dorando together in Hamilton, but Dorando's managers—and they are many—would not hear of it.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE CHURCH LEAGUE GOES TO ST. ANDREWS

Defeated Knox Church Team in a Strenuous Game Last Night—South End Boys Lacked Steadiness—Winners Have the Cup.

In one of the most strenuous and exciting games of hockey played at Brock street rink this season, St. Andrew's won the senior Church League championship by defeating Knox church by 3—0 last night. From the moment the puck dropped from Referee McWilliam's hand to the ice, the players on both teams went at it for all that was in them and the checking, which was the main feature of the game, was of the big league style. The contest was not of a tea table variety by any means and hard knocks were handed out continually, but nobody was hurt to any great extent. Knox church were all to the good in this style of play, but the excited condition of the players was responsible for a lot of the rough work that took place. The south end boys could not settle down and this gave St. Andrew's a large number of opportunities to get their their combination going, by which they got away with the game. Knox church were too eager to get after the puck and at times were all bunched up leaving their checks free to get away to good advantage. St. Andrew's on the other hand, played a cool, heady game, and they displayed good judgment in handling the puck, especially when near the nets of their opponents. The work of H. Rae at rover was one of the outstanding features of the game and he was largely instrumental in scoring the three goals. Currie, N. Rae, and Dormer were always prominent and worked well together and had their checks guessing at all stages of the game. The work of the defence all through the game was loudly applauded and time and again they broke up the individual work of their excited opponents, who tried unceasingly to score but it was not to be. Flanagan, who has caused quite a sensation in hockey doing this year, clearly demonstrated his ability as a hockey player last night and his work last night won for him many flattering remarks.

For Knox church Barclay and Hillier were the pick of the forwards, but could not do much against the hard checking of Rae and Dormer. The wing men were doing too much roaming around to be effective and did not watch their checks. The defence were too easily led out, which enabled the winners to get well in on the nets. Crowe took care of a number of shots labelled for counters, in a clever manner, and the ones that beat him were hard ones to handle.

Both teams started off at a fast clip and Rae and Currie got away with a nice combination rush in which Rae scored the first goal for St. Andrew's and the rooters for this team gave a mighty yell. The game was getting warmer and Barclay and Flanagan were warned for mixing it up. Rae secured the puck and shot a hard one at Crowe, who made a nice stop. Hillier and Currie took a minute each for slashing. The play was about even and neither team had much on the other, and the checking at this stage of the game was very hard and none of the players were doing anything in the line of rushing. Finally the St. Andrew's forwards got away together but Henderson intercepted a pass and there was nothing doing. Rae and Barclay got into a mixup at centre and engaged in a game of fisticuffs, but the game was still going on around the Knox church goal and they were not noticed by the referee until the noise attracted his attention and he with the rest of the team and a few spectators made things interesting in trying to quiet the scrappers. Five of the players journeyed to the box, but still with more room to chase the puck neither team could score although the nets had some close shaves. The first half ended 1—0 in St. Andrew's favor with both teams putting up a big struggle.

After the breathing spell the players went at it hard again and Crowe stopped a hot one from Rae, who was putting up a grand game for his team. The puck travelled back to St. Andrew's territory but Flanagan was on the job, and securing the disc got away for a jaunt down the ice, and scored the second goal of the game.

Knox church were playing a wild game and bunching up a lot, while their opponents were cool and steady and were playing well together. Barclay went off for tripping Rae and a few minutes later Denoon hooked Rae and got the same sentence. The game was getting a trifle rough and Currie got jarred and was carried off. Thompson going with him to even matters up. Flanagan got away with another fine rush but shot wide, and the play was mostly around the Knox church goal for some time. Currie and Thompson came on again, but Henderson got tired and slashed Dormer and watched the game from the boards for three minutes. St. Andrew's were having the best of the play and a large number of shots kept Crowe busy. But a few minutes before time was called Rae got the puck at centre and after passing the Knox church defence, got his second goal of the game. Knox church were dying game, but they went up against a better team and the game ended with St. Andrew's on the long end of the score.

The teams lined up as follows;

KEENE WON THE GAME

All Saint's Lose to Visitors at Knox Rink by 6-4 Last Night

Last night at Knox rink All Saints' went down to defeat at the hands of a Keene team. The score at full time stood 6—4, and the visitors had the 6. At Keene a few weeks ago, All Saints' defeated them 6—3, but the visitors turned the tables last night.

Their victory was due to the fact that they played superior combination than their opponents. For the Keene aggregation Weir, Campbell and Taylor played good games and for All Saints' Hillier, Lebar, Armstrong and Allen starred. D. Layfield refereed to the satisfaction of both teams. All Saints' lined up as follows;—

Goal—Moore.
Point—Gilbert.
Cover—Gatside.
Centre—Lebar.
Rover—Allan.
Wings—Armstrong and Hillier.

TO WIND UP THE CHURCH LEAGUE

There will be a meeting of the executive of the Church Hockey League at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night at 7.30 o'clock to wind up the affairs of the league for the season.

CURLING

A friendly game was played between one rink from Keene and two local rinks at the Charlotte St rink yesterday. In the afternoon Keene lost by a score of 13 to 9, and in the evening they won by 18 to 15. Sixteen ends were played at night and Hicks had the game tied until McIntyre played his last stone and laid shot. It was a close contest all through.

The afternoon rinks were;

Keene	Peterborough
Brisson	James
Moore	Taylor
McIntyre	Tooley
McWilliams	Moore
Skip ....—9	Skip ....—13

The evening rinks were;

Keene	Peterborough
Brisson	Lyle
Moore	Hicks
McWilliams	Read
McIntyre	Lang
Skip ....—18	Skip ....—15

There was some pretty fair curling at the Charlotte street rink last night. It is seldom that it is necessary to play four extra ends but such was the case in the game between Messrs Ferguson and Hollingshead. At 12 ends the score was a tie and also at 14 ends. But during the next two ends Hollingshead took six shots making the final score 13-19.

The rinks and scores were;

Davidson	Tovey
Evans	Moore
Webb	Hill
Hall	Knapman
Skip ....—18	Skip........—14

Craig	Tooley
Dodds	Ackerman
Dr Wightman	Bowes
Cameron	Talbot
Skip ....—6	Skip ....—10

Taylor	Bennett
Winch	Collins
Stevenson	A Moore
Ferguson	Hollingshead
Skip ....—13	Skip ....—19

ORILLIA CURLERS RETAIN TROPHY

Defeated Peterboro' Rinks There Yesterday by Eleven Shots—Had a Good Time

The Peterborough curlers were unable to wrest the Neill-Sheppard trophy from Orillia. The second portion of the competition was played at Orillia yesterday and the northerners won by eleven shots, giving them a total of fifteen shots for the round. The Peterborough curlers were hospitably entertained by the Orillia men. The scores were;

Peterborough	Orillia
Neill—10	Madden—23
Morrow—23	Monah—8
Matthews—11	Stewart—17

BUDGET IS PRESENTED

Northern Ontario Railway, the total net revenue for the year was $410,000, from which $330,000 was paid to the treasury for interest. The net revenue is $160,000 in excess of last year. The net earnings were $264,000, while the revenue from mining lands, etc., amounted to about $134,000. During the first four months of 1908 the operating expenses were $14,000 over earnings, so that the balance of the splendid showing of $264,000 referred to above was made up during eight months, reflecting great credit upon Mr. Englehart and his colleagues. To date the earnings for 1909 are $68,000, made up largely from supplies for the Transcontinental Railway and the unusual rush of mining men and equipment to Gowganda, Elk City and Charlton Lake.

For 1909 the Government have brought down a bill to change the fiscal year. The public accounts will close Oct. 31 in each year, and greatly facilitate the work of the Department. Two sets of estimates would accordingly be required for this session.

On account of this change the financial operations of the Government for the ten months of 1909 will not advantage the Provincial Treasurer, as the large expenditures of the Government are made during the early months of the year, while the large receipts always come in November and December.

In addition the Treasurer will have the benefit of only one-half of the liquor licenses. Besides, the whole cost of legislation is paid early.

The only item of which special mention was made was that of $300,000 for an addition to the Parliament buildings. It was necessary that the library should be placed in a fireproof structure, as the present offices are overcrowded, and additional vault accommodation is urgently needed.

S. Clarke, West Northumberland, congratulated the Provincial Treasurer on his changed views, both respecting the future of this province and on methods of bookkeeping. For a number of years he was, when on the Opposition side of the House, one of the least hopeful and most pessimistic of men. He was also keenly critical of the charging of items for current to capital account.

In the present budget statement the figures and receipts and expenditures had run pretty close. The statement indicated that when figuring out the result it was seen that the balance was likely to be on the wrong side, so to furnish a surplus the Provincial Treasurer had transferred $107,000 of expenditure for good roads from current to capital account.

Credit was also claimed for the closing out of the Sault Ste. Marie obligations. It was a matter of testing what the late Government recognized that the securities offered at the time were perfectly good.

The Provincial Treasurer claimed credit for the increased Dominion subsidy, but he could not see how in thunder—(Cries of order)—he could do that when that fund was based upon the increase of population.

They were willing to give credit where credit was due, but the satisfactory financial standing of the province was founded on the good work of the Liberal Governments of the past

Charge of Selling too Large Quantity of Liquor Against a Local Hotel

A local hotel keeper was called before the Magistrate this morning on a charge of having sold to John Hendley a larger quantity of liquor than the law calls for, on the night of February 22nd. He was not present at the court, but was represented by an employee of the hotel, who asked that the case be enlarged until the proprietor returned. The Magistrate did not see the necessity and Hendley was called to the witness box. He stated that on the 22nd of February he went to the hotel to get a supply of liquor. As some other parties and himself were going to Burleigh. He first got two pint bottles of beer, but afterwards changed his mind and ordered ten more. He did not remember which of the two men who were behind the bar sold him the liquor, nor could he remember who took it out to the cab which he had hired to make the trip to Burleigh. Another witness was called and he stated that a basket was brought out and he placed it in the back. He only noticed two bottles of beer and one of whiskey, but there may have been more for all he knew.

This was all the evidence taken and the Magistrate enlarged the case until Thursday morning. Mr. F. D. Kerr was present in the interests of the hotel keeper.

HE HAD TO PAY THE USUAL $2

John Sullivan got drunk last evening and fell into the hands of P. C. Newhall. At the police court this morning he pleaded not guilty and he told the Magistrate that he was not causing any trouble but was just out for a little time.

He did not remember doing anything out of the way but Officer Newhall explained things so different that the Magistrate imposed a fine of $2 and costs amounting to $5.75 which was paid by the prisoner and he was given his freedom.

HAS GONE TO COBALT

Mr. Charles Reid Accepts Position on Editorial Staff of Cobalt Citizen.

Mr. Charles Reid, of this city, left for Cobalt this afternoon, where he will accept a position on the editorial staff of the new paper being published in the Silver City, the Cobalt Citizen. The journal is being issued under the management of the Cobalt Publishing Co., which also controls a New Liskeard sheet.

Mr. Reid, who has been an operator on the Morning Times for over a year, and who has acted in that capacity on the Examiner and outside publications, is a newspaperman of much ability, and should make good on the Cobalt journal. He is very popular in the city, and his friends will wish him every prosperity in his new field.

STUDENTS WANT A NEW LIBRARY

Say the Sooner it Comes the Better

The following editorial appears in the Collegiate Echoes;

Sometimes it is stated that "everything comes to him who waits." In this connection one might ask the question as to how long the pupils of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute will have to wait before they enjoy the benefits of a good public library. The school library, in its present state, is inadequate. It is select, well chosen and well ordered, but it is limited, and such being the case, is unserviceable. By the regulations of the educational department every scholar shall read four standard works during each term that he or she is in attendance. This scheme was originally intended to encourage a taste for reading on the part of the pupils, but at present practically no opportunities are afforded the pupils of satisfying such a desire. The so-called public library on Water street is closed to the great majority of scholars and even if it were at their disposal it would by no means measure up to the standard required for a rising generation like the present. Why then this delay? We must have a new public library some day and we only voice the sentiments of the entire student body when we say that the sooner it comes the better.

THE YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

The Mock Parliament met last night at the club rooms. This was the first Thursday evening sitting and there was a large attendance of members—the largest yet.

The Lieutenant-Governor appeared in uniform in the House and intimated that he did not assent to the Women's Suffrage Bill; this act will therefore not become law.

The Provincial Treasurer brought down the accounts for the last session. They show a large surplus though the expenditure has increased very materially. The most noticeable increase was in the educational department. Altogether the showing for the year was satisfactory.

A bill to tax bachelors over the age of 21 was introduced by Prime Minister Mowry. He read the different clauses of the measure and explained that it was the intention of the Government to apply the revenue derived from this taxation to a fund for pensioning aged married people. The measure was supported by the Minister of Public Works, and by the member for East Hamilton in vigorous speeches whilst there was a strong protest against the principle of the bill from the members for East Peterborough. (G. Coons) and the Soo. The debate was adjourned and will be taken up again on Saturday night.

It was noticed that the ladies' gallery was not occupied during the discussion on the Bachelors' Bill.

AFFIRMATIVE WON DEBATE

Ability Greater Factor Than Environment in a Young Man's Success

That a young man's success in life depends more on his ability than on his environment was the decision of the judges in a debate held by the B.A.C. at the Knights of Pythias hall last night. Messrs. Ray Best, leader, W. Cochrane and E. Bruce were the speakers for the affirmative, and and Messrs. W. D. Campbell, leader, D. B. MacRae and C. Harmer upheld the negative, the subject being, "Resolved that a young man's success in life depends more on his ability than his environment."

The judges, Messrs. W. Warne, C. E. Sisson and Dr. J. E. Middleton, decided in favor of the affirmative by five points to four.

Mr. H. Latimer Banquetted Before Leaving for Chicago

Mr. Harry Latimer, of the drafting room of the C.G.E., was the guest of honor at a banquet tendered him last night by the Grafters 'Club, of which Mr. Latimer is a popular member.

The spread was given at Jacobi's restaurant and about forty guests were in attendance.

An informal toast list was run off and an impromptu programme given, to which the Mandolin Club of the C. G.E. contributed several much-appreciated selections.

Mr. Latimer is leaving for Chicago and was extended the good wishes of the gathering.

FOR CUTTING UP IN A BAR-ROOM

Young Man Was Fined $2 in Police Court

A well-known young man appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly in a local bar-room. He pleaded guilty. The proprietor of the hotel was called and stated that the prisoner came into the bar and started to mix things up, in which a pitcher and some glasses played a prominent part. He asked him to go out but the accused refused to and some loud language was used in which he was insulted by the prisoner. He did not wish to press the charge, but the Magistrate imposed a fine of $2.00 with costs, which amounted to $5.75, or fifteen days in gaol. The prisoner had only half the amount necessary and he was escorted to the cells.

Nine year old Jessie Hudson, of Kingston, skated 18 miles in two hours and a half.

THE WATER-COMMISSION'S CASE

So far as has been communicated to The Review the statement the Water Commissioners have to lay before the people respecting the new dam, etc., is about as follows:

It is absolutely necessary that there shall be increased pumpage of 6,000,000 gallons per day with two sets of 3,000,000 gals. each and increase of size of pump house; reconstruction of present forebays, wheel-pits, etc., also new tail race. In all, a cost of about $70,000 to $80,000 to make additions at present dam, and still have an antiquated leaking dam.

The commissioners propose that a new dam shall be built about 600 feet below the present one, where there is rock bottom, and where the dam would be 100 feet shorter than a new one on the site now occupied. This dam and power house can be built and the changes made, at less cost than can a new dam and necessary alterations be made at the dam now used.

After building the new dam the old one would be taken away, and the present power house and intake used in connection with a steam auxiliary plant which would be installed.

When work is completed there will be 1,200 horse power available at low water. Five hundred horse power will be required by the water works.

Seven hundred horse power can be taken by the city for street lighting, or can be sold to manufacturers. The cost to the city for power at the wheels will be about $2 per horse power per year, representing seven-twelfths of the interest and sinking fund on the debentures issued for the building of the dam alone, $40,000.

The time is opportune for building the dam—labor is plentiful, cement and other material is cheap, as compared with prices during the past few years.

Insurance rates will be advanced if pumpage is not increased.

The dam can be built out of the annual surplus received by the water commission. This past year the surplus was $9,000, while the sum required to meet the sinking fund and interest of the debentures is only $7,334. The demand for water supply is increasing very fast, which will add to the yearly surplus and water rates, instead of being increased, will more likely be further reduced.

DR. F. C. WILSON IS LEAVING NORWOOD

Dr. F. C. S. Wilson, who has been practicing as a physician in Norwood for the past three and a half years is moving to Lindsay, where he intends to continue the practice of his profession. WEDDING BELLS

FIFE—SARGENT

The beautiful and stately Metropolitan church, Toronto, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Tuesday afternoon, March 2nd, 1909 when Mr. Harry H. Fife, son of Mr Alfred A. Fife of Daisyworth, Norwood, led to the altar Miss Letitia P. Sargent, daughter of Mr. D. S. Sargent, of Ada, Michigan. The interesting ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. H. Adams of the Norwood Methodist church, and the couple looked extremely well as they stood together at the altar rail. The honeymoon is being spent in Toronto and other western points. It was fitting that the nuptials should be celebrated in the largest Methodist church in the province, as the groom has given faithful and unremitting service for over seven years as an usher in the Norwood Methodist church. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain.—Norwood Register.

FOUR ECLIPSES IN PRESENT YEAR

In the year 1909 there will be four eclipses two of the sun and two of the moon. A total eclipse of the moon will occur on June 23rd, partly visible here; a total eclipse of the sun June 17th visible here as a partial eclipse at sunset; a total eclipse of the moon November 27th visible here and a partial eclipse of the sun December 12, visible here.

WORK IS STARTED ON THE NEW DAM

Several men are at present engaged at the locks and are getting the ground and surroundings in shape or preparation for the coming of the larger gang of workmen. Mr. J. Ritchie of St. Catharines, contractor of the local works, arrived in town Tuesday evening. A number of the wooden structures have been torn down and a stone wall foundation has been made on which the G.T.R. line already giving service to the elevators along the river, will be extended to the bridge at Lindsay.—Lindsay Warder.

CANNOT COMPETE WITH BRITAIN WOOLLEN MILLS TO CLOSE

The Montreal Woollen Mills at Seigneurs street bridge which in the height of their prosperity gave employment to 200 hands, will be closed up at the end of April, and the factory premises sold. Already nearly all the few remaining hands have been dismissed and the machinery is now being taken down. Some of it has been sold to knitting firms in Ontario and the best of the remainder will be sent to England for sale.

The reason the firm gives for going out of business is that with only thirty per cent protection, it has found that woollen manufacturers in Canada cannot hold their own against British competition. A visit to the factory this morning would appear to bear out the claim of the directors that it is not lack of up to date machinery which has handicapped the firm, for the plant is an extensive and thoroughly modern one, equipped with almost every economical contrivance on the market. The huge three story building is filled on every floor with complicated machinery now for the most part lying idle or being dismantled.

Mr. Joseph Horsfall, the managing director, said that 18 years ago he invested his money in the mills and took charge as managing director. At that time there was a duty of 50 per cent on the particular line of goods which the firm manufactured, namely, low priced woollens. For fourteen years he made a profit of 10 per cent on the capital invested. Then the government began to lower the duty, reducing it gradually to 23 1-2 per cent. This allowed the Yorkshire manufacturers to get into the market and they got such a hold that although the duty was raised to 30 per cent the Canadian manufacturers could not hold their own. Ever since the duty was lowered his firm had been losing money. Loss on working for the six months ending October 1907, was $5000; for the six months ending April 1908, $9000; for the six months ending October, 1908, $12,000.

"Well," said Mr Horsfall, "we could not go on losing at the rate of $24,000 a year, so we have decided to stop and after April 1st, we shall cease to manufacture. We have not worked even as much as half time for three years. We have had plenty of capital to work with, we have paid cash for everything and we have up-to-date machinery but its all no good under the lowered protection. Two years ago I engaged a Leeds man as a designer, and he said that for every one factory in Yorkshire fitted up better than ours there were two not so well equipped. So you see, it is not that our methods are antiquated. Seventy-five per cent of the woollen mills in Canada have closed since the duty was lowered and now only five per cent of this class of woollen goods used in this country is manufactured here. If we were running full time we could manufacture at a ten per cent. cheaper rate than we have been doing for three years. The Americans make 95 per cent of the woollen they consume because they have been adequately protected. Yet their market is only for ninety millions of people, as against the six hundred millions of people all over the world for whom the British manufacture.

"You can see for yourself what a splendid plant we have. Here we are, situated right on the canal, from which we get water of from two hundred to three hundred horse power. We value our plant at over two hundred thousand dollars, yet we are now selling out our looms that cost us not very long ago four or five hundred dollars for a hundred dollars each. It is discouraging to see a fine industry such as this was being crushed out but we can not go on losing at the rate of twenty-four thousand dollars a year."—Montreal Witness.

BARBERS SIGNING PETITIONS FOR A REGULATION BILL

It is expected that a bill for the protection of public health and known as "The Barbers' Registration Act," will be brought before the provincial legislature. Petitions are being distributed throughout the province by the Ontario Union for the signature of the journeymen and bosses. The one for the local union is expected to arrive at any mail and when it has been signed will be given to Mr T. E. Bradburn, MPP, who will be requested to use his influence for the success of the measure.

One thing aimed at is the abolition of the short course barber schools, who grant a certificate of qualification to students after they have served but a few weeks and a clause of the bill calls for all barbers having served the regular three years' apprenticeship.

Provision is also made for the inspection of barber shops by the health authorities and for the punishment of barbers who violate the health regulations.

There are many other clauses of importance in the bill which is wide in its scope and is being generally signed throughout the province.

TWO LITTLE BOYS HAD A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

The two little sons of Mr. W. R. Purdy of Cordova had a narrow escape from death on Feb. 22nd. The boys were sitting on a log in the woods watching workmen cutting timber, when a log fell on the one they were sitting on, rolling it over and throwing them both underneath. The workmen rushed to the spot expecting to find the children crushed to death, but fortunately a small limb held up one end of the log and the two escaped with slight bruises.

MONSTER NEW ELEVATOR TO BE BUILT AT VICTORIA HARBOR

Orillia, March 4.—Following out the policy of making the Orillia—Peterborough line its main grain route the Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to let the contract for the erection of a new grain elevator at Victoria Harbor, to the John S. Metcalfe Company of Chicago. The capacity of the new elevator will be two million bushels, and the price at which the contract has been let is in the neighborhood of $900,000. This sum will, however, include the building of wharves and other equipment necessary to make Victoria Harbor a successful grain port. Robert P. Durham, secretary of the John S. Metcalfe Company, who was in town last week, stated that work will be commenced immediately, as the elevator and wharves are to be completed within a year.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARY A. HARTLEY.

Mr. Wm. Hartley has just returned home from Lawrence, Mass., where he had been called by the death of his mother, Mrs Mary A. Hartley, which took place at the residence of her son, John, very suddenly on Saturday last, Feb. 28th. The deceased lady had been ailing for some time, but her death was unexpected and came as a shock to her friends in Peterborough, as well as in Lawrence, where she had resided for a number of years. Previous to moving to Lawrence the deceased had lived in this city, where she had a large circle of friends. She leaves to mourn her loss four sons Wm. G., of this city; John, of Lawrence, Mass.; Frank, of Providence, R.I., and James, of Minneapolis, Minn.

The funeral was held on Tuesday, March 2nd, from her late residence, in Lawrence and was largely attended. Numerous floral offerings showed the high esteem in which Mrs. Hartley was held. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Lake, of the 2nd Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member, burial taking place at Lawrence.

QUAKER SEVEN CHAMPIONS OF THE MERCANTILE LEAGUE

Defeated C.G.E. Team in Final Game at Brock-st. Rink—Score Was Close, 4-3—Losers Ahead at Half Time.

The Quakers are champions of the Mercantile League. That they won it fairly by superior playing will hardly be disputed by the large number who were present at Brock street rink last night to witness the game. The score was 4-3. The breakfast food seven have a fast team and their good all round work especially in the second half kept the spectators on the move all the time. In the early stages of the game the CGE looked good for the championship but once the Quakers got going it was very easy to surmise as to what the outcome would be. Both teams had about the same in weight, but the winners were faster skaters and got away with the puck more quickly, and displayed good judgment when near the nets. They played a pretty fair combination and shot well on the nets and always followed up so quickly that the Electric men could not get going on very many dangerous looking rushes. Their checking, which was a big feature of the game could hardly be improved upon and there was no sign of rough house work at any stage of the game.

The Canadian General as has been stated, looked good in the first half but their team work was not of a very high order, and they soon fell to pieces leaving the bulk of the work to fall on two or three of the team who could not do much against the clever checking of their opponents. The defence played a hard game, and made some good rushes, but generally lost the puck on account of nobody being on hand to pass it to.

Riley, in goal, saved his team from having a bigger score registered against them by his clever work between the nets, especially in the last part of the game when the Quakers were doing a lot of shooting.

The forwards were all good, but the work of Keneally and Elliott was of the high class variety.

For the winners Pratt and Heffernan on the forward line were most prominent, their work being a big factor in the scoring. Moore and Heaslip put up a fine game on the defence, while Callahan handled a number of shots in clever style, and the ones that beat him would keep the best of them guessing.

The half time score was 2-1 in favor of the CGE, but the Quakers came back strong in the second period and the score stood 4-3 in their favor at the finish.

FIRST HALF.

The game started off at a fast clip. The Quakers secured the puck and after some fast work around their opponents nets, Pratt put one past Riley for the first score of the evening.

Rightmeyer journeyed to the penalty box for slashing and a short time after Elliott scored for the Canadian General.

The puck travelled up and down the ice with both teams working hard and after about ten minutes Elliott kicked another in but the referee did not see it and the goal counted.

Clancy missed a nice pass in front of the goal and took revenge on his check and took a rest for two minutes.

Rightmeyer, who was putting up a great game got away with a nice rush but was called back for using his feet, and a few minutes later, Riley was called to stop a hot one from Pratt.

The puck was shot down near the Quakers' goal, but Moroe secured it and lifted a nice one right on the nets bur Riley saw it coming.

Hughes went off for tripping and a few minutes after, Rightmeyer went to the box fro the same offence.

The Quakers were trying hard to score but could not connect with the nets.

Elliott and Keneally got away with a nice combination rush and Callaghan was called upon to handle a hot one and a few minutes later Allen shot another but it was wide.

The first half ended with both teams working hard.

SECOND HALF.

After the rest the Quakers forced the play and the Canadian General defence had a busy time for a while.

Elliott went off for playing too strenuous and Carson got the same dose shortly after.

The Quakers were having the best of the play and Riley was kept busy.

Finally after ten minutes fast play Pratt scored on a pass from Heffernan, tieing the score.

Hughes took a minute for slashing and Allen secured the puck and shot but it was wide.

The Canadian General were working hard to score but Callaghan prevented them by good wrok between the posts.

After ten minutes hard playing, Heffernan put his team one to the good by a nice shot from the side and Pratt got another after a fine exhibition of stick handling.

Both teams were playing strong and from a mix-up in front of the Quakers net, Elliott got a counter for the Canadian General and the game was called a few minutes later with the score standing 4-3 in favor of the Quakers.

The teams were:

Quakers		CGE.
	Goal
Callaghan		Riley
	Point
Heaslip		Reid

The teams lined up in the following order:

Callaghan, goal; Heaslip, point; Moore, cover; Rightmyer, rover; Pratt, centre; Heffernan, left wing; Huard, right wing.

There was some pretty classy bowling in the ten pin tournament last night. The Belmonts were on deck again for the first time in several weeks, and Wareham, who has been at the Atlantic Coast evidently got a few pointers, because he bowled 593 against the Bankers and 550 against the Pacifics. Mellroy also was away beyond the reach of ordinary mortals. His total was 604, and had his two associates been on the job the Pacifics Wareham's high single game score was 232, and Mellroy's high score was 229. Pollard was in good form too. He bowled 192 twice against the Pacifics.

There is always a comedian with every good show, and the funny fellows last night were the Examiner B's and the Lock Works. Their scores ran all the way from 95 to 186, with the majority below the 150 mark. The printers, however, squeezed out a win of three straights. They won the first game and the second was a tie. Then the newspapermen took the third and won the second.

The score awere as follows:

WILD CATS BEAT THE RINK RATS

Score Was 3-1---No Goals Had Been Notched at Half Time

The Wild Cats and Rink Rats were the first attraction at Brock street rink last night, the Wild Cats winning by 3—1, and both teams put up a good quality of hockey and did their best to amuse the fans who were on hand to see the contest. Neither team could find the nets in the first half of the game although it was principally on account of the fine work of the goal tenders. But after the resting period the Wild Cats got busy and Fish O'Hearne, after a mix-up in front of the nets, drove one past Smiley O'Toole, who had fallen asleep. But the Rink Rats went in for revenge and by a pretty rush from his own position Steve Holland evened matters up on a shot from the side. Both Teams were now getting excited and the players began to introduce a few specialties which took well with the rooters. But the Wild Cats were after the game, and by some fast work Sullivan had the Rats looking rather scared by putting a counter past O'Toole on the rebound after that artist had made the hit of the night by stopping a fast one with his nose. The Rink Rats put up a brave fight and tried to tie the score, gut it was not to be for shortly before the finish Sullivan scored again and it was up to Manager Laroue to put up the champagne supper. The young lads are to be commer in which they took their bumps which were of a considerable number there being no evidence of dirty or underhand work. For the winners Sullivan, Banty Evans, the boy wonder, and O'Hearne played a good game while O'Toole, Holland and Sullivan were always prominent for the losers. Bill Shortt gave good satisfaction with the bell.

The teams were:—

Rink Rats.		Wild Cats.
	Goal
O'Toole		Dominico
	Point.
McIntee		Primeau
	Cover Point
Holland		Clancy
	Rover
Holland		Sullivan
	Centre
Sullivan		Evans
	Right Wing
Henthorne		Callaghan
	Left Wing
Armstrong		O'Hearne

CHICKEN HEARTED AND COLD FOOTED

Uncharitable and Yellow---Examiner Seven Wants to Quit

The Examiner hockey team is evidently funking this year. They want so much, win, lose or draw, like all other champions they claim. Of course the Exam. seven holds the championship of the Examiner-Review League, but the excuse won't do. They are in possession of the trophy and the Review challenges Joshua Craig and his slashing six to play the annual game, which is just as much a fixture as the annual meeting of any club or society. Only professional foot-runners claim any right to hold out for big guarantees. Anyway the proceeds of the game are for the Children's Aid Society, and surely the Examinerites, even as unprincipled as they are, do not intend to cheat the dependant kids out of a substantial portion.

There is no possible excuse of backing out of the match. The intermediates didn't get out of their district this year and the public, as a consequence, are hungering for a real fast exhibition of hockey before the season is over.

Considerable comment has been aroused by the Shylocklike demand of the champions for a big guarantee before going on the ice, and in view of the game being in the interests of charity it would be a most inconsiderate, unsympathetic and unsportsmanlike action for the Grit "hockey players" to overlook the defi. What's the answer?

WRESTLING

Cleveland, March 4.—One of the longest no fall wrestling matches on record ended at 2 o'clock this morning, when the referee called a draw for John Billeter, of Toledo, and Eugene Tremblay, of Montreal. The men went on for the lightweight championship of the world, a purse of $400 and side bet of $500. After they had struggled for four hours and fifteen minutes without either having gained a fall, the 2,000 spectators demanded a finish of some sort, and the referee called it an even break.

During the first hour Tremblay had a slight advantage, but his opponent was the aggressor for the rest of the time and only the Canadian's excellent defense saved him.

Neither Britain nor Canada may send teams to the Palma Trophy match this year.

WILL PRACTICE AT 7 TO-NIGHT

Juniors and West Ends in Preparation for Juniors-P. C .I. Game Thursday

The local O.H.A. juniors will turn out to practice with the West Ends tonight from 7 to 8 o'clock in preparation for the former's game with the P.C.I. on Thursday night. This match should be a most interesting one and the P.C.I. seven should give the juniors a real hard run for their money.

By the way they have shaped up this season the Collegiate septette have proved to the fans that they are capable of playing smooth hockey. Both teams have quite a following and the crowd should be a good one.

PEARCE FELL AND LOST RACE

Norwood, March 2.—A relay race of one mile in which Mr. Russel S. Pearce was matched to skate four of Norwood's swiftest gliders in the persons of Herman McNicholl, Orval Johnston, Alex. Kempt and J. R. Finlay took place at the rink last Thursday night. Notwithstanding the cold night there was a fairly good attendance to witness the race, which was the one topic in local sporting circles for some days previous. The relays skated four rounds each, Johnston being the first to enter the arena. At the end of the fourth lap McNicholl entered the chase and was followed in turn by Kempt and Finlay, all of whom set a hot pace. Pearce appeared to have plenty of speed and kept close behind each contestant until the last lap, when he quickened his pace, and in attempting to pass Finlay he fell thus forfeiting the race. Many of Pearce's backers have great confidence in him yet and are sure he would come out ahead if another race was put on.

Supports Shrubb

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—In your paper, dated 4th March you have inserted a few verses entitled "Hard Lines," which I have no doubt have come through one of my Brother Woodmen. Now sir, I would like to ask, have your readers heard the little ditty, "What is good for Jack would be equally good for Jill." Or rather Alfred Shrubb came to the front like a man and ran Tom Longboat at Tom's own distance, with the full understanding that Tom would show up at the time and date fixed to give Alfred a show at his distance, but I am sorry to say his heart or his feet gave out, now sir, Alfred Shrubb was beaten, but not disgraced, but Longboat is afraid to be either, or if he isn't why does he not come forward and run Shrubb at fifteen or twenty miles, at which he promised and then if he can win it will be quite time for my Brother Woodman to boast.

Trusting I am not intruding on your valuable space,

I remain,

Yours etc.,

J. A. DOE.

SPORTING COMMENT

David Hartley who has entered the International six day go as you please race in Madison Square Garden commencing on Monday next has been meeting with only fair success in his canvass to secure sufficient funds to pay his entrance fee and transport to New York. Peterborough people are evidently tired of paying for Hartleys sport—Port Hope Guide.

AGED LIONS.

The Big Brutes Get Lazy and Spiritless as They Grow Old.

As he grows old a lion gets lazy and spiritless, says Everybody's. The haughty beast that stares at the crowd outside his cage usually is as fierce of spirit as a fat night watchman who blinks out upon the dark world through the circle of light cast by the lamp at his feet.

With plenty to eat, nothing to annoy him and a keeper to look after his cage, the king of beasts becomes as peaceful, portly and self satisfied as some of our latter day human monarchs, whose ministers of army, navy, state and other things take proper care of the regal edge and see to it that the usual three square meals per day await the royal gullet at the proper hours.

The story book impression that lions are always on the hunt in their native jungle is quite at variance with the truth. Indeed, the older lions will frequently go hungry or seek the leavings of another beast's kill rather than summon the energy to hunt prey for themselves.

In a group of ten or twelve trained lions two or three young, nervous animals usually supply the act with all its dash and spirit. The others are somnambulists.

Tigers, too, frequently grow lethargic with advancing years, but never to such a degree as the aging lion. There is always a pinch of ginger in the big striped cat. For that reason he makes a more spectacular performer than the lion and usually a tougher proposition for the trainer.

THE REVIEW'S European Tour and Diamond Contest

—To-Day is the Time to Give—

The Promised New Subscription to Your Favorite Candidate

It is worth more Votes now than it will be after next Monday.

EXTRA VOTE OFFER CLOSES MARCH 8--CONTEST ENDS MARCH 22.

ANOTHER FINE DAY IN TRIP TO EUROPE CONTEST

Herb McMillan Makes Another Jump Into the Lead in His List—Miss Ethel Bell the Heavy City Voter—P. G. Towns Comes Again—Others Make Small Gains.

COUNTRY DISTRICT STILL IN LEAD

Thousands of Votes Have Been Issued and Many More Will be—The Club Offer Has Been a Boon to Vote Hunters and Many Are Putting Aside a Reserve Stock of Notes.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

Through an error in the figures Mr Smithson was not credited with a 4000 vote yesterday. This amount, together with an additional 500, is added to his score today. The seesaw in the ladies' city list continues Miss Dawson securing second place today. While the voting has been lively all week, indications point to some fast going soon, and there may be a surprise or two within a few days. Any candidate in the five-figure column will bear watching. Each day the difficulty to pick the candidate who will poll the highest increases.

TRIP TO EUROPE

Miss Rose P. Moore.

FIRSTS

Miss Maude Perry.
Miss Lila Finlay.
P. G. Towns.
Herb. McMillan.

SECONDS

Miss Birdie Dawson.
Miss Ada Holcombe.
W. G. Rundle.
Sidney A. Smithson.

But it does NOT end to-day.

Have you improved the opportunity to put aside a fund of votes for the finish? If the bonus vote given to clubs of five Dailies and ten Weeklies has not been of any benefit to you, you have overlooked a big chance to gain a lap in the race for this European tour and handsome diamonds and gold watches. However, there is still time to get a club or two if you start at once. There is no limit to the number of clubs we will issue ballots for.

The club offer closes at nine o'clock Monday evening. All city candidates must bring or send their new subscriptions to the Review office by that time to have them counted in the clubs. Contestants in District No 2. are privileged to mail their new subscriptions any time Monday, and they will be included in the clubs. tion of the regular certificates or spe- It is not necessary to vote any percial ballots to get the clubs. Simply turn them in and get as many as you can.

Weekly subscribers will notice that the ballot this week is good for eight votes. Through an error the Daily ballot for two votes was inserted in the Weekly and the increase this week is to make up for this loss to the Weekly subscribers.

"A summer of pleasure in a world of beauty," are the words of an Ontario lady who spent a season abroad visiting some of the points which the Review's European tour winner will touch. Probably nowhere on earth is it possible to lay out an itinerary that would guarantee so enjoyable a vacation as has been planned in this comprehensive exploration of the old world.

Forty days of pleasure. That is a longer period than the active part of the contest. Starting from Boston, the lucky one will have an opportunity to "look around" in the Hub of the United States. Then comes the delightful ocean voyage, at the best time of the year—July. The landing is made at Glasgow, the great shipbuilding centre, then historic Edinburgh will be visited. Four days will be spent in London, and the same length of time in Paris, each city a world in itself. As the returning port will be Montreal, the St Lawrence and French-Canadian scenes will greet the eye. Is such a trip worth a little extra effort?

Candidates who have taken short time subscriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subscription and the full number cheduled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subscription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"Don't do it over the phone," said Droom quickly. "I'm going past his house. I'll stop in and tell him. Let me out, officer. I must get out of these wet garments. I'm an old man, you know."

The probable solution had come to Droom like a flash. As he hurried up the street his mind was full of the theory. He scarcely could wait for the door of David Cable's house to be opened in response to his vigorous ringing. The maid announced that Mr. and Mrs. Cable were out. It was enough for Droom. He put the puzzle together in that instant. David Cable's face was the one he had seen, not James Bansemer's. The maid set up a hysterical shrieking when he bluntly told her of the mishap to her mistress, but he did not wait to answer questions. He was off to find James Bansemer. The volcano he had been watching so long was about to burst, and he knew it.

Forgetting his wet garments, he entered a drug store and telephoned to Bansemer's home. His employer answered the call so readily that Droom knew he had not been far from the instrument that evening. There was a note of disappointment in his voice when Droom's hoarse tones replied to his polite "Hello!"

"I'll be over in half an hour," said Droom. "Very important business. Is Graydon there?"

"He's just gone to Cable's. Some one telephoned for him a minute or so ago. What's wrong? Do you know?"

"I'll be there in fifteen minutes," was all that Droom would say.

Elias' memory could not carry him back to the time when he had hired a cab. A cab was one of the luxuries he had not cultivated. One can only imagine his surprise, then, when he found himself hailing a passing hansom, and greater the surprise he must have felt when he clambered in and ordered the driver to go in a gallop to a certain place in Wells street. Ten minutes later he was attired in dry, warm clothes and in the cab again, bound for Bansemer's home. What he said to James Bansemer on that memorable occasion need not be repeated. It is only necessary to say that his host was bitterly impressed and willing to admit that the developments might prove serious. They could only speculate as to what had transpired between David Cable and his wife out there by the sea wall, but it was enough for them to know that a crisis was at hand.

"We'll see what the morning papers say about the affair," said Bansemer, uneasy and cold.

The morning papers were full of the sensational robbery, the prominence of the victim and the viciousness of the attack. Elias Droom read the accounts eagerly as he breakfasted in the dingy little restaurant near his home, bright and early. He grinned appreciably over the share of glory that fell to him, and he actually cackled over the new developments in the great mystery.

He had observed with relief that the name of James Bansemer was not mentioned. The reports from the bedside of the robber's victim were most optimistic. She was delirious from the effects of the shock, but no serious results were expected. The great headlines on the first page of the paper he was reading set his mind temporarily at rest. There was no suggestion of truth in them.

The reader of this narrative, who knows the true facts in the case, is doubtless more interested in the movements and emotions of David Cable than in the surmises of others. It would be difficult for a certainty to ask one to put himself in Cable's place and to experience the sensations of that unhappy man as he fled along the dark shore of the lake. Perhaps much will be taken on faith if the writer simply says that the fugitive finally slunk from the weeds and refuse of what was then called "the district of Lake Michigan"—"Streeterville" in local parlance—to find himself panting and terror stricken in the bleak east end of Chicago avenue. It was not until then that he secured control of his nerves and resorted to the stealth and cunning of the real criminal.

From that time until he stood shivering and white with dogged intention in a theater foyer, bent upon establishing an alibi, his movements are scarcely worth the details. Between the acts he saw a dozen men whom he knew and he took drinks with several of them. His tremendous will power carried him through the ordeal in a way that could not have fallen to the good fortunes of the ordinary lawbreaker.

Every second of the time his thoughts were of the thing which was being buffeted by the icy waters of the lake. Where was that thing now? How far out into the lake had it been carried?

His body was covered with the cold perspiration of dread and horror. His soul was moaning; his whole being was aghast with the awfulness of the deed; he could have shrieked aloud in his madness. How he lived through the hour in that theater he never could have told, nor could he believe that he was sitting there with all those frightful thoughts piling themselves upon him. Other people laughed and shouted with happiness; he stared and wept in his heart and shivered and cringed and groaned within himself.

He had killed her! She had been true to him, and yet he had taken her life, the life she had given him! He gave no thought to Jane, no thought to Bansemer. He thought only of himself as the slayer.

Would her body be recovered? What would be his excuse, what his punishment? The gallows? A thousand horrors ran riot in his brain, a thousand tremors with each.

But why dwell upon the feelings of this miserable wretch? Why say more of his terror, his misery, his remorse? He held himself in the seat until the middle of the last act of the play. At last, unable to restrain himself longer, he arose and almost ran from the theater. That instinct which no slayer can control or explain was overpowering him. It was the instinct which attracts the murderer to the spot where his crime was committed. No man can describe or define this resistless impulse, and yet all criminology records it, clear and unmistakable. It is no less than a form of curiosity. Driven by this irresistible force, David Cable, with bravado that cost him dearly, worked his uninterrupted way to the scene of his crime. By trolley car to Chicago avenue and then, like a homeless dog scenting his way fearfully, to a corner not far from the break in the wall.

His legs trembled and his eyes grew wide with dread. The swish of the water came to his ears, and he stood still for many minutes, listening for a cry for help from off the shore. But none came, and again skulking alongside the houses of his friends, he covered the blocks that lay between him and the magnetic rift in the wall. Near the corner he stopped, with a start of alarm.

The figure of a man could be seen standing like a statue on the very spot where he had seen her disappear. While he stood there, his heart scarcely beating, the solitary figure was joined by two others. Cable shrank back into the dense shadows. Like a flash it occurred to him that they were searching for the body. A shriek of agony arose to his lips. But he checked it.

Far off on one of the crosstown streets a newsboy was calling an extra—hoarse, unintelligible shouts that froze his blood. He bent his ear to catch the faraway words of the boy, "All about de nor' side murder!" He cringed and shook under the raucous shout. He knew what it meant.

A policeman suddenly turned the corner and came toward him. The first impulse was to fly; the next was to stand and deliver himself. The resolution came with shocking unexpectedness. He would give himself up! He would admit that he had killed his wife! The words of anguish were on his lips when the policeman spoke.

"Is it you, Mr. Cable? How is she, sir?"

Cable did not hear the man, for, as he opened his lips to cry out his own guilt, a thought formed in his brain that almost staggered him with its cunning savagery. Why not let the penalty fall on James Bansemer? She had gone out to meet him! If she had not destroyed the note it would hang James Bansemer, and James Bansemer was worse than a murderer. But even as this remarkable thought rushed into his brain the last words of the officer began to drive it out.

"Is she going to pull through, sir?" was the next question, and he caught it vaguely.

"Pull through?" he murmured inarticulately. He leaned against a great stone rail suddenly. Everything was leaping before his eyes.

"Good Lord, Mr. Cable—I—I forgot. Don't you know about it?" gasped the officer.

"Know what?" asked Cable, completely dazed.

"Go home at once, sir. I didn't mean to—oh, hurry, sir. Don't be worried. They say she'll be all right. Sure! She's been hurt a little, sir."

THE C.G.E. ANGLING CLUB HONOR DEPARTING MEMBER

Mr. Harry Latimer, who is leaving in a few days for Chicago, was presented with a locket by the CGE Angling Club at noon today. Mr. Latimer has been a popular member of the club and his departure is much regretted by his brother anglers. The following address was read with the presentation:

Mr Harry Latimer,

Brother Angler,—

It is with feelings of deepest regret that we, your associates of the Canadian General Electric Angling Club, assembled together on this occasion to bid farewell to you and to wish you God speed.

We feel that your departure from our midst means a great loss to our club, as your presence at our numerous outings was always a source of pleasure and enjoyment to us all and we sincerely hope that your energetic qualities and unassuming disposition may be the means of making friends for you in your new field of labor.

We feel that we cannot let this opportunity pass without expressing in a tangible manner our appreciation of your good qualities and will ask you to accept this locket as a small token of our esteem and good wishes and we hope in years to come that it may be the means of reminding you of many happy hours you have spent with us in our summer cottage at Rice Lake.

FUSE BLEW OUT, YOUNG MAN WAS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Mr. L. H. Sheen of the drafting room of the C.G.E., was badly burned yesterday afternoon about five o'clock, a switch blowing out and burning his face and hands, and also injuring his hands.

Dr. Young was immediately summoned and dressed the young man's injuries after which he was removed to the Nicholls Hospital in the ambulance.

While Mr. Sheen is painfully and seriously burned his condition is not regarded as dangerous.

FIRST VISIT IN FORTY-FIVE YEARS

Mr. A. M. Patterson Here From Buffalo, N.Y.---Left Peterborough When He Was Young Man.

There arrived in the city last night a gentleman who had not seen Peterborough for forty-five years. He was Mr A M Patterson, of Buffalo, NY., and he is the guest of his sister, Mrs Alex Scott, Sherbrooke St.

Mr Patterson was born in Cavan township and when a youth came to Peterborough as a clerk in a general store which was conducted by a Mr. McNabb. A few years later he went to New York State and twenty-five years ago settled in Buffalo where he conducts a successful produce business dealing principally in poultry. He has never been in Peterborough or district since he left here in 1864. This winter he started on a visit to his brothers and sisters and came to Peterborough from Kansas where he has a number of relatives. There are eight of the family alive and all are over 66 years of age.

Mr. Patterson will remain here for a few days.

A WHOLESALE DRY GOODS HOUSE FOR PETERBOROUGH

In a short time a wholesale dry goods house of small staple lines will be opened in the city by Mr. Wm. J. Hopwood, who is well-known in this city.

Several weeks ago he purchased the building at the corner of Water and Simcoe streets, which is now used as a second-hand store. At first Mr. Hopwood will only open sample rooms and a portion of the store is now being fitted up for that purpose.

Mr. Hopwood has secured admirable quarters for a wholesale house and as he has been connected with this line of business for thirty years, during which time he has made a great host of friends throughout the country, it is safe to predict that in a short time he will have worked up a large business. The enterprise will be a valuable addition to the commercial interests of Peterborough.

W. P. STRICKLAND VICTIM OF ACCIDENT AT TORONTO

A Toronto despatch says: Walter R Strickland, the architect, had a close call for his life last evening when, caught between two trolley cars he fell prostrate and lay on the devil strip. Had he slipped to either side he would have been under the wheels.

Mr Strickland who is 65 years of age was crossing Kings street toward the King Edward to catch an east-bound car when a westbound car came along without warning. It was going rather slowly and he jumped on the fender but had to jump off again and was caught between the two cars. He slipped and fell, but lay still. Both cars stopped and he managed to crawl out.

He was taken home to 286 Huron street and will be laid up several days from bruises and shock.

Mr Strickland is a brother of Mr. Roland Strickland of Lakefield and is well known in Peterborough.

MR. JAS. BAPTIE GAVE TALK ON WYANDOTTES AND "ROCKS"

At the meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association last night at the hall over T. N. Brown's store, Simcoe street, Mr. Jas. Baptie, of Springville gave a comprehensive and interesting talk on Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks. He discussed the worth of all varieties of the birds from different points of views and birds were used for purposes of demonstration. Mr. Baptie's instructive talk was much appreciated by the large attendance of members.

Mr. Geo. Paxman, the president, was in the chair.

It is the intention of the Association to bring Prof. Garham, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, here within a month to give his lecture on the fattening and raising of poultry. The lecture will be illustrated by limelight views and will be given in a public hall, arrangements for which are now being made.

The poultrymen of Peterborough intend to make their association more successful than ever this year, and have excellent prospects of doing so. The membership is most satisfactory and is steadily growing. The association was much encouraged by its first annual show, and purpose having its next one second to none in the province.

CHILD AT SHELTER

Little Girl Brought up From Belmont by Mr. George Cochrane

Yesterday Mr. George Cochrane, the local agent for the Children's Aid Society, brought a little girl six years of age, from Belmont, to the Children's Shelter. The child's name is Rosebush and the family home, which is about four miles west of Havelock was not regarded as a proper place for her to remain in.

This last point is a matter of dispute, and will probably be settled when the case comes up before County Police Magistrate Edmison in a few days.

TWO KILLED NEAR MADOC

Explosion in Mine in Elzivir Township---Two Others Were Badly Injured

Special to the Review.

Madoc, Ont., March 5.—While a gang were engaged in drilling on what is known as the Vankleek gold property in Elzivir township, about ten miles north of Madoc, this morning, an explosion took place, as a result of which Dan Phillips was killed instantly and Felix Eloro was so badly injured that he died soon after. George Young was slightly injured about the head and U. C. Moore had his hands badly torn. It is supposed an unexploded blast was struck.

An unknown Galician was found dead at Sandilands, Man., with his throat cut.

Rev. T. R. Shearer, of Melbourne, was appointed Moderator of London Presbytery.

WAS SEIZED WITH A STROKE

And Died This Afternoon at Nicholls Hospital---Death of Mr. T. H. Darcy

The death occurred at Nicholls hospital to-day at noon of Mr. Thos. A. Darcy, proprietor of the Burleigh Falls Hotel. The deceased gentleman, who was in his 58th year, was taken suddenly ill this morning with a paralytic stroke, and despite all medical assistance, death followed quickly. The late Mr. Darcy had been visiting his son, Mr. Fred Darcy, in the city, and had been in good health up to the time of his sudden illness this morning.

Those in the family who are left to mourn his loss beside his wife, are Messrs. Fred, of town; Warren, of Burleigh Falls; Roland, of Lakefield; Mrs. Valtrainor, of New York, and Mrs. Wm. Cowie, of Simcoe street, is a sister of the deceased. The funeral arrangements have not been completed, but the funeral will likely be held from the residence of Mr. Wm. Cowie, on Simcoe street.

CANADA JOINS IN THE IMPERIAL STAFF SCHEME

There Will be Reservations, However.

Sir Frederick Borden Makes Statement---Welland Canal Also Discussed.

Ottawa, March 6.—Sir Frederick Borden's reply to the memorandum of the Imperial Government on the formation of a general staff for the Empire makes it plain that while the Dominion Government accepts the plan laid down it cannot agree to giving up full control of the chief of the local section of the staff.

The return tabled yesterday consists of a letter from the Secretary of the War Office, London, to the Under Secretary of State for the Colonial Office, and the reply of the Canadian Government. The letter sets out what should be done to ensure imperial defence, which is summarized as follows:

1. The necessity for the maintenance of sea supremacy, which alone can ensure any military co-operation at all.

2. The desirability of a certain broad plan of military organization for the Empire.

3. The division of the armed forces of the Empire into two parts, the first having local defence as its function, the second designed for the service of the Empire as a whole.

The memorandum attached urges the formation of a general staff, the members of which shall have substantially the same education, preferably at the staff college at Camberly, England. The general staff, it is urged, must be an entity throughout the Empire, and to make it so all its members ought to be uniformly trained in principles and practice in one school under one head. Interchange of staff officers is recommended and periodical general conferences; also a uniformity in the regulations and training of all military units in the army throughout the Empire.

This communication from the War Office was sent by Lord Crewe to Earl Grey on Jan. 15. The matter was taken up by the Privy Council and the following answer returned to Lord Crewe by Earl Grey:

"My Minister fully accept principles set forth in memorandum by general staff. Despatch will follow explaining precise position of Dominion Government."

This despatch is based upon the recommendation of Sir Frederick Borden, who pointed out that while the Canadian Government could give a general adherence to the plan of imperial defence that "the full control of the chief of the local section of the general staff by his own Government must be accepted from the outset"; also that while local officers may keep in close communication with the chief of the general staff; "they cannot receive orders from him."

The Minister says that while local officers may advise the Imperial Government, yet "when their advice is not accepted it will be their duty to carry out whatever their respective Governments may order."

In short, the Government reiterates the stand taken by the Canadian Ministers at London in 1902, when rejecting the suggestions made by Lord Selborne respecting the navy, and by Mr. St. John Broderick respecting the army.

An item for the Welland Canal was taken up, and Mr. Lalor urged the claims of Port Maitland to be the terminus of the new Welland. Hon. John Haggart pointed out that the Imperial authorities favored Port Maitland and asked for a statement as to the proposal to build a new canal.

Hon. Mr. Graham thought if the present canal were deepened to 22 feet Canada would be able to carry her own tonnage and also to successfully compete with the Erie Canal. When the financial situation eased up somewhat an aggressive policy would be adopted.

Dr. Chisholm (Huron) called attention to the report that the Nelson River could be made navigable to Winnipeg. Mr. Graham thought it was too large an undertaking to be considered now.

An item for the lighting of the Welland Canal caught the eye of Mr. Foster. "We were," he observed, "selling water to the Cataract Power Co. for $30,000 a year, equivalent to 20,000 h.p., and buying the finished product back from the same company for $14 per h.p. Did the Minister think we were getting enough for the water." The Minister did, in view of the fact that the company had spent a vast sum of money in development.

The Grand Trunk Pacific had not, Mr. Graham informed Major Sharpe, made overtures for the taking over of the Quebec Bridge.

Mr. Foster had heard of the suggestion to bore under the river and get away from the difficulty of swinging a bridge overhead.

"Utterly impracticable," said Mr. Graham.

The Railway Commission will cost in the neighborhood of $107,000 this year and Mr. Graham thinks it is worth the money. He enlarged on the ability of Chairman Mabee.

"What about the vice-chairman?" enquired Mr. Foster, referring to Assistant Chief Commissioner Darcy Scott.

"The whole board is efficient," replied the Minister.

HON. S. H. BLAKE.

THEY WANT RECIPROCITY

Pennsylvannia Coal Men Anxious to Exchange With the Dominion.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 6.—In an attempt to persuade Congress to establish reciprocal coal trade with the Dominion of Canada, practically every coal operator in the Western Pennsylvania district has signed his name to a petition addressed to the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives.

Such an agreement, say these men, would mean an immense increase in the output of bituminous coal, as under the existing circumstances the entire middle portion of Canada would draw directly from the western coal fields of this state.

The high duty on coal at present makes such trade almost prohibitive, and it is the wish of the operatros that this duty be removed, so that bituminous coal, for which Canada has great need, may be poured in from the local mines. The concluding paragraph of the petition is as follows:

"The position of the operators signing this paper is that if the Canadian Government does not abolish its duty on coal the present tariff be not disturbed."

Nominations In Alberta.

Edmonton, Alta., March 6.—With the first week of the provincial elections campaign drawing to a close, twenty-three Liberals and eight Conservatives have been nominated.

In Calgary, both parties have representatives selected. There are also two Socialist candidates—Howell and O'Brien.

In Edmonton, the Conservatives concede one seat to the Liberrals by the selection of only one candidate. In Strathcona the election of Premier Rutherford is a mere matter of form, as his only opponent will be Rice Sheppard, Independent, who is not strong.

Granting of Bank Charters.

Ottawa, March 6.—At a meeting of the banking and commerce committee of the House of Commons yesterday, Hon. Mr. Fielding pointed out in connection with the granting of bank charters that there were two evils to be avoided.

They must take care not to allow the impression to go abroad that there was any monopoly in bank charters, but it was equally desirable that people asking for bank charters should have sufficient money with which to organise. The policy of the committee had been unfavorable to the extension of charters.

Killed His Mother.

Holland, Mich., March 6.—Elton Baldwin confessed yesterday to the prosecuting attorney that he killed his aged mother, who on Thursday was found dead in her farm house, two miles from Saugatuck. He said that he was afraid she would charge him with having burned their barn and therefore he killed her with a hatchet while she was asleep.

Contest in St. Kitt's.

St. Catharines, March 6—Except in St. Patrick's ward, the nominations for the election of a council, made necessary by the unseating of the aldermen over a technicality, resulted in an acclamation. In St. Patrick's ward, E. Day, J. M. McBride, J. McIntosh and E. Wisner were nominated.

Liberal Wins In Border Burghs.

London, March 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The bye-election for the Scottish Border Burghs consequent on the appointment of Lord Advocate Shaw to be Lord of Appeal in Ordinary in the House of Lords, resulted in the election of Sir J. Barron, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 520 over H. J. Mackinder, Unionist, the figures standing at 3,028 to 2,508. At the general election Mr. Shaw polled 3,126 votes against 2,444 cast for his opponent, Sir A. Conan Doyle.

POLICEMAN MAY NOT LIVE SMITH IN BAD CONDITION

Doctors Say Officer Shot by Burglar Has Just a Fighting Chance—Mayor McLaren Gives an Order to Round-up Tramps.

Hamilton, March 6.—The condition of Constable Harry Smith, who was shot Thursday night, is critical, but he has a fighting chance, according to the doctors. When he was examined yesterday afternoon by Dr. Cummings and an X-ray photo taken, the doctors expressed the opinion that he had a very slight chance of recovery. Only one bullet entered his head, but it split and one part of it sank into the brain to a depth of about half an inch. The other followed the skull around to the back of the ear and inflicted only a nasty scalp wound. It was found that the bullet was of a larger calibre than used in the Kinrade case. Yesterday afternoon an operation was performed by Drs. Cummings and Bingham, and both pieces of the bullet was extracted. The constable at a late hour last night was resting easy and the doctors think his chances of recovery very greatly improved. Before the lead was extracted the constable suffered excruciating pain and begged for an opiate.

Although Mayor McLaren called yesterday for a general clean-up of the vags and undesirables, not a single arrest was made. No clue was afforded by the bag of stuff left by the burglar at the Kappele House. It contained only clothing gathered up in the house.

Mayor McLaren thinks the city should be divided into districts and a number of plain-clothes men placed in charge of each and held responsible for all the loose characters that hang around. It is stated that a confidence man, who has a continental fame, is allowed to parade the street. It has been revealed through the shooting of the constable that members of the police force, except a few in the centre of the city, are not proviedd with lanterns at night.

The police claim that the burglar who shot the constable is not the murderer of Miss Ethel Kinrade, although the person behind the gun in each case was a dead shot. The medical evidence that will be given at the Kinrade enquiry will show that the first two shots which entered the head of the girl were fired from a considerable distance. The officers working on the Kinrade case were unusually busy yesterday afterenoon and held frequent consultations with Crown Attorney Washington, who was at police headquarters until a late hour. Ernest Kinrade accompanied Detectives Miller, Bleakley and Coulter to the Kinrade residence yesterday afternoon. They declined to tell what their mission was. Detective Greer was also in the city yesterday, but said he was not working on the shooting case.

HUSBAND SAID TO HAVE TREATED HIS WIFE IN A VERY BRUTAL MANNER

Indignation Aroused Among the Neighbors — Woman Turned Out in Cold—Was Given Protection of a Friend for the Night.

The alleged brutal actions of a resident of King street will result in a police court case if the pressure of his neighbors is brought to bear. Last night he had a quarrel with his wife, who is in a state of feeble health and turned her out into the street, threatening her that he would take her life if she complained of his treatment and calling her very abusive names.

The poor woman stayed in the back yard of the residence for some time, it is claimed, and then summoned up enough courage to call upon a neighbor who gave her protection. When she had told of the way in which her husband has used her. The husband called at the neighbor's house at midnight and was in a vicious frame of mind. He had inquired at several places for his wife and when he found out where she was was content to let her remain there all night. The trouble started it is claimed, in one of the frequent family rows that occur between the man and wife and in which he is generally to blame as he is very unreasonable when under the influence of drink.

The wife refuses to lay a charge against him, it is stated. There is much indignation in the neighborhood over the matter.

EXPLOSION BILL CHECKED; THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Toronto, March 6.—The order paper in the Legislature was cleaned of several private bills yesterday afternoon which received an unopposed second reading, but without the the House committing itself to their adoption. Premier Whitney gave a warning to members that they must be ready to take up the remainder of the private bills next Wednesday if they wished them to be proceeded with this session.

The Premier also pointed out that all bills for amendments to the assessment act must go to the special committee, which will sit during the recess. The amendments they contain will be treated as suggestions, but the committee will not be confined to the suggestions in the bills.

W. S. Brewster, South Brant, moved the second reading of his bill to make fire insurance companies liable for damages caused by natural gas explosions. Some insurance companies paid the losses as a matter of grace, while others did not. At present people didn't know if their policies covered loss caused by such explosions. The bill was to make this crear.

Hon. J. J. Foy said the bill could go to the legal committee, where the insurance companies could be heard. It appeared to be adding an additional risk, in which case there would no doubt be an increase in the insurance rates.

Hon. A. G. MacKay, North Grey, moved the second reading of his bill in relation to the election of municipal officers.

It was advanced a stage without discussion.

A. E. Flipp's bill to enable Rideau Club, Ottawa, to issue debentures was also read a second time. The amount is limited to $30,000.

W. K. McNaught secured a second reading for his bill to enable philanthropic societies, school and education boards and other bodies to make grants for the establishment of industrial schools.

Hon. J. A. Reaume's bill to put in regular technical order the arrangements for the construction of the dam at Dog Lake was read a second time.

Woman Arrested For Theft.

St. Thomas, March 6.—Chief Armstrong arrested Mrs. Johnson Radcliffe at Listowel yesterday, when he went after her husband, who had been taken in custody for theft of furs. The officer found the complete equipment of a moving picture machine stolen some time ago from the Lyric Theatre.

Attacked Bourassa.

Quebec, March 6.—Hon. W. A. Weir, Provincial Treasurer, taking part in the debate on the speech from the throne, made a strong attack on Mr. Bourassa and on A. Lavergne.

Inaugural Casualties.

Washington, March 6.—The record of casualties incident to the inauguration ceremonies of Thursday, was three deaths, three probably fatally injured and more than seventy-five persons slightly injured. Samuel Young was electrocuted by stepping on a live electric wire on Wisconsin avenue; Norman A. Stall died of epilepsy while viewing the parade, and Andrew B. Doran, a Pullman conductor, died of heart disease.

Afraid to Shave Him.

Orangeville, March 6.—Geo. Stewart, the maniac who killed the Spanhouses, father and son, is still in jail here, but will be taken to Hamilton Asylum shortly. He has not been shaved since incarceration, and it not allowed a fork at meals, lest he harm himself.

Gordon Westicott of this neighborhood has been sent to an asylum since the tragedy.

Fortune Gone, He Suicides.

St. Louis, Mo., March 6.—Carlos Espinosa, aged 25, of Lima, Peru, formerly a student at Columbia, was found dead here yesterday in a gas-filled room, following the receipt of letters and telegrams telling of the loss of his father's fortune in South America.

Million by Forgeries.

Boston, March 6.—A telegram announces that Robert C. Watson, who the police say has made $1,600,000 by forgeries in the past 25 years, and is known under more than 400 different names, has been arrested in Chicago for the Boston authorities.

To Stop Export of Fish.

Ottawa, March 6.—With a view to effectively protecting the black bass, maskalonge and speckled trout fishing in Ontario, an order-in-council has been issued prohibiting, for a period of five years, from May 30, 1909, the sale and export of these fish except that any person from a foreign country who has an angler's permit may take with him, on leaving, his lawful catch of two days' fishing.

One of the Heirs to Big Estate.

London, Ont., March 6.—James Dykes, Wardsville's famous checker player, 40 miles from London, has been notified by a firm of Scottish lawyers that members of his family have fallen heirs to a Fredericksburg, Va., estate worth $7,000,000. Capt. Wood, superintendent of the insane asylum at Selkirk, Man., will represent the family in Scotland.

IS UNIVERSITY TEACHING THEOLOGY UNLAWFULLY ?

Charge Made by Hon. S. H. Blake.

Has Issued an Open Letter to Chancellor Burwash About Higher Criticism.

Toronto, March 6.—Hon. S. H. Blake revived the "new theology" disturbances yesterday when printed booklets of a communication to Chancellor Burwash of Victoria University were made public, under the caption "The Teaching of Religious Knowledge In University College Ultra Vires." It is charged that:

(a) There is no provision in the statutes governing the university or University College for instruction in or giving out certificates in theological subjects or religious knowledge by either of these bodies.

(b) Instruction in both of these subjects is being given.

(c) This work was allotted to the federated universities and colleges.

(d) These latter bodies have therefore ground for complaint and the right to demand that this illegal interference with their rights shall cease.

In a prefatory note Rev. Dr. Elmore Harris refers to the "acute situation" in University College, and says:

"Nearly two years ago my attention was called to the teaching of religious knowledge and to the character of such Biblical teaching in University College by one of the professors of an affiliated college. He informed me that he had obtained very definite informaion from a scholarly minister who attended some of the lectures on "Religious Knowledge" that the students were being indoctrinated in the most radical type of higher criticism.

A deputation consisting of Dr. N. W. Hoyles, K.C., Rev. Principal McLaren, Rev. Dr. Carman and myself waited on the president regarding the illegal and clandestine character of this teaching. The president was extremely courteous, but has not seen fit to take any action in the matter. Hence the only recourse was to approach the board of governors themselves through the chairman, Dr. Hoskin. The matter has been drifting along for a considerable length of time, and, as an alumnus of the University of Toronto, I think that immediate action should be taken to put an end to an illegal state of things.

Dr. Hoskin, chairman of the board of governors of the university, was seen at his residence, "The Dale," in Rosedale, last evening.

"This thing has been sprung upon us," he said. "I have been chairman now for 22 years, and now this has to happen. I wouldn't have had it happen for worlds. I am very much worried about it."

Dr. Hoskin would not discuss the matter at present, further than to vouchsafe the information that a committee had been appointed and had had the while matter under consideration for several weeks. The personnel of the committee is composed of Sir Wm. Meredith, chancellor; Dr. Hoskin, chairman of the board; Dr. Falconer, president; Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, Judge Snider, J. W. Flavelle, Dr. Byron E. Walker, Dr. D. W. White and Rev. Dr. Teefy.

President Falconer had nothing to say for publication. He was under the impression that Mr. Blake's letter to Dr. Hoskin was sent shortly after o Dr. Hoskin was sent shortly after his (Mr. Blake's) resignation from the board, though nothing had been said as to the connection between the two occurrences. The committee which had the matter in hand was making a thorough and dispassionate investigation of the whole matter, both of the legal point which Mr. Blake raises as to the authority of the university to furnish instruction is "religious knowledge" and as to the nature of the teaching. The committee had met last week and would meet from time to time until the matter was disposed of.

Last night's News, the "organ" of the J. W. Flavelle, prominent in Sherbourne street Methodist Church, says editorially:

There is reason to fear that the Methodist Church faces a very serious crisis.

If patience and charity are not exercised, the denomination may be rent asunder.

It will be remembered that Rev. George Jackson has been appointed to the professorship of Biblical history in Victoria College.

Under his hand will pass successive classes of students for the Methodist ministry and his mark will be set deep upon the Methodist Church of the future.

This fact is apparent to Rev. Dr. Carman and his associates, and there is a determination that his appointment shall be cancelled.

ARRIVAL HOME OF ROOSEVELT

Oyster Bay, N.Y., March 6.—Theodore Roosevelt was agreeably disappointed when his train reached Oyster Bay at 1.25 a.m. yesterday to find the station brilliantly illuminated with electric bulbs and Japanese lanterns, while a big illuminated banner bade him "Welcome Home!" Better than all, there was a crowd of from 200 to 300 of his neighbors on hand, whom neither the lateness of the hour, the biting wind, nor the snow-covered roads could deter from waiting to greet their famous fellow townsman.

The ex-President stayed in the depot for 15 minutes or more to exchange handclasps and greetings with his enthusiastic friends. The village band was on hand to enliven the proceedings.

"The Old Testament and the New"

Will be the subject of the sermon at Murray St. Baptist Church on Sunday evening next.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Seven negroes were hanged in Louisiana yesterday.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York has settled suits aggregating nearly $6,000,000 brought in 1904, against its former president, Richard McCurdy, and others.

Major-Gen. John C. Hoad, inspector-general of the Australian military forces, who comes to make a tour of inspection of military centres in this county, is in New York.

The Pope, who is suffering from a cold, was a little worse yesterday. He was obliged to remain in bed and was not able to attend the lenten sermon delivered before the Sacred College.

A Greek peddler was arrested in Omaha while trying to sell a necklace of 63 pearls, valued at $50,000, which was lost by Mrs. Otto Heinze in the Knickerbocker Hotel, New York, Nov. 26 last.

Morgan Controls P.M.

Windsor, March 6.—A Detroit newspapers prints an interview last night to the effect that the Pere Marquette Railway is in the hands of J. P. Morgan and will soon be disposed of, probably to the Baltimore & Ohio, the deal simply awaiting the outcome of negotiations for the settlement of the financial difficulties of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad. It is announced that the plan proposed for the C., H. & D. settlement was rejected because of protests by large holders of 4 1-2 per cent. collateral trust notes.

Protecting Crossings.

Ottawa, March 6.—A return presented to Parliament by the Minister of Railways shows that since the organization of the Railway Commission it has ordered the protection of highway crossings by the separation of the highways from the railways in twenty-seven cases, by gates in nine cases, by electric bells or flashlights in twenty cases, and by watchmen in fifteen cases.

Grosse Isle Monument.

Cornwall, March 6.—The Ancient Order of Hibernians have authorized the erection of a monument at Grosse Isle, Quebec, to the memory of the Irish emigrants who perished there of fever half a century ago.

The monument will be 56 feet high and will be built of Canadian granite. Fallon Bros. of Cornwall have been awarded the contract. The price is about $10,000.

To Search For Explorer.

New York, March 6.—Rear-Admiral Schley, U.S.N., retired, on behalf of the Arctic Club of America, of which he is president, in a letter made public here yesterday, makes an appeal for final aid to enable Dillon Wallace, an Arctic explorer, to effect a rescue of Dr. Frederick Albert Cook, from the Arctic regions, where he has been lost to sight since July, 1907.

Auger Destroys Eye.

Sarnia, March 6.—Capt. Nelson R. Empey of Point Edward, superintending the building of a scow, was lining up some auger holes that a workman was boring. Just as Empey put his eye to the hole the workman on the other side, who had just completed boring it, shoved the auger through, striking Empey in the left eye, bursting the optic.

District Attorney Didn't Like It.

Washington, March 6.—U. S. District Attorney Keeling at Indianapolis has resigned rather than participate in the Government's criminal libel suits against Delavan Smith and The New York World.

Dying Convict Pardoned.

Kingston, March 6.—Suffering from cancer and in a dying condition John Anderson, Ottawa, serving a term in penitentiary, has been pardoned, and is now a patient at the general hospital.

Taft Shatters Hope.

Bristol, England, March 6.—Addressing a political meeting here last night, Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, expressed the belief that President Taft in his inaugural address, pronounced the doom of the hope for the disarmament of nations.

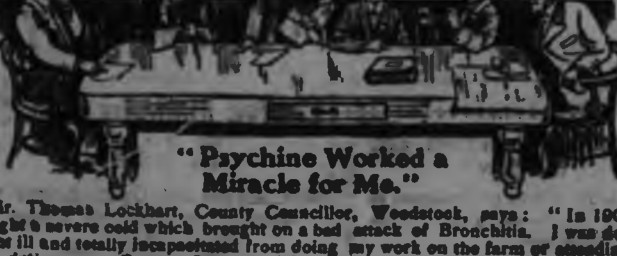
There was a universal feeling abroad, in which the United States now joined, Mr. Birrell said, for increased armaments.

It was enough to make angels weep, but in face of it, he declared, "it is our duty to maintain our navy strong enough to keep Great Britain's shores inviolate."

Argentine Oats In New York.

New York, March 6.—An unusual shipment to this country arrived here yesterday in the shape of a cargo of oats grown in the Argentine Republic. It was brought by the steamer St. Quentin from Buenos Ayres, via Boston, and there were 3,000 tons of the grain, the importation of which is due to the present scarcity and high price of the staple here.

A COUNTY COUNCILLOR PRAISES



"Psychine Worked a Miracle for Me."

Mr. Thomas Lockhart, County Councillor, Woodstock, says: "In 1906 I caught a severe cold which brought on a bad attack of Bronchitis. I was downright ill and totally incapacitated from doing my work on the farm or attending to my duties as a County Councillor for Oxford. My lungs also seemed to be affected, and I got lower and lower, until my friends thought that I would never get better; I also got very discouraged myself and began to lose hope."

"Needless to say I had, what was supposed to be, the best medical advice and treatment. All sorts of remedies were tried and suggestions followed, but all to no purpose. At last my doctor plainly told me that he could do nothing more for me, and that the only thing that would benefit me was to move to a milder climate. I got much worse; gradually lost all my strength, and was reduced to a shadow of my former self. I could not move out of the house, and was useless for anything, having to give up all my business."

"I honestly believe at this time that my days were numbered. Then I came across an 'Ad' in the 'Sentinel-Review' telling what PSYCHINE had done in similar cases to my own, and I determined to give it a trial. I sent for a bottle and it worked wonders for me in a very short time. The pain in my chest disappeared; my breathing was easier, and I could soon get out of doors again. My strength came back, and it is surprising how rapidly I put on flesh and gained in weight."

"I do not hesitate to say that PSYCHINE worked a miracle for me. I was a marvel to all who saw me, and I cannot sufficiently praise this wonderful medicine which restored me to health when all else failed. PSYCHINE brings immediate relief from the most distressing symptoms of Bronchitis and Lung trouble, and soon makes one feel strong and well again. I am 67 years of age now, and since taking PSYCHINE have had no return of illness at all; indeed I never felt better in my life."

If you have not tried PSYCHINE you should do so at once. It keeps the healthy well and restores strength to the weak—enriches the blood and creates a healthy vigorous action of the heart. Psychine is without doubt the greatest Life-giver known. Sold by all druggists and stores at 50c. and $1. Free trial sent on application to the proprietors, Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto. PARTY HOUSE-CLEANING

It may not be out of place to follow up the trenchant editorial of the Ottawa Citizen with an endorsation of the views therein expressed. The Conservative party has a leader against whom there is not a breath of reproach. But the disposition of the party-managers to "compromise" in election deals has created a demand amongst the rank and file for an overhauling of that department. We have always maintained that Sir Wilfrid Laurier must be held responsible for the failures of his party and following to measure up to the standard of good straightforward Canadianism. His sins in that respect have been monumental. But the Conservative party or that part of it with which we have come in contact from far and near is a little suspicious that there lurks the germ of a like fatal disease in that party, also and that now is the time to kill it off and not under the shadow of an approaching election. No party can succeed if the leaders are not possessed of the whole confidence of that party and while we do not wish to exaggerate a condition of things not too far gone to be easily remedied yet we feel as the Citizen and numerous other well wishers of the great national party feel, that a little party sanitation would give general satisfaction.

PERSONALITY

"The graduating class of 1908 will probably remember their teachers long after they have forgotten what those teachers have taught. It is so true that human personality has much more power than human thought. Every teacher with whom we have come in contact has left his or her impress on our minds and has influenced us more effectually than all the books in the world could ever do."—Valedictory address of Miss Gladys Crane, from Collegiate School.

This extract from the valedictory address contains a profound truth. It is better for a man to be honest than clever, sincere than rich, noble than tactful, firm than adroit. The teaching is always at a serious discount in the minds of the young because the young cherish ideals. Later on when life becomes a mere struggle for existence as it does with so many, high principles and nobility of conduct become too often the subject of jest, and nothing kills a tender plant like the frost of ridicule. The teacher who impress the pupil does so at the impressionable age and therefore should like the pupil's father and mother, never fall below a certain standard. High principles and noble aspirations go together but conduct being the fruition of both is unquestionably vastly superior to either. Hence it has been said that a good man or a good woman is like the orchid of the Andes, a simple product of nature but growing and blooming at a height unattainable by the common flower. If as the scriptures say, we are to "Be assured, God is not mocked," so it is with the young. They cannot be deceived either by cunning or the counterfeit. It is so necessary therefore that the master or mistress depending upon no unworthiness shall be fairly paid. It will be the first sign of giving honor to whom honor is most due, when it is done.

WHAT IT REALLY MEANS

As will appear by the following clipping from the Catholic Register, the official organ of the Catholic church in Ontario. It is considered that what is known as the Higher Criticism ultimately demonstrates the necessity of some authority outside the scriptures to interpret and vouch for them. Hence the Bible is argued not to be the only rule of faith.

> They have nothing but the Bible, these poor people, which everybody knows can never be a sufficient rule of faith in itself."—Catholic Register and Catholic Extension.

When Luther remarked that the Epistle of James was "an epistle of straw," he was doubtless considered the first of the higher critics. When a journal whose editor represents the critical intelligence of the community, as in the case of our contemporary, argues that it does not matter whether the whale swallowed Jonah or Jonah the whale, it begins to look as if individual Criticism was to be the only infallible rule of faith, if indeed there is to be any such at all. Underlying all this turmoil from which the world appears to be emerging into a new era, is a decision to throw aside the old. As the ancients predicted so the moderns are now arguing—that Virtue is the only state attainable and is its own reward. The definite positive statements of the scriptures, as in the case of the ark, where the dimensions are given in detail, are being wrenched from their definiteness and moved to a new anchorage if such it can be called. However that the result will be as the Register points out is the opinion of most of the leading critics in Germany, Britain and America. The Christianity of the man who seeks only for the approval of his own conscience is getting perilously near to disregarding it altogether. He is one with the higher critic except that they proceed a little differently. Each seeks the approval of himself alone. It is a wholly contradictory and impossible position if we are to regard logic as proof against the assaults of those who are determined to have their own way, logic or no logic.

Another vain attempt was made by the anti-Japanese element at Sacramento, Cal., to exclude Japs from the public schools.

WOMEN IN AUSTRALIA

The last of the provinces of the Dominion or commonwealth of Australia has voted by 23 to 5 to give the franchise to women! Thus has the Antipodes since New Zealand has equal suffrage, removed the disability under which woman have lived so long. The old order changeth. All things are becoming new. The fundamental power in the world of politics as in business and pleasure, seems to be Public Opinion. There is evidently no longer such a thing as finality in anything. At one time to give women a vote would have provoked a serious state of affairs. Nowadays the not-giving them a vote has provoked the serious state of affairs. Since Public Opinion has acquired this commanding position it is obviously necessary that it shall be educated sensible public opinion. In what then also shall consist the point or inlet of communication between man and the Creator? If it is to be conscience then since conscience, beyond all question varies in individuals it must be some quality of conscience common to all that shall form that point, line or basis of communication. This common quality may be sincerity of intention which while it gives free scope to error of every sort in its fruition nevertheless in its original state is one and the same. This then would furnish the apparent pathway of God to man and of man to God, but the variation and error between man and man will still continue. This condition, however, is doubtless necessary if "intention" is to have free play and perform its full function. But the utilization of "intention" does away with Revelation in the direct or exclusive sense since it is open necessarily to each individual to form his own conclusions, provided his "intention" be right. All this is of course mere speculation yet the change in recent years in the world of thought, action and ultimate sanction as exemplified in Women's Suffrage or what may be truly described as the emancipation of women, opens the door to much guesswork as to the future.

EDITORIAL NOTES

We must congratulate the Examiner upon its no less than three articles in one issue upon the burning question of the hour viz., the integrity of the Bible. Its indifference as to whether the whale swallowed Jonah or Jonah the whale, shows however, a more than critical view of the chronicles of a book to which hitherto the world has looked for inspiration. When we lose our awe of the sacred Scriptures, what will come next?

Peterborough is getting big enough to be the source of many municipal business complications if it does not "watch out." Conflicting interests are not always a safe-guard for the public. A plain but accurate statement of any case is best. The man who wants things his own way decries new ideas and the interference, etc., etc., of others as an intolerable nuisance. It is a good time for the man or the company that wants his or its way. Browbeating the "browbeater" is good business.

The naturalist who ought to know, says that the stillness of death is the possum's most effective defence. It thinks that by keeping quiet it escapes notice, and so it does. It is a plan, however, that is unsuitable to all but the lower animals.

The Review has received an invitation to the opening of "Selfridge's" but unfortunately we can't go. The description of this great London store is interesting however.

The spacious reception rooms welcome all visitors; the library and silence rooms give restful seclusion; a "first aid" ward, fully equipped, with a trained nurse in attendance, provides for any indisposition or mishap; the "Bureau de Change," negotiates letters of credit, etc.; Colonial rooms with registers for visitors will be appreciated by friends from overseas. The bureau of information, the railway, steamship, and theatre booking offices, and parcel and cloak check desks are free and all conveniences open to everyone, with gratuities neither expected nor allowed. The general post office has established here a post, telegraph, savings bank, and money order office, a boon that will be valued. The luncheon hall is finely appointed, and will have an excellent cuisine. Adjoining is the pretty tea garden open to the sky, and a luxurious smoking lounge for gentlemen.

The telegraphic address is "Selfridge, London." the Selfridge telephone number is "Gerrard one,"; and there is telephonic communication between every counter and any part of the British Isles.

A naval seaman has once every day to salute the quarter deck of his ship, even if no officer is upon it. "Salada" tea is in such popular favor that many people feel like saluting a packet wherever seen.

It was announced at Nashville, Tenn. that fifty three new witnesses will be called by the State in rebuttal in the Carmack murder case.

The average age of the persons who died in Norway, Maine, last year exclusive of eight babies less than one year old, is 66.45 years.

GOOD PROGRESS AT "VIAMEDE"

Popular Resort Will be Ready for Opening About June 15th

Lakefield, March 5.—"Viamede," the popular Stony Lake summer resort that was destroyed by fire last fall, is now being rebuilt, and, judging from the plans, will be larger and finer than ever. Mr. Abel Hendren, with a staff of carpenters went up to Mount Julian last week and commenced operations on the new building. At present the foundations are now ready for the superstructure. The new building will be 180 feet long by 44 feet wide, fronting on the lake. A large kitchen and servants' quarters will be erected at the rear of the main building, 34x44 feet. The bedrooms, thirty-six in number will be large, bright and airy. The building will be fitted with the most modern improvements in the line of plumbing and will be lighted with gas. It will occupy the same sight as the old one, commanding a fine view of the lake. Over one hundred thousand feet of lumber will be used in its construction. Mrs. Graham expects that everything will be ready for the opening on June 15th.

ARE YOU FAT?

You know you can not stay fat, don't you? That is, you can not be fat and be in style. The day when a fat woman was tolerated is passed. Nowadays all women must be in proportion or be ridiculous. This does not mean you should become skinny, however. You should not get below the hard flesh line. All you ought to lose is the bulky fat. That done you will find yourself to be a well-formed and, therefore, handsome woman.

Now, how can this be done? By exercising and dieting? Yes, and no. These two means will bring some results, but not easily nor soon. One is very hard work; the other is torture. Besides, neither can be depended on to cause a uniform reduction. They may take off a fleshy shoulder, for example, and leave the double chin untouched. What you need, you see, is something pleasant to take that without injury to your health will take the fat off uniformly and quickly, say at the rate of a pound a day or so, until it is all gone where you want it to go.

For this purpose nothing is less expensive, safer or simpler than Marmola Prescription Tablets. Inexpensive because one large case, costing 75 cts. only will produce results; safe because they cause no wrinkles or stomach trouble, but rather improve the health and complexion, if anything; and simple, because they do all the work without asking thought or effort on the part of the taker. In short, they are the ANSWER if you are fat and wish to be thinner. If your druggist is of the better kind he will have them. If not, write the licensees, the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich.

Origin of the Club Sandwich

Alan Johnstone is said to have originated the famous club sandwich, and the story runs that on going to the club one night between midnight and daybreak he found the cafe closed, the cooks gone, and, being nearly famished, he invaded the larder, toasted himself some thick slices of bread, sliced them through, buttered them while hot, and laid thereon everything he found in the refrigerator—cold chicken, ham and lettuce, with a spoonful of mayonnaise. The result was such an epicurean discovery as is not often made, but the story was too good to keep. He confided the recipe to his cronies and it straightway became one of the popular dishes of the club menu, and so the father of the club sandwich, so deservedly popular, is the present British minister to Copenhagen.—Washington Herald.

The "You-Be-Quiets."

There was not an empty seat at Queen's Hall when Sir Edward Elgar's symphony was played for the first time in London recently. And yet Sir Edward, who has produced an orchestral work of the first magnitude, never received a lesson in orchestration in his life. Indeed, he is almost entirely self-taught, $16 being his whole expenditure on instruction—for a fortnight's tuition on the violin. At one time, like the immortal Wagner, Sir Edward was glad to earn a few shillings by putting together quadrilles from operas and popular airs. He is, the writer believes, still a member of an interesting little club not far from Hanover Square, composed entirely of musicians. It is called the "You-Be-Quiet Club," and its title means that no "shop" is permitted in conversation. Perhaps that is the reason why one can never get Sir Edward to "talk" music.—Tit-Bits.

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for Its Publication.

Essay Competition

The children of the schools of Peterborough are to be given an opportunity to make known their views on the liquor question. The City Temperance League has decided to offer three prizes of $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00 each, in each school of the city for the best essay on the following subject.—

"Why Peterborough Should Banish the Bar-room."

In addition to the prizes that will be given in each school, a special prize of $5.00 in gold will be given for the best essay submitted by the pupils of all the schools. The essays must not exceed 500 words in length. They must be written on foolscap paper with ink on one side of the paper only or typewritten. No names must be signed to the essays. Intending competitors must leave or send their essays to Mr A. Brown, 396 Water street, phone 126, and give him their names. Mr Brown will then number the essays preparatory to giving them to the judges. The names of the judges will be announced later. The essays must reach Mr Brown by the first of May next. The schools eligible to compete in this competition are the Queen Alexandra, Central, St Peter's, West ward, South Central, King Edward, Lake street, East ward, Convent, and Collegiate Institute.

Dominion Alliance

The annual convention of the Ontario Branch of this important temperance organization met in Toronto on Wednesday and Thursday of this week and was well attended by a number of the workers from this city. The sessions were largely attended by delegates from all over the province as well as a great many from the city of Toronto. The most important purpose of the convention was the getting together of those from all parts who are interested in the work, comparing notes and making plans for the future.

The delegates from Peterborough attended chiefly with a view to gathering hints and suggestions that might be of use in the campaign now in progress here.

Deputation to Government

On the forenoon of Wednesday a deputation of about 400 delegates waited on the Government of Ontario at the parliament buildings. They were received by the Premier Sir James Whitney and Hon W J Hanna, Provincial Secretary.

The chief purpose of the deputation was to point out that the three-fifths requirement in connection with local option contests had been shown by the results of recent votes for repeal to be unnecessary and to ask that it be eliminated from the act. It was pointed out that under other conditions it might be necessary, but that with the present thorough provision for the enforcement of the law it was not necessary to have the support of more than a majority of the voters.

The Premier in his reply said that the Government was anxious to do all in their power to lessen the evils of intemperance. He referred to the fact that a three-fifths majority was required in the courts of some of the churches to which many of the delegates belonged. It was, he said, a principle adhered to in connection with many matters in all British countries. That we should look to Britain as the source of our legislation and not to the United States. Especially he contended that the results of the last election led clearly and inevitably to the conclusion that the people favored the retention of the three-fifths requirement.

From this it will clearly appear that it is not the intention of the Government to make any immediate change in the law, and hence the workers here must make every possible effort, remembering that to carry the local option bylaw there must be three votes polled in favor of it for two against it.

Temperance Britain

At the morning session on Thursday, Rev Joseph Oliver of Sarnia, gave an interesting address on the conditions in the Old Country. England cannot be said to occupy an advanced position on this question except as compared with her own past. Compared with Canada or the United States, her position cannot be said to be advanced. Reference was made to the drink bill of Great Britain, where the laboring classes spend nine and one half million dollars a week on intoxicating drink, where the average is $20 per head of the population annually. In the commercial world the great rivals of Britain are Germany and the United States. Under what a tremendous handicap the British workman labors with this expenditure for drink and all its accompanying degradation, loss of time, and hindrances to efficiency. It was related how George R Sims was employed by the London Tribune to "write up" the evils of the traffic and what he found.

In one public house, forty women in all stages of intoxication, while about as many children of all ages, from four months old, crawled on a floor covered with sawdust and filth.

He found that in seven months 750 infants were killed in London by their drunken mothers lying on them in their sleep.

His two works 'The Babes' Inferno' and 'The Cry of the Children' in which we see a picture of the liquor evil at its worst, did more than any other influence to rouse public opinion in Britain. The police took up the matter and watched 28 public houses for four days. In that time forty thousand women and ten thousand children went in and out for drink, more than half of them, both women and children more or less intoxicated.

The British Statesman

In one respect however, we can learn from the Motherland. When the present British Government brought in their liquor bill of last year and saw the storm of opposition, when the anathemas of the liquor sellers and liquor drinkers began to descend on their heads, when the Peckham election took place and their candidate suffered an overwhelming defeat, the premier said that the measure was not brought in for the purpose of getting votes but for the purpose of ridding the people of a great evil. Many of our public men might look to them for examples of statesmen with courage, honesty, determination to stand by their convictions and to look only to the best interests of their country.

Notes

Two telling and eloquent addresses were given by Hon Seaborne Wright. In one of them he discussed the "Campaign in Georgia," and in the other "Experiences in the United States." An outline of these addresses will be given at the Crystal tomorrow afternoon at 4.15.

An interesting break in the proceedings was the appearance of a deputation from the Women's Enfranchisement Association. The deputation consisted of Dr Margaret Gordon and Dr Stowe-Gullen of Toronto and Mrs Craigie of New York. What they had to say amounted to "Use your your influence to get votes for the women and your questions will be solved for you know the ladies will always vote on the side of temperance and every other reform."

The convention throughout was characterized by enthusiasm, high hopes and a determination to carry on the fight till there is not a spot left from the Atlantic to the Pacific in which a man or woman may buy poison in the shape of intoxicating drink.

IT IS NO TROUBLE TO WORK NOW

So Says Miss Elsie J. Allen After Using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

She Suffered From Weakness and Kidney Trouble, But the Old Reliable Kidney Remedy Cured Her Completely.

St. Croix, NB, March 5— Special — That the pains and weakness which make life almost unbearable to so many women are easily and completely cured by using Dodd's Kidney Pills is once more shown in the case of Miss Elsie J Allen of this place;

"I suffered greatly from kidney trouble and weakness before I began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. Miss Allen says. "I was so weak I could hardly get around and work was almost impossible. Life was a struggle till I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I began taking them and soon felt better. I took seven boxes in all and they cured me.

"I can now do my work the year round and do not feel it. My back which used to trouble me so much is well and strong and I do not feel any pains at all."

The root of women's troubles is in the kidneys. There is not a weak suffering woman in Canada that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not help, and in nearly every case Dodd's Kidney Pills will work a complete cure.

AN ASTRONOMER OF MUCH NOTE

Will Address the Peterborough Centre of the Astronomical Society Next Tuesday

Mr. G. Perry Jenkins, FRAS, is to address the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society on Tuesday evening, March 9th. The meeting will be held in the chemical room of the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Jenkins is recently from the Old Country and is an experienced astronomer as well as an eloquent speaker. The subject of his address in Peterborough will be "A journey to Starland," illustrated by lantern views.

BE A CHARMING WOMAN

You never saw a beautiful woman who did not have beautiful hair. The charms of a beautiful woman lie in her hair. Many women do not realize the attractions they possess, because they do not give proper attention to the care of the hair.

The women of the "400" are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre, and strength to the hair.

Up to a few years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in America. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in America. W Madill, druggist, Peterborough, sells it for 50 cents a bottle and he guarantees it to grow beautiful, luxuriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand, W Madill will give you your money back if it fails.

A CROSS ON HIS BACK.

It Was Made With Chalk, but Was Too Heavy to Carry.

There is a story of an envious tailor current with the French peasantry. He fancied that his neighbor, who received a pension for the loss of an arm incurred while fighting for his country, was better off than himself. Both men went to pay their rent on the same day.

"That's a lucky man," said the tailor to the landlord. "He gets well paid for his arm."

"But who would be willing to part with an arm, even if he were paid for it?" said the landlord.

"I would," declared the tailor.

"You!" cried the landlord. "Why, man, you wouldn't be willing to bear anything of the sort, no matter how much you were paid for it."

"I wish some one would try me."

"Now, see here," said the landlord, who had studied human nature, "I'll tell you what—if you'll wear even so much as a chalk mark on your back I'll remit your rent as long as you wear it on your coat so it can be seen, the condition being that you tell no one why it is there."

"Agreed," said the tailor eagerly. "That's an easy way to pay rent."

So the chalk mark in the form of a cross was made on the back of his coat, and the delighted tailor sallied forth upon the street.

Strangers and acquaintances hailed him to tell him of the mark on his back. Jokes were made at his expense, children laughed and pointed at him, and his wife annoyed him with questions and with conjugal familiarity told him he was a fool. The usually amiable man grew surly and morose; he shunned men, women and children and frequented back streets. Before the week was up the tailor found himself embroiled in a quarrel with his best friend, his wife had threatened to leave his house, and he considered himself miserable and ill used.

Finally one night he took off his coat and rubbed out the chalk mark and said: "There! I would not wear that cross on my back another week, no, not if I could have all the money there is in Paris!"

ROBIN HOOD NOT A MYTH.

Hero of Sherwood Forest Had a Court Place Under King Edward II.

Many famous men have their names linked with Sherwood—King John, the three Edwards, Richard III., Cardinal Wolsey and Charles I.—but the hero of the place, the "genius loci," is Robin Hood.

Some think that the famous outlaw of the ballads was a myth, a mere poetic conception and a creature of the popular mind, but Mr. Hunter in his research into the person and period of Robin Hood holds that he was born between 1285 and 1295, living through the reign of the second Edward and into the early years of the third. He was of a family of some station seated near Wakefield and supported the Earl of Lancaster in his rebellion against the government. When the earl fell and his followers were proscribed Robin Hood took to the woods and supported himself by slaying the wild animals found in the forest and by levying a species of blackmail on passengers along the great road which united London and Berwick. This continued for about twenty months, from April, 1322, to December, 1323, when he fell into the king's power, who for some unknown reason not only pardoned him, but gave him a place at court. Anyhow, a man of the name of Robyn Hode was a "varlet" of the king in 1324.

Dr. Spencer T. Hall says that Robyn was created Earl of Huntington by a London ballad writer hard up for a word to rhyme to Little John. Be this as it may, Robin Hood will always be the hero of romance, and those who love romance will refuse to believe that he never existed.—London Globe.

Mansfield's Lonely Meals.

There were two meals which Mansfield always ate alone—breakfast and the light repast of broth and oysters late in the afternoon. An empty stomach attacked his nerves and set his temper on edge. In the morning he was in no convenient mood until he had the invariable coffee and bacon. After a somewhat rigid abstinence during the balance of the day and evening the fatigue of a performance edged his nerves till his midnight supper, which, with a troop of friends about him, warmed him into the sunniest humor of the day. A book or play was the companion of his solitary meals.—Paul Wilstach in Scribner's.

The Very First One.

The visitors in the historical museum gazed curiously at a small feather pillow which nestled in a glass case.

"I don't see anything unusual about that pillow," remarked one of the visitors, turning to the guide.

"It's a very valuable pillow," replied the guide. "That is Washington's original headquarters."—Lippincott's.

A Zoological Question.

The director of the zoological gardens was on his vacation. He received a note from his chief assistant, which closed thusly: "The chimpanzee seems to be pining for a companion. What shall we do until you return?"

Two Words.

"There are two words that I feel sorry for."

"And they are?"

"Blithering and egregious. Nobody ever uses 'em except to call some one an idiot or an ass."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

At Oswego, NY, Charles E Parker, a justice of the Supreme Court 1893-1905, died of apoplexy, aged seventy-

Another Way.

A well known London physician was invited out to the country for some shooting; but, although he tried several times, he could not hit a single rabbit.

"I'm very unlucky," he exclaimed. "I've killed nothing all day."

"Never mind," said his host. "Write the rabbits one of your prescriptions."

Foul.

"Foul tactics," declared the halfback.

"What's the trouble now?" demanded the referee.

"I tried a kick for the stomach, but this fellow blocked it with his head."

Good Behavior.

Employer—Why were you discharged from your last place? Applicant—For good behavior. Employer—What do you mean by that? Applicant—They took three months off my sentence.

The New Era

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Some of the poetry in the Review lately is typical of the new era. It is of the Walt Whitman sort. There is no slavish observance of standards or of the old theory of inspiration. As a man feels so should he write. I believe in that.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

Large Attendance at Meeting of Association in Toronto

Mr G. W. Bennett has returned home from attending the convention of the Western Ontario Good Roads Association in Toronto. The addresses given were excellent, being of a most practical nature, and they will no doubt result in the dissemination of much valuable information. The municipal councils in the western part of the province were well represented at the convention and it is regrettable that the councils in this part of the province do not send delegates. It would be money well spent.

CONVENTION AT NIAGARA FALLS

Police Constables Association Will Meet There, July 28th and 29th

Chief Roszel, President of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada, has received a communication from Deputy Chief Starth, of Toronto, secretary of the Association, informing him that the annual convention of that body will take place at Niagara Falls this year, on July 28 and 29, and asking him if the dates are convenient for him. The Chief has always attended these conventions and it is likely the gathering will be honored by his presence this year.

WEDDING BELLS

CLARKSON—LUNDY

At All Saints' church this afternoon at 3.45 o'clock the marriage took place of Miss Pearl Catharine Lundy, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Lundy, Aylmer street, to Mr. Ernest Palmer Clarkson, son of the late Captain Charles Clarkson, of Halifax. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. R. Trumpour in the presence of a few invited guests. The bride and groom were unattended. The bride wore a handsome travelling dress of mustard colored cloth, and carried a bouquet of violets.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson left on the 4.48 C.P.R. train for Toronto and Cobalt. They will reside at the latter place.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

WAS REMEMBERED SUBSTANTIALLY

Otonabee Couple Were the Recipients of Handsome Presents

Otonabee, March 4—One evening of this week the people in the immediate vicinity of the home of W J Porter and family on the Norwood road, called to give them a pleasant surprise before leaving for their new home. There were ten families represented. After the usual greetings were over, Mrs E Beavis read an address as follows:

Mr and Mrs Porter—

We, your friends and neighbors feel that we cannot allow you to depart from our midst without showing some mark of the esteem in which you are held in the neighborhood. We hope that your removal will not sever the bonds of friendship existing between us. We beg you to accept these chairs as a slight token of appreciation, trusting that their presence in coming years may serve to remind you of departed days. Therefore we join in sincerely wishing you and your family a long, happy and prosperous life.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Mrs T D Chamberlain
Mrs John Torpey,
Mrs Ed Fitzgerald,
Mrs W Devlin.

Mrs George Hall and Mrs Roger Torpey then presented Mr and Mrs Porter with a beautiful morris chair and a rocker, of polished oak.

Mr and Mrs Porter expressed their appreciation of all the kindness shown them.

The remainder of the evening was spent in music, games and other past times, and all went to their respective homes feeling better of having spent the night socially together.

WILL LIKELY GIVE EVIDENCE

Deputy Fire Chief Grange, upon whom an assault is alleged to have been committed by Ex-firemen Chapman, Hawes and Craig, is making good progress towards recovery and will be able, it is thought, to give evidence in the preliminary hearing on March 9th.

However, this is by no means certain and all depend on whether the physician in charge is willing to give his permission.

COBOURG GAOL IS OVERCROWDED

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says;

While visiting the county gaol one day this week we were surprised to find it an over-crowded and congested condition which is unfortunate in a public institution erected only three years ago. There are twenty-two prisoners in the gaol at present — one female and twenty-one males — which is not remarkable considering it—but the united counties of Northumberland and Durham contains a population of over fifty thousand people and includes several large and prosperous towns. Besides the canal construction between Hastings and Trenton along the eastern frontier of Northumberland, where the Dominion Government will spent one million dollars is attracting a small army of "navvies" who frequently "cut loose" and get into the toils of the law.

The worst feature of the case is that there are not enough cells in the male prison—only sixteen, or five less than the number required to provide accommodation for the male prisoners who have been committed there this year.

No effort was made by the anthracite mine workers to obtain a hearing on their demands by the mine operators.

TRUCK BROKE

And Car Left the Track Near Green's Foundry—Bridge Was Damaged

About six o'clock this morning, passing Green's foundry a truck on one of the cars of a long freight train which was being drawn by a double header, broke and the wheels left the track. The accident was not noticed until the disabled car had passed over the bridge which spans the creek near the Protestant Home when the train was brought to a stop.

The auxiliary was summoned from Lindsay and by ten o'clock the damage had been repaired and the train proceeded on its way.

The damage did not amount to much although the bridge near where the accident was noticed, will have to be repaired.

The morning trains leaving here for Lindsay had to go to Millbrook and around by the old line.

LANDED ON THE BREAKFAST TABLE

Woman Caused a Surprise---Fel Through the Sky-Light

Patterson, N.J., March 6.—As Mrs. Sarah Kantor and her family were sitting around the breakfast table in their flat at 293 Market street, Monday morning, they made the acquaintance of Mrs. Nicholas Ihrman, a neighbor, without the formality of an introduction. She appeared in their flat unexpectedly, landing squarely on the table, to the great surprise of the Kantors. There was a crash of glass as she came through the skylight situated directly over the table. In fact, she had not intended to visit the Kantors at all. But they suddenly found her lying on their breakfast table, among a lot of broken dishes and glass. A new breakfast had to be prepared, and that was done while the family made an investigation to find out how Mrs. Ihrman happened to drop in.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fosard, on Saturday last, moved into a flat adjoining theirs, and she was helping them to fix up their rooms. She was standing on the ledge of a window in the kitchen of the Fosard flat and was cleaning the glass. She fell and plunged down through a skylight over an extension in the rear of the house. The skylight was just over Mrs. Kantor's breakfast table.

Mrs. Ihrman became unconscious as she struck the table. She was taken to the general hospital in an ambulance and it was found that her spine was injured and she received bruises on the head and face.

MR. COONEY IS GETTING BETTER

The many friends of Mr. Ben Cooney, Stewart street, will be pleased to hear he has so far recovered that he was able to be taken from Nicholls Hospital to his home yesterday. Mr. Cooney is loud in his praise for the kind treatment he received at the hands of the staff at the hospital and the physician who attended him.

MAN HAD VERY NARROW ESCAPE

Was Beside Acetylene Gas House When it Was Blown Away

A Hall's Glen correspondent says: Our residents wonder at the miraculous escape of Mr. Woodleigh, who was standing in the door of Mr. Eastwood's acetylene gas house when it was blown away last week. The shock shook nearly all the houses on Harvey side of the river, and some of us thought an earthquake had paid us a visit.

One man was killed and a score injured in a street car accident in Boston due to slippery rails.

TRATHS AND THE ANDREW'S FOR CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

t has been intimated by the Strath-as, runners-up in the City League, t they would be willing to take on winners of the Church League; now that the St. Andrews have ded the Burnham trophy for this ar, they are quite willing to play, High Commissioners, and would to arrange a game for a night tual agreeable to the teams. As local O.H.A. intermediates are out the running it would be for the y championship, and a match worth while would certainly result.

St. Andrews showed class that surprised the fans when they snatched the honors from Knox church and gave evidence that they are a fast and nicely balanced aggregation, and play clever and effective hockey. Those who saw them play are of the opinion that Manager Johnston's septette would stand a good chance with the fast and husky Strathconas.

If the game between the two is arranged, and in all likelihood it will be, it should prove a splendid drawing card.

EW YORKERS WANT RACE BETWEEN FRED SIMPSON AND THE FLEET LONGBOAT

Mr. J. Campbell Douglas, of Hoboen, NY, and old Peterborough boy a letter to the sporting editor, ys the New York fans think Fred mpson is the coming champions in e professional Marathon game. Mr uglas saw Simpson run four miles the twelve mile relay race at Madi-n Square Gardens, New York, and hen the Hiawatha man stepped on en terms and in good time with e celebrated Alfred Shrubb.

"What the people of New York ant," he writes, "is a race for the ll Marathon distance between Longboat and Simpson." Such an event would draw a houseful to the Gardens and New Yorkers, judging from the general tone, would back Simpson against the Onondaga. Down here they know how to keep tab on the distance performers and we all have heard of Simpson getting away with a new fifteen mile mark in Georgia, and of breaking the indoor record for ten miles at Toronto. I am very glad to see any Canadian excel in any line, but when an athlete from old Peterborough comes into the limelight in such a large way I am particularly interested and pleased."

LINDSAY HAS A LEAD OF 5 GOALS ON THE ROUND BEAT STRATFORD 7-2

Lindsay, March 5.—In the first of he home and home games for the hampionship to-night the Lindsay intermediates again demonstrated to a rowded rink that they can play ockey of the highest order, by deeating Stratford Indians by the deisive score of 7 goals to 2. The halfime score was 3 to 0.

The locals will thus have a lead of ive goals when they play the return ame in Stratford on Monday, which, with the pace set by the locals toight, will be difficult to overcome. The larger rink at Stratford will also suit the locals to a nicety.

The game was the cleanest seen here this season, only four being penalised, Easson twice, Barlow and Stoddard. Referee Noble Steacy, of Kington, kept the game well in hand. The ocals proved themselves the fastest katers and best stick-handlers. The ightning rushes of Koyl were the reatest feature of the game, as time gain he bored in through the entire ine. Randall also put up a great ame at centre, as did Stoddard, Blomfield and Sullivan. Cote showed p well in the second half. The local efence was almost impregnable, both goals being scored by long shots. Stratford's first goal was allowed on a poor decision of the goal umpire, the puck striking the top bar and going over the net. The visitors were also outclassed in combination work. Rankin, in goal, proved a veritable stone wall, as shot after shot was rained at him with great rapidity. The ack of the visiting forward line was Simpson and Easson, both of whom have great speed. Dunbar, at cover, tried to rough it by heavy body checking. Forbes also played a fine game at point. The line-up:—

In a New York court, Rose Simpson, aged fifteen, twice a wife, and a mother, was arraigned as incorrigible. A subpoena was issued for the girl's husband.

The salary of the Mayor of Berlin has been increased from $400 to $600.

HOCKEY

There was only one attraction at Brock street rink yesterday. Two teams composed of players gathered from the different banking institutions of the city gathered at the rink to settle a few disputes, of which the question of what team could stand the largest amount of hard knocks was the most important. Both teams broke even in this respect and the referee had a merry time dodging the players. Nobody seemed to bother about scoring and as a result, the goal tenders took it easy. There was no half time, and both teams were all in and quite satisfied to quit when the whistle blew for the end.

The score was 4—1 in favor of Kelly's team. Mr. Will O'Brien handled the bell and gave good satisfaction.

The teams were as follows;

Kelly's Has Beens		Porter's Neverwisers
Deyell	Goal	Simpson
Kelly	Point	Eastwood
Cahill	Cover Point	Waram
Giroux	Rover	Porter
Brown	Centre	Giroux
O'Brien	Left Wing	Fisher
Quinlan	Right Wing	Bogue

PACE TOO HOT FOR ITALIAN

Yankee Rogers Put it Over Silva the Italian Champion

Yankee Rogers won a decisive victory over the Italian champion, Emile Silvia, in a best two in the three falls wrestling bout at Riverdale rink last night. Rogers was the favorite with the crowd and got a great deal of encouragement while the Italian was treated to a lot of joshing but he was there with the goods as far as strength was concerned. Yankee knew too much about the catch as catch can game and had the advantage of Silvia all the way. In the first he took the fall in 35 3-4 minutes with a double Nelson with the legs.

The Italian took Rogers who was a little over confident by surprise in the second and went after him like a cyclone. Rogers, who had had all the better of the first bout was taking things rather easy when the Italian got a double bar hold, that could not be broken landing Yankee on the mat in 3 1-4 minutes.

Rogers took no chances in the next but went after the Italian fast and furious. He soon had him in chancery with what is known as a jack knife hold which consists of getting a man by the legs standing him on his head and then doubling him up until his shoulders touch the floor.

Hassan Abdallah, the Turkish mat artist, was at the ringside and challenged the winner who accepted his offer. The two will meet at Riverdale rink on the 16th.

RUNNING

Appleby and Shrubb are proposed for a fifteen-mile race in the Riverdale rink, Toronto, but Shrubb absolutely refuses to run on a board track, and the race is off until spring. Shrubb is death on board tracks, and he is making no mistake in sticking to the dirt. Longboat and Simpson would do well to follow his example.

The Toronto fans are asking, "Why not give Fred Simpson a race with Dorando?" The question is a general one, and it looks as though the Powers' interests would have to lift the boycot on Tom Eck's charge.—Hamilton Spectator.

SIMPSON AND GEORGE ADAMS

Trying to Get Adams Turn Pro. and Run the Indian

An effort was made yesterday afternoon to induce George Adams to enter the professional ranks, a race being offered him for next week, when he has a chance to hook up with Fred Simpson, the Mississagua Indian, over a Hamilton track. Adams, however, flatly refused to consider the proposition at the present time, claiming that he would not leave the amateur field until he could see something definite ahead of him. "At the present time there is not much in it for me," he said, "and I will not turn pro for one race only. I think that I can trim any of the big pros at ten miles with the exception of Alf. Shrubb, and if I decide to make the jump I want to do so when I am in a position to take a crack at all of them, taking them in order. I don't want to find myself in the same position as Fred Meadows. He has lost all chance of ever getting back his amateur card, and, in addition, will get very few races now. When I make the jump I want to be prepared to go ahead and show enough form to secure enough races to make it worth while. In addition, there is no use of me turning at the present time as I am a very poor indoor runner; in fact, I run like a joke on the indoor tracks. I have got to race outdoors before I can do anything, and I won't be prepared to talk business until the outdoor game starts. It is likely, however, that I will try at some of the big game in the spring if the season looks good for middle-distance races."—Hamilton Spectator.

TO CLOSE UP CITY LEAGUE AFFAIRS

Meeting at the Oriental on Monday Night at 7.30 O'clock

A meeting to close up the affairs of the City League for the present season will be held on Monday night at the Oriental at 7.30.

As the meeting will be a very important one a full attendance of all interested is looked for. Every team is asked to be sure to have a representative on hand.

WILL WRESTLE IN NAPANEE

Hurtubise Meets Joe Hockey of Kingston There on 22nd

Gene Hurtubise will wrestle in Napanee on March 22nd when he will take on Joe Hawkey, a Napanee heavyweight. Hawkey is said to be an able mat artist. The Napanee opera house is the place suggested for the bout.

WRESTLING

Charlie Conkle and Frank Gotch had a smashing hard go at Buffalo on Thursday night. Gotch was to throw Conkle in fifteen minutes but failed to do so. Conkle and Gotch have met before and the champion always found him an awful proposition in a handicap bout.

Frank Gotch has signed articles to wrestle Yusiff Mahmout, the Terrible Turk in Chicago on April 14th. Battle will be for a purse of $10.000 the winner to get $7.500 and the loser $2.500. After affixing his signature to the articles of agreement Gotch said, "I promised Mahmout a match before I left England. I made the proviso that if he defeated a few good Americans I would give him a chance at the championship. I was gone less than eight months and on my return find that the Turk has met and defeated every wrestler of note."

CURLING

A big curling match between Lindsay and Peterborough players is on for next Tuesday when the Lindsay-Peterborough cup games will be played. Four rinks will be played here and four in Lindsay. The draw for the local skips has been made and is as follows; Messrs D Hall, W E Talbot, J H A Fitzgerald, J H Connal, W G Ferguson, G L Giroux, S Ray and R Hicks. This contest will create a great deal of interest. Lindsay won the cup last year.

NO FOUNDATION FOR THE RUMOR

There was a report around the city this morning that the Nicholls Hospital was quarantined on account of scarlet fever. The Review investigated the rumor and found it absolutely without foundation.

HER DEPARTURE IS REGRETTED

The orchestra from the Conservatory of Music played the wedding march at the Clarkson-Lundy marriage at All Saints' church this afternoon and Miss Reesor sang "Du Bist die eine blume." Miss Lundy has been prominently identified with the Conservatory of Music and her departure from the city is much regretted at that institution.

JUDGMENT IN THE DOURO PROTEST CASE RESERVED FOR COUPLE OF WEEKS

Edward Walsh Again Gives Testimony re Receiving $3 From Reeve Moher—Case Before Judge Weller Yesterday Afternoon.

The Douro election protest case came up before his Honor Judge Weller yesterday afternoon. Mr. Peck requested permission to re-open the evidence of Edward Walsh on one or two questions, and the judge granted him permission to do so.

Reeve Moher gave Walsh $3, it is stated, to pay him for acting as scrutineer at the polling booth at Torpey's school house in the last provincial election for East Peterborough. Walsh stuck to his former testimony about getting it from Mr. Moher, who told him that it was in payment for acting as scrutineer.

On further examination Mr. McWilliams brought out the evidence that Moher had told Walsh to keep quiet about it.

This was followed by argument on behalf of Mr. Moher and by Mr. McWilliams in the interests of the relator and Mr. Moher's opponent at the last municipal election, Mr. Dennis Moloney.

The judge then reviewed the law bearing on the matter, and reserved judgment as to some points, intimating that he would not give judgment for a couple of weeks, as he would be out of town.

NO "BRANDIED" CHOCOLATES BEING SOLD HERE NOW

In many places in the province confectionery dealers are being hauled up before the magistrates for selling "brandied" chocolates. It is not likely that anything of this kind will happen in Peterborough for as far as can be learned the local dealers are not violating the law.

A short time ago a deputation from the local temperance workers waited on the vendors of candies in this city and asked them to do away with any "brandied" candies they might have in stock. The dealers have complied with the request and it has not been necessary to take any further action.

LOCAL SHAREHOLDERS TO BE CALLED UPON

To Make up Ontario Bank Deficit—Payments Probably 35 or 40 Cents on Dollar—The List of Those Affected.

Official Referee Kapelle will issue calls on all the shareholders of the defunct Ontario Bank to make up whatever deficit appears on a special date to be decided upon. The call will amount probably to 35 cents or 40 cents on the dollar of holdings. The list of names of Peterborough people given below is taken from the official list of those who may be called upon. The deficit in Ontario Bank affairs is about $600,000.

It had been supposed that calls would be kept in obeyance until actions against the directors were tried, but the calls will be made and the issue of the actions, if successful, will be credited later.

The order calling for the preparation of the list was made February 2nd, but the list is only now being served on the shareholders.

There are some complaints, but it is not known if there will be any action taken by the shareholders. The call is made at the request of the creditors.

The list of local shareholders who will be called upon is as follows:

Adam Hall	$ 800.00
Mrs. I. M. E. Hall	1,400.00

Mrs. Clarice I. Davidson, surviving executrix of R. H. Davidson, $300.

SUCCESSFUL "AT HOME" AT NORMAL SCHOOL

One of the most delightful functions of the season was the "At Home" at the Normal school last evening held under the auspices of the students in attendance there. In conjunction with the course of lectures it forms a series of entertainments instituted by the Ontario Government for the information and amusement of the students. It was the first formal "reception" since the opening of the school and as the chairman observed, since the pupils were young ladies in a proportion of three to one of the young men, it might be called the school's "maiden" effort. The guests were received in the apartments of Mr. Duncan Walker, the head master, Misses Black and Cadwell and Messrs. Lees and Walsh.

After a promenade and inspection of the beautiful and brilliantly-lighted building the visitors assembled in the amphitheatre, where a programme of exceptional merit and interest was rendered. The assembly hall is the one feature of the building out of harmony with the rest, since its acoustic and artistic value is below par. It is to be hoped that the Government will remedy this defect. At the close refreshments were served in the "Gym." This annual function will be a very welcome addition to the city's list of entertainments.

The chairman was Mr. Austin, president of the Literary Society, and the programme was as follows:

Selection, by Normal School Glee Club.

Violin solo, by Miss Girven.

Solo by Miss Lavina Hallihan.

Selection by George street quartette.

Recitation by Miss Argue.

Violin solo by Dr. Park.

Solo by Mr. J. King.

Selection by George street quartette.

Solo by Miss Helen Davies.

Final scene from "The Merchant of Venice" given by a number of the Normal school students.

The accompaniments were played by Mr. John Crane and Miss Helen Davies.

The Grand Opera House orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Devey provided excellent music.

The decorations were very attractive, being arranged by J. J. Turner & Sons.

Those taking part in the trial scene from "The Merchant of Venice" were:

Shylock, S. Walsh.

Antonio, C. W. Lees.

Bassaino, R. J. Leach.

Gratiano, Geo. Sills.

Duke, W. Scott.

Portia, Miss E. Payne.

Nerissa, Miss B. Black.

Attendants, D. Campbell and J. English.

FIRST ROBIN OF THE SEASON OBSERVED THIS MORNING

As far as the Review can learn, Mr. J. T. C. Lang of Lang & Maher's, is the first person who has sighted a robin this year. The average citizen is about as proud of sighting the first redbreast harbinger of spring as Mr. Dan Whetung is of being the first to cross the ice when Chemong Lake freezes over.

Mr. Lang was very modest about this discovery, however, and it was only with considerable argument that he consented to allow his name to be used to show the discovery was actually made, and not merely an "early robin" invention.

When Mr. Lang observed the bird this morning it was hopping about in front of his house on Rubidge street with as much complacency and confidence as if it were midsummer. Mr. Robin's appearance is regarded as an indication of an early spring.

FALSE ALARMS IN PETERBORO TO BE PREVENTED IN FUTURE

The false fire-alarm artists will no longer rejoice in immunity from punishment. A poor French-Canadian workman has just secured a patent for an invention which will prevent the ultimate escape of those who send in false alarms. When the hand is inserted to turn the key a heavy handcuff or bracelet in two parts, slips over the hand and locks about the wrist. The fireman alone can release the culprit or whoever he may be from his wristlet, since they alone possess the false lock key. It is said that a few of these boxes will be tried in Peterborough at an early date.

YOUNG MAN WHO SKIPPED FROM SUDBURY LOCATED HERE

Chief Roszel received a communication from a resident in Sudbury last week asking him to try and locate a young lad who had hurriedly left there, taking a check for $74 along with him that wasn't his own. The chief soon located the guilty party here and also found the check which he had sent back to its owner in the mining town.

SKILFUL HANDIWORK OF THE MAKERS OF INDIAN WARES

The artistic and cunning handicraft of the basket and curio workers of the Indian reserves is perhaps not appreciated at its full value by the average citizen. This morning Mrs Joseph Whetung, a well known member of the Chemong reserve called at the Review office and had with her beautiful specimens of her handiwork.

Among other articles in the assortment were dainty fashioned glove cases, collar boxes, table mats, handkerchief boxes, and other creations and conspicuous by its size and quaintness a dolls cradle made of birch bark with two strips of black elm bark for rockers.

The decorative work on the outside of the smaller boxes and various ornamental knick knacks, is similar to drawn work as done by ladies with a needle, and porcupine quills, which are of a cream color, with dark brown tips, take the place of the thread and the effect is most pleasing and attractive.

In making these wares it takes much patience as well as originality and good taste and any particular work requires from two days to a week to complete it. The large baskets of course, do not call for such delicate treatment as the smaller articles do, but also show skilful execution on the part of the workers.

Becoming Glasses

J. W. BROWETT

Ref. D.M.O., Dr. of Optics of Philadelphia, graduate of best Colleges in Toronto, Detroit, Chicago, New York, and for the past twenty years has been teaching Opticians throughout the United States and Canada.

There is a great variety of frames and styles of glasses to choose from, and there is quite a knack in selecting those best suited to the features. We think we can promise you satisfaction in this respect as in every other.

We are supplying most modern eye-glasses, chains and eye-glass holders, which possess three pleasing qualities, Accuracy, neatness and price. We please your friends and think we can do as much for you

MANY BUYERS AT THE MARKET

Fine Weather Brought Them Out—The Prevailing Prices

The beautiful weather of this morning brought out a large number of prospective buyers to the market and as a result, the farmers of which there was a large number soon disposed of their produce. There was only a fair sized number in the market hall and reasonable prices prevailed.

Eggs brought from 23c to 25c, butter 28c and 30c.

In the poultry line chickens sold at from 80c to $1.25 per pair with geese from $1.25 to $1.50.

Outside on the square there was a large quantity of potatoes at 80c and 85c per bag, and a small quantity of apples at 30c a peck and $1.50 per bag. There was considerable meat offered, pork bringing 10 and 11c with beef at 6 and 7c.

There was a few loads of hay and was quickly disposed of at $11 and $12.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN WASSON

The death occurred this afternoon of Mrs. John Wasson at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Brock street. Arrangements for the funeral have not been made yet.

The many friends of Mr. L. H. Sheen, of the C.G.E. test department, who was so severely burned on Thursday afternoon, will be pleased to hear that he is better to-day.

CANÁDA SHOULD "TAKE STOCK"

The Dominion Should Find Out Extent of Her Resources

More knowledge is urgently needed as to Canada's timber resources — knowledge as to the extent of these forests, the amount of timber in them, the rate of growth and all the other particulars which must be known in order to enable those in charge to know how much timber it is safe to cut without cutting into the growing stock of the forest. Forestry experts themselves have so far had to depend to a great extent on conjecture in estimating even the acreage of the forests.

It will pay Canada to take stock of her resources now and use them with intelligence and foresight. The people of the United States are beginning to realize that they have been too prodigal in using up their resources, and the keynote of the work of their "Conservative Commission" has been the "taking stock" of the resources of the republic as to forests, mines, soil and water (both as a sources of power and as means of transportation) and the devising of economical means of using them. The Commission was appointed by President Roosevelt in May last at a meeting of the governors of the several states, scientific experts and commercial leaders, and during the second week of December last, the reports of the summer's work in computing the national resources were presented at another similar conference.

Canada may well take warning and, before her national wealth is wasted to any great extent, provide for its economical use. But the first step is to find out just how much there is. Accounts are brought from time to time of great forests existing in Canada's northland, especially along the banks of the great rivers. These accounts are given by travellers whose routes have lain along the water-courses, where the heaviest timber naturally lies. Accounts from other travellers who have gone some distance from the banks of the streams indicate that in the drier regions the timber becomes much smaller and more scattered.

To obtain definite and comprehensive knowledge as to these resources, men with a knowledge of timber estimating should be sent out to traverse the entire country, that at some distance from the streams as well as that along the water-courses. Full and accurate reports from these men would do much to clear up the hazy notions now held as to the resources in timber of the less-known parts of Canada, just as was the case with the exploring parties sent out by the Ontario Government to Northern Ontario in 1900.

PRESCRIPTION FILLED OFTEN

Many Persons Here Benefitted by Home Prescription and Druggists are Kept Busy

That the readers of this paper appreciate advice when given in good faith is plainly demonstrated by the fact that one well-known local pharmacy supplied the ingredients for the "vegetable prescription" many times within the past two weeks. The announcement of this simple, harmless mixture has certainly accomplished much in reducing the great many cases of kidney complaint and rheumatism here, relieving pain and misery, especially among the older population, who are always suffering more or less with bladder and urinary trouble, backache and particularly rheumatism.

Another well-known druggist asks us to continue the announcement of the prescription. It is doing so much good here, he continues, that it would be a crime not to do so. It can not be repeated too often, and further states many cases of remarkable cures wrought.

The following is the prescription, of simple ingredients, making a harmless, inexpensive compound, which any person can prepare by shaking well in a bottle: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Any first-class druggist will sell this small amount of each ingredient, and the dose for adults is one teaspoonful to be taken after each meal and again at bedtime. There is enough here to last for one week, if taken according to directions. Good results will be apparent from the first few doses.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE

The British Empire and her colonies are grand,
An Empire widely scattered reaching every land,
Where all laws are equal for mansion and for cot.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

About treating-making, we hear so much now said,
Which means separation, the scheme is easy laid.
Canada has enemies, all ready to plot.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

If we had independence, could we stand alone!
No, Sir, we could not, Canada soon, would be gone.
Yes, there would be fighting, Canada's blood would drop.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

Union is strength, and our Empire is quite strong;
We are noble people and ought to get along.
Then stand by the Empire, which is always on top.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

All can't be treaty-makers there must be a head,
All hail the Union Jack, let his colors be spread,
Stand by our great Empire it is a splendid prop,
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

Some talk about manhood, manhood is very fine;
Connected with the Empire Canada will shine.
Stand alone we cannot against cannon and shot;
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

Mutual protection in our Empire throughout,
Which would make our colonies prosperous and stout.
Essential to make our Empire develop.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

To support our Navy, all colonies should join,
By giving an adequate percentage of coin.
Our commercial advantages, should never stop;
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

If Uncle Sam, or alien nations, should decide
To join our great Union and sail with the tide,
Over all creation, our British Navy float.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

Washington fought England about duty on tea,
Under a pretence to make all his people free.
Yet negroes he sold at auction, and some he bought.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

And Abraham Lincoln is lauded to the sky,
Though many brave Confederates he doomed to die,
Rather than make Negroes free with his greenback note.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

Had Lincoln done as England did, and framed an Act,
To abolish all slaves by mutual contract,
Which he could have done easy, without blood or blot;
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

When war broke out I lived in Texas, lone Star State,
To be conscripted, and lose my farm was my fate;
In Houston Texas, Record Book, my name is wrote.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

With fame I fought at the battle of Galveston,
As an Artilleryman, with great distinction.
After the fight, I was offered a great gun boat.
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

Canada, Australia, South Africa,
The sun ever shines upon our Empire's array.
Lord be with us, and abide with us, is our hope,
Stand by the Union Jack and never sell your vote.

SCARLET FEVER IS PREVALENT AT MONTREAL AT PRESENT TIME

Montreal, March 4.—Montreal has just escaped from a typhoid epidemic only to be in danger of a general outbreak of scarlet fever.

The disease is principally among children, and, according to the physicians, all parts of the city are affected.

The majority of the cases are said to be of a very bad type, and during the last few days several deaths have occurred.

Both the St. Paul and the Alexandra hospitals are crowded with patients. In the latter hospital the majority of the patients are children, but in the St. Paul there are quite a few adults.

After the schools opened last September an epidemic was threatened, but as all the books, toys, etc., used by the patients were carefully destroyed, the spread of the malady was curtailed.

To-day there are 126 patients in the wards of the St. Paul and Alexandra hospital, whilst hundreds of children are being treated in isolated rooms in their homes by family doctors.

Here is the record:

BLUFFERS AMONG INSECTS TRICKS FOR SELF-DEFENCE

One Caterpillar Gets Away by Disguising Itself as an Ant and Another Passes as a Scorpion—Daddy-Long-Legs is Saved by His Awful Limbs

A penniless man who struts about in fine clothes, making people think he is a man of money and position, is practicing the art of bluff. Bluff, to be explicit, is the art of making much out of little, of causing people to think your brains or your position much greater than they really are.

One would have thought that an art like this belonged to human beings, because it requires some intelligence to bluff successfully. Yet many members of the insect world are just as smart and effective at bluff as men.

Take caterpillars. Now, a caterpillar is one of the most defenceless creatures in creation. As a general rule —for there are a few exceptions—it cannot bite, or kick, or strike, or sting. But its enemies are so numerous that it is compelled to resort to some trick of self-defence, and, as it has no weapons, it practices bluff.

The caterpillar of the Lobster Moth leads a life of incessant bluff. While very tiny it look just like an ant. "That funny brown thing with the awful jaws and straggly long legs can't possibly be a caterpillar," is what its enemies think as they pass it by.

Later on in life, when it is too big to pretend to be an ant any longer, it takes to sitting on leaves with its hideous brown head and it bulging tail stuck upright over its back, and its front legs projected forward in such an attitude of menace that spiders and ichneumons dare not venture near.

"That must be a dragon," they would say, if they could speak. "If I go near it, it will surely tear me to pieces." Yet, if they had the sense to look a little more closely, they would discover that it was a defenceless caterpillar capable only of wriggling when attacked.

The caterpillar of the Common Puss Moth is another master of the art of bluff. When born it looks like a tiny scorpion, and no respectable spider or ichneumon attempts to attack it. As it grows bigger, it develops a violet saddle down its back, and a decoration round its face something like a monk's cowl. Out of its tail proceed two long horns. When approached by an enemy or touched by human hands, it instantly sits bolt upright, turns its dreadful-looking face on its tormentor and shoots out of the top of each horn a waving scarlet, sting-like thread.

As a rule, the enemy retreats in great fright, believing it is about to be pounced upon, bitten, and stung to death. Yet in sober truth the artful caterpillar is practicing bluff. Its terrible face is a false alarm, for it cannot bite or strike hard enough to inflict a wound, and the two sting-like scarlet threads wave about in the air without ejecting any poison.

The long-legged spider—which, by the bye, is no spider at all—is another defenceless creature that relies on bluff. In this case all the bluff is in its ugly legs. Considered as legs, they are weak, ungainly limbs, easily broken, and frequently in the creature's way when it tries to crawl through crevices.

But all the world is afraid of those legs. Girls and boys run away from them, and every insect thinks that it must be an uncommonly ferocious and terrible spider to have such frightful limbs. Yet, as we have already said, not merely is it defenceless, but it is not even a spider.

In a similar way bee-flies play the fool with their many faces. Silly little flies they are, if you only understand them properly. They don't avoid being snapped up by birds and spiders some of them wear yellow coats just like wasps, and others wear brown coats just like bees.

"If I dare to tackle that dreadful creature, I shall be stabbed to death," says the timid little spider, who is too small to tackle wasps, but would readily overcome the bee-fly if only he could recognise it. "I wish there were fewer wasps about and more flies," says the little tom-tit from his perch on a tree as he surveys a garden buzzing with bee-flies all pretending to be what he does not eat.

Many moths and butterflies deceive their enemies by pretending to be withered leaves or flowers, but, of course, a large number of insects are quite destitute of the art of bluff. Perhaps the most prominent of these is the house-fly, who may be described as the very pattern of foolish honesty.

One honest insect makes another's dinner in the [illegible] in the insect world, and in consequence of his brazen impudence and his ignorance of bluff the common house-fly is more widely caught and devoured by spiders, wasps, and birds than almost any other insect.

Bluff is a useful art. Mind you, it is not hypocrisy or harmful in true bluff. It is simply a means of self-protection against the slings and arrows of the world, and only becomes harmful when mixed up with vanity and wilful deception, which are quite different things.

A "SAW OFF" BY THE TWO BANKS

Bank of Montreal Closes at Millbrook—Bank of Toronto Opens There

The Bank of Montreal here closed doors on Saturday and turned over its business to the Bank of Toronto. We understand there was a "saw-off," such as political candidates do, the Bank of Montreal pulling out here, and the Bank of Toronto reciprocating at Aurora. Mr. R. F. Haney, teller-accountant here since the opening of the Ontario Bank over three years ago, left for Eglington, North Toronto, a promotion well deserved, as he is a superior man at the cage, and a genial good fellow as well, and his many friends here will wish him continued success. Mr. Dean, manager, and Mr. Tompkins go to Oakwood, where Tommy gets the cash, a well deserved promotion. They were all made the recipients of good pipes by the Toronto Bank staff before leaving. —Millbrook Reporter.

ACUTE INDIGESTION

Cured Through the Timely Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There is no medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for stomach troubles. These Pills are not an artificial appetizer nor a stimulant. They act in nature's own way by making rich, red blood. This blood gives vigor to all the organs. When it flows through the tiny veins in the stomach it stimulates them and creates that craving which people call "appetite." Then when the appetite is satisfied with food the blood gives the stomach strength to digest it. The nourishment is absorbed by the blood and carried to every organ in the body. That is how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure stomach troubles and all blood diseases. That is how they give health and strength to weak, worn out people.

Mr. H. Thomas Curry, Port Maitland, N.S., says:—"About three years ago I was attacked with what the doctors termed acute indigestion. The first inclination was a bad taste in my mouth in the morning and a sallow complexion. Later as these symptoms developed my tongue was heavily coated, especially in the morning and I felt practically dull. My appetite began to dwindle and even a light meal left me with a sense of having eaten too much. As I grew worse I ate barely enough to sustain my body, but still experienced the most acute pains. A wretched languor came over me which I could not throw off. It seemed as if I were always tired, with but little strength and frequent violent headaches. The remedies given me by my doctor, as well as many others, failed to restore me, or even to relieve me. I was in this very unhappy state for almost a year when I read in a newspaper one day of the cure in a similar case to mine through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This decided me to give these Pills a trial. It was not long before I felt some relief from the distress after meals, and as I continued the use of the Pills all languor and drowsiness and headaches left me, and I began to enjoy increased energy and new strength. To-day I am a well man, enjoying the best of health, with never a twinge of the old trouble, and I attribute my cure entirely to the fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Disease of The Kidneys Brought on By Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Made a Well Man of Me.

I Cannot Speak Too Highly of It.

Mr. George King, 453 St. Denis St., Montreal, Canada, a well-known business man of that city, writes:

"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's disease, and after you have gone through the suffering that I have with catarrh of the bladder and kidney trouble, and have been cured you are pretty apt to remember the medicine that did the work.

"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me well and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me. I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since. Every spring and fall I take a bottle of it and it keeps me well."

MR. GEORGE KING

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease.

It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs.

The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked.

They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work.

INTERNAL CATARRH REACHES THE KIDNEYS.

Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognize the difficulty as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed.

However, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate.

Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body.

In the kidneys it is liable to terminate in Bright's disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal.

The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal, systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty.

Such a remedy has been found in Peruna. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys.

PE-RU-NA AN INTERNAL CATARRH REMEDY.

That Peruna is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits.

The testimonials given here are only specimens of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peruna in severe cases of kidney trouble.

Kidney Disease of Long Standing.

Mr. Samuel A. Paxton, 1118 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo., member I. O. O. F. and National Annuity Association, writes:

"I am a well man to-day, thanks to your splendid medicine, Peruna. I was troubled with catarrh and kidney disease of long standing when I first began using Peruna. I soon found I was getting better and continued taking it for four months. It cleaned out the system, leaving me well and strong and feeling better than I have in years."

PECULIAR CIVIC CUSTOMS OLD LONDON HAS SEVERAL

The Corporation of the City of London have recently forwarded to certain officers of state and other functionaries gifts of cloth which are annually presented in accordance with a custom many centuries old. Four yards and a half of the best black cloth have been sent to each of the following: The Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice, the Master of the Rolls, the Lord Chamberlain, the Vice-Chamberlain, the Lord Steward, the Treasurer and Comptroller of His Majesty's Household, the Home Secretary, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, the Attorney-General, the Solicitor-General, the Recorder, the Chamberlain, and the Common Sergeant. The Town Clerk receives six yards of black cloth and six yards of green cloth, and his principal clerk four yards of each.

The origin of the custom is thus explained. In the early periods of history the retainers of great lords, wearing their liveries, were so numerous as to be dangerous both to the King and the laws. Many statutes were passed between 1377 and 1504 for the purpose of putting down disorder among the retainers, but an exception was made in favor of guilds and fraternities and men of "the misteries" of cities and boroughs. This, it is thought, gave rise to the creation of liverymen of the several companies, and is supposed to be the foundation of this annual gift of what is called "livery cloth."

Another very old civic custom takes the form of a presentation of venison to the Lord Mayor, the sheriffs, and certain officers of the Corporation by the crown. The Lord Mayor receives four fat does, the sheriffs three, and the Recorder, the Chamberlain, the Town Clerk, the Common Sergeant, and the Remembrancer one each. Similar presentations of bucks in the same proportion are made annually in July. These gifts had their origin in the early charters granted to the citizens of London in which their "huntings" were secured to them, and there is in the British Museum an original warrant for six bucks issued to the Lord Mayor in 1428. It is in Norman-French, and signed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, and six other members of the Privy Council.

Assemblyman Foley introduced a bill at Albany to curb so-called "shyster" lawyers who do divorce and collection business as corporations.

Plans are completed for rebuilding the chain bridge over the Merrimac River, connecting Newburyport and Deer Island, Amesbury, Mass.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

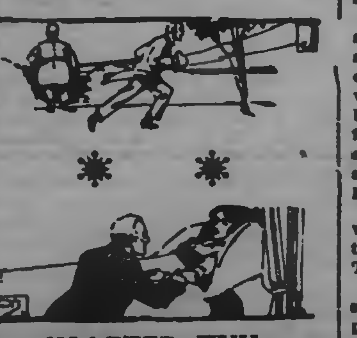
COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"My daughter?" demanded Cable, as keen as a razor in an instant. His heart was trying to jump from his body.

"Your wife, sir. Nothin' serious, sir. She was held up along here somewhere and robbed. They're sure to get the villain. She"—

But Cable was off like a deer for his home, racing as though on air.

Nothing else mattered now. She was alive! He could have her with him again to love as he never had loved her before.



CHAPTER XVII.

TWO days passed before David Cable was permitted to see his wife. During those trying hours he lived an age of agony in suspense. She had been removed to her home late on the night of the "hold-up," as the newspapers felt justified in calling it. He did not go to his office the next day nor the next, but haunted her door, sleepless, nervous, held close by dread. A dozen times at least he sought admittance to her room, but was always turned away, cursing the doctor and the nurses for their interference.

His worst fear, however, was that his wife would not forgive him. Not the dread of exposure nor his own shame or remorse, not even the punishment that the law might inflict, could be compared to the fear of what might be her lifelong hatred. He grew to feel that the doctor, the nurses, the servants, looked upon him with strange, unfriendly though respectful eyes. In his heart he believed that his wife had cursed him in their presence, laying bare his part in the unhappy transaction.

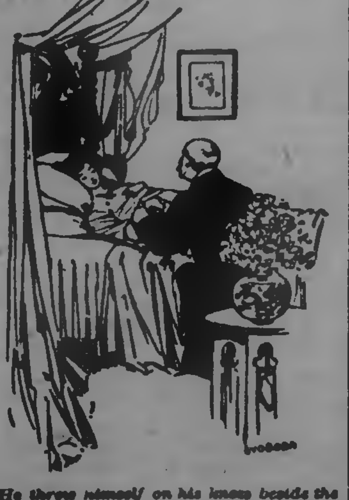
At last the suspense became unbearable. He had noticed a slight change in Jane's manner and at once attributed it to something his wife had said, for Jane had been allowed in the sick room. The discovery that she was not his child had not as yet struck deep into his understanding. In a vague sort of way he realized that she was different, now that he knew, but it was impossible for him to consider her in any other light than that of the years gone by. The time would come when the full realization would cut into his heart more deeply than now, but at present a calamity of his own making was forcing all other troubles into the background. His greatest desire was to reach his wife's side, to know the worst that could come of his suit for forgiveness.

The evening of the second day he swore that he would see her—and alone. They admitted him, and he entered trembling in every nerve. She was lying, white and haggard, in her bed, her back toward him. He paused for an instant and was certain that he saw her shudder violently. It was significant. She feared and loathed him.

"Is it you, David?" he heard her ask weakly. "At last! Oh, I was afraid that something had happened to you! That"—

He threw himself on his knees beside the bed and wept with all the pent up bitterness and misery that was in him—and still he was afraid to speak to her. Not a word left his lips until he felt her hand in his hair—a tender, timid hand. It was then that he began pouring forth his cry for forgiveness. With a groan he checked her own appeal for mercy.

"We can talk about Jane another time, not now," he cried. "I must know that you forgive me. I don't care for anything—nothing else in the world."



He threw himself on his knees beside the bed.

When the nurse came in a few minutes later he was sitting upon the edge of the bed holding her hands in his. Their faces were radiant.

"Please stay out," he said, almost gruffly.

"For just a little while," his wife added gently. The nurse hesitated a moment and then left the room.

Frances Cable told him Jane's history so far as it was known to her. He listened dully.

"She will never know her true parents," said she in the end.

"No, I suppose not," said he, looking out of the window.

"You understand, don't you, David, dear?" she said feebly. "How I dreaded to have you learn the truth after all these years, and, above all, how I hoped that Jane might never know! I tried every means in my power to buy James Bansemer's silence." She buried her head shamefully in her arms. After a moment she went on: "He professes to love his son, but his is the love an animal gives the offspring it would destroy. And yet Graydon worships him."

"Are you quite sure that Graydon is as unsuspecting as you think?"

"In regard to his father?"

"In regard to Jane."

"Oh, I'm sure of it. He is not a party to his father's schemes. If James Bansemer has not already told Graydon, he never will. It is not his plan to do so. His only object has been to browbeat me into submission. David, it will all come out right in the end, won't it? You'll forgive me?"

"Yes, dear, but this man," and David Cable shook with emotion as he spoke, "will have to answer to me. There will be no more to fear," he said reassuringly. "I'll crush him as I would a snake."

"David, you must not"—

"Don't worry," he broke in. "I'll attend to him and see that no harm comes to any one else. That man has no business among honest people."

"But, David, I was not honest with you," she confessed.

"That was a long time ago, and she's as much mine as she is yours. So, what's the odds now? It's a facer, I'll admit, but it can't be helped." It was thus that the man whose anger only a few hours before had led him almost to crime now readily absolved her of any blame.

"Poor child, poor child!" she moaned. "It will break her heart. She is so proud and so happy."

"Yes, she's proud. There is good blood in her. I don't wonder now that I used to think she was such a marvel. She's—she's not just the same sort of stock that we are, take it as you will."

"She never must know the truth, David."

"She's bound to find it out, dear. We'd better tell her. It will be easier for her. Bansemer's fangs must be made harmless forever. He shan't bother her. She'd better hear the story from us and not from him."

"But Graydon? She'll lose him, David."

"I'm not so sure of it. She's worthy of any man's love, and we must know that Graydon loves her. I'll trust to that. But, first of all, we must put it beyond the power of James Bansemer to injure her in any shape or form. Then, when I go after him—Graydon or no Graydon—he'll know that there is such a place as hell."

"Be rational, David. Let us take our time and think well, dear. I can't bear the thought of the story that will go out concerning me—how I deceived you about Jane for years and years. What will people think of me? What will they say?" she almost wailed.

"Frances," said he, his voice tense and earnest, "that is between you and me. I intend to say to the world, if occasion demands, that I have known from the first that Jane was not our child. That will be"—

"Oh, David, you can't say that," she cried joyously.

"I shall say it, dear old partner. I shall say that you took her from the asylum with my consent. There is only James Bansemer to call me a liar, and he will not dare!"

"That old man Droom, David—his clerk. The man who saved me—he knows."

"He is in the boat with his master. He did save you, though. I'll spare him much for that. And I have more to fear from him than you think. Frances, I am sure he saw me night before last down there at the sea wall. He knows, I am morally certain, that you were not attacked by a robber."

"But, David, I was robbed. My rings and my pendant were taken by some one. If Droom was the first man at my side—after you—then he must have taken them."

"I can't charge him with the theft," groaned Cable. "He saved your life and he might ruin mine. I would give anything I have to know just how much he saw of the affair. I can't account for his presence there. It seems like fate."

"It is impossible for him to accuse you, David."

"It is not impossible, I'm afraid. He may have seen me plainly."

"But I have described my assailant to the police. You do not answer the description in any particular."

In the next ten minutes the nurse came in twice to caution him against overtaxing her nerves, politely hinting that he should depart at once. There was no medicine, no nursing, no care that could have done her so much good as this hour with her husband.

"It hurt me more than I can tell you, David, when I saw that you were jealous of him. I could see it growing in you day after day, and yet I could not find the courage to make everything clear to you. Oh, how could you have suspected me of that?"

"Because I am a man and because I love you enough to care what becomes of you. I was wrong, I am happy to confess. Forgive me, dear. I can't tell you how terrible the last month has been to me. I can't tell you of the bitter thoughts I have had nor the vicious deeds I have planned. I was almost insane. I was not accountable. I have much to pay to you in the rest of the years that I live; I have much to pay to my own conscience, and I also owe something to James Bansemer. I shall try to pay all these different debts in the coin that they call for."

"We owe something, you and I, to Jane," said she as he arose to leave the room.

"A confession and more love than ever, Frances. I love her with all my heart. When you are stronger we will tell her that she is not our child. We have loved her so long and so well that she can't ask for better proof of our devotion. That terrible thing at the sea wall must remain our secret, dear. Tomorrow I shall begin pulling James Bansemer's fangs."

He found Graydon downstairs with Jane. A sharp look into the young man's eyes convinced him that his questions concerning Mrs. Cable and the latest news concerning the efforts to take the bandit were sincere. Cable held his hand for a long time; the firm, warm grasp was that of an honest man. As he stepped out into the night for a short walk over town he wondered, with a great pain in his heart, if Graydon Bansemer would turn from Jane when he heard the truth concerning her.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"IT'S Harbert," said Elias Droom.

"Why didn't you say to him that I am busy? I don't want to see him," said his employer in a sharp undertone. Droom's long finger was on his lips, enjoining silence.

"He said that you wouldn't want to see him, but that it didn't make any difference. He'll wait, he says."

They were in the private office, with the door closed. Bansemer's face was whiter and more firmly set than ever. The ugly fighting light was in his eyes again.

"If he has come here to threaten me, I'll kill him," he said savagely.

"You'll do nothing of the kind," said the clerk, with what was meant to be a conciliatory smile. "Meet him squarely and hear what he has to say."

"Do you suppose she has told Cable? He may have sent Harbert here."

"Cable's hands are tied. I know too much. If I were to tell the police what I know he'd have a devil of a time getting the presidency of his road. Besides, they both owe me a vote of thanks. Didn't I have sense enough to make it look like robbery?"

"Yes, but curse your stupidity, they may charge you with the job. Nobody would believe that Cable would attempt to rob his own wife."

"But they would in any event decide that he had taken the rings to make it appear like robbery." There was a hard rap on the glass panel. "He's bound to see you, sir."

"Well, then, show him in!" snarled Bansemer.

"Mr. Bansemer will see you, sir," said Droom suavely, opening the door suddenly.

"Thanks," said Harbert shortly. He entered the private office and faced the lawyer, who was standing near his desk. "I've taken advantage of your invitation to drop in and see you."

"This is one of my busy days, Mr. Harbert," said Bansemer, determined to come to the point at once. "However, I hardly expected a social call from you, so it must be of a business nature. What is it?"

"It concerns your son, Mr. Bansemer. I'm here in the capacity of a physician. You must go away for his health." Harbert smiled as though he thought it a good joke. Bansemer turned red and then white.

"I don't quite appreciate your wit, sir."

"My humor, I'd suggest as a substitute. Well, to be perfectly plain, sir, your son does not know the true nature of the malady. He"—

"Do I understand you to say that he really has an ailment?" exclaimed Bansemer seriously.

"It isn't hopeless, my dear sir. My only desire is to keep him from ever finding out that he has a malady. He is sure to learn the truth if you remain here."

"Harbert, I understand you now, and I want to say this to you: I'll not drag that boy away from this city. He's successful here, and he's one of the most promising young men in town. I'm not going to have him hounded from town to town by"—

"You don't quite understand me, sir. On the contrary, he should remain here. What I do mean to say is this: He won't feel like staying here if the truth about his father is uttered. That's the brutal way to put it, Bansemer, but you've got to get out."

The two glared at each other for a full minute. Bansemer was as white as a sheet, but not with fear.

"Harbert," he said in low tones, "I've half a mind to kill you."

"Don't. You'd hang for it. There are at least a dozen members of the bar who know that I have come here to see you, and they know why too. See here, Bansemer, you're a scoundrel to begin with. You've always been a knave. How you happen to have a son like Graydon I can't imagine. Bansemer, I believe that I drove you out of New York. You escaped without exposure simply because the witnesses lost their nerve. That won't be the case here. You think you've covered your tracks nicely. You haven't. You've tripped into half a dozen traps. I don't know what your game is with the Cables, but you're base enough to take advantage of your son's position in that home. Don't interrupt! I'll soon be through. I'm a man of few words. If it were not for your son I'd swear out the warrants for you today on five different charges. For his sake I'm going to give you a chance. I've worked on you for three years. I swore I'd get you some time. Well, I've got you, and I'm going to cheat myself out of a whole lot of pleasure. I'm not going to smash you as I intended. Your son's friends have prevailed.

"To show you that I am not bluffing, I have every bit of evidence in the Burkenday case, the Flossie Bellamy job, the Widow Hensmith affair—and it was a damnable one, too—with two or three more. You broke that woman's heart. I don't suppose you know that she died last month. You never noticed it, eh? Her precious coachman is living like a lord on the money you and he took from her. Old Burkenday's housemaid has bought a little home in Edgewater—but not from her wages. The two jobs you now have on hand never will be pulled off. The girl in the Banister Watts case has been cornered and has confessed. She is ready to appear against you. McLennan's wife has had the courage to defy your accomplice—that dastardly butler of theirs, and he has left town, frightened out of his wits. Your time has come. The jig is up. It won't be as it was in New York, because we have the proof. There is a committee of three down in Rigby's office now waiting for me to report. If I take word to them that you expect to sail for Europe next week, never to return to this country, all well and good. It is for your son's good health, bear in mind. If you go, the public may never learn the truth about you. If you stay, you will be in jail before you are a week older. And, Mr. Bansemer, you've got to decide quick."

Bansemer looked his accuser straight in the eye, a faint smile of derision touching his lips, but not his eyes.

"Mr. Harbert, the first thing you have to learn in connection with your patient's father is that he is not a coward. I refuse to run, sir. I am innocent of any intentional wrong, and I'll stand my ground. My son will stand beside me, too. He is that sort. Go back to your committee and tell them that Bansemer will not go to Europe for his son's health. Good day, sir!"

"Nonsense, Bansemer!" exploded Harbert. "You know we've got you fast enough. Why be a fool as well as a knave? You haven't a ghost of a chance. I'm trying to do you a good turn."

"A good turn? Mr. Herbert, I am neither a fool nor a knave. If I were a fool, I'd kill you where you stand. I would be justified in killing the man who represents a crowd of blackmailers. That's what you are, sir. I refuse to pay your price. If I were a knave, I'd pay it. I want you to understand one thing. I shall stand my ground here. If you persecute me I'll not stop flaying you until death ends my endeavors. We'll see what justice can give me in exchange for your bulldozing. I will have restitution, remember that. Now, you've nothing more to say to me. Get out!"

"Sir?"

"Get out!"

"By George, you're a wonderful bluffer."

"Do you expect me to throw you out, sir?"

"It isn't necessary. I've had a change of heart in the last minute, Mr. Bansemer. I withdraw my proposition. By all that's holy, I intend to go after you now without pity. Hang your son's feelings! You won't take my advice. I didn't give it as a friend, because I detest you. It was done in a weak spirit of fairness toward your son and toward the girl he is to marry. Now, I put them out of my consideration. They"—

"Get out!"

Harbert, very red in the face, slammed the door after him and strode angrily through the outer office into the corridor. Droom immediately entered the consultation room.

"Well? What is it?" demanded Bansemer.

"What did he want?"

"He invited me to go to Europe for an indefinite stay. I refused. We'll fight it out, Droom. We have covered our trail better than he thinks. They can't convict me. I'm sure of that. They have nothing but conjectures, and they won't go in court."

"I'm afraid of him, just the same. You're bull headed about it. Every criminal thinks his tracks are covered until it is too late to cover them properly."

"Curse you, Droom; I'm no criminal."

"A slip of the tongue on my part. Do you know who is down there in Rigby's office with those fellows?"

"An officer, I dare say."

"No; David Cable."

VARICOCELE CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $27 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

What Our Trade-Mark Means to You

IT means that the flour contained in bags and barrels so trade-marked is decidedly whiter, a great deal stronger and more nutritious than other flours.

It means that the flour has been properly aged to mature its full strength.

It means

"More bread and better Bread" and better pastry, too.

It means elimination of uncertainty—"your money back" if Purity fails to give entire satisfaction.

Costs more than the other kind, but worth the difference.

THREE ARRESTED FOR THE ASSAULT ON THE CONSTABLE

J. Goheen, L. Penrose and J. McDonald, Gathered in at Lindsay—Two Suspects Are Still at Large

Lindsay, March 5.—Developments in connection with the brutal assault on Constable Short early Thursday morning assumed an interesting phase this morning, in the arrest of three young men, named J. Goheen, L. Penrose and J. McDonald, who are charged with being implicated in the assault.

HOW IT WAS EFFECTED.

The police department came in for a good deal of criticism yesterday for the apparent indifference manifested and the supposed negligence of the officers in not arresting the suspects, when they were known to be about town. The police had a motive in view. They felt that they could successfully bag the smaller game at their leisure, and centred all their efforts towards arresting Michael Carlin, the ringleader, whom the Post is informed by reliable authority, has been located. The police department is apparently satisfied on this score, for this morning Constable Wm. Thornbury arrested Goheen and McDonald, while Chief Vincent bagged Penrose. The accused, it is understood, made no effort to evade arrest.

TWO STILL AT LARGE.

Michael Carlin and another suspect, L. Carlin, are still at large, and when they are corralled the whole outfit will be in custody.

Shortly after one o'clock on Thursday morning a man called at two houses at the Pottery Corners and asked to be allowed to stay. He was refused admittance and apparently took refuge in a barn, as the owner saw foot marks leading to and from the structure.

Another report which reached the Post was to the effect that a man answering the description of Carlin asked for something to eat at a farm house in the vicinity of Powles Corners some time yesterday.

THE INJURED OFFICER

Inquiries at the Ross hospital today elicited information that Constable Short was progressing favorably. He is still suffering from the injuries received in the melee but no serious results are anticipated.

Mr. J. Dixon is acting as special night constable in the meantime.

WERE REMANDED

The three young men appeared today before Magistrate Jackson and pleaded not guilty. They were remanded for a week and placed in jail. Young Carlin, it is understood, will give himself up this afternoon.

CAN GROW BEST WHEAT ON EARTH

One of the Reasons Why Westerners are Proud of Their Country

Both the story and the success of Purity Flour begin in the rich, black heavy soil, the gumbo, as it is called, that characterizes the plains of Western Canada. After examination by the world's foremost scientists, this soil has been proclaimed the richest on earth's surface in every constituent that goes to the making of wheat. Western Canada must therefore be looked to for wheat by all the wheat-eating countries that want the best flour, or require full, hard wheat. So that the reason for the existence of the great St. Boniface mill of the Western Canada Flour Mills Company lies in the fact that it stands at the door of the provinces which possess this rich, wheat soil.

The St. Boniface Mill is one of the show places of Winnipeg. Among millers it is famous as one of the most perfectly equipped large modern mills in the world. In extent the property covers over 12 acres. The mills, which were completed in 1906, cost over $1,000,000. The mill proper is seven stories in height, with a floor space of 75,000 square feet: and apart from the mill there are 14 tanks with a capacity, including the workhouse, of over [illegible] bushels: an elevator that has a capacity of [illegible] bushels, and an electric power plant from which is distributed power, light and heat for the entire establishment.

The mechanical equipment is nothing short of marvellous. Its amazing completeness may be estimated from the fact that in the huge seven story building of the mill itself there are less than ten men employed; the entire work being carried on by automatic machinery.

Is it any wonder these Westerners are proud proud of their country and its soil, their wheat, and of the product of that wheat, i.e. Purity Flour!

EXTRA VOTE OFFER CLOSES MARCH 8--CONTEST ENDS MARCH 22.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS FIRST; MISS ROSE P. MOORE SECOND; MISS BIRDIE DAWSON THIRD

That is the Way They Stand To-day for the Trip Abroad—The Tall Hustling That Will be Done Before Tuesday May Change the Line-up.

HURRY! HURRY! CLUB OFFER CLOSES MONDAY

If You Are a Patron of the Review You Are Invited to Have a Hand in Deciding Who is to be Sent on a Magnificent Tour of Europe— If You Are Not a Patron, You are Invited to be One and in This Way Help Some Friend as Well as Secure the Best Paper in This Vicinity The Voting is Free to the Patrons of the Review.

Each Candidate

Sending or bringing to the Review office 5 NEW yearly subscriptions to the Daily by March 8, at 9 p.m., will be given a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 10,000 EXTRA VOTES

Ten NEW yearly subscriptions to the Weekly will entitle the candidate to a

SPECIAL BALLOT FOR 5,000 EXTRA VOTES

Each 5 years' Daily or 10 years' Weekly will constitute a "Club." This bonus vote will be given in addition to the regular certificates of votes on the payment of a subscription. If you can secure more than one of these DO SO. Get as many as you can. This is the biggest offer of the contest.

These special ballots will not be issued until after March 8.

Miss Maud Adams made quite a plunge yesterday going from 51,000 to 66,000, and consequently leading the contest. Miss Dawson edged Miss Perry out of second place to-day, though holding first place yesterday. Miss Moore reached the 60,000 mark, and P. G. Towns passes 40,000. As the club offer closes Monday, it is more than likely there will be some great "going" at that time. In the meantime every candidate is rounding up every obtainable subscription and it will take all the most popular person in the county can secure to win the grand prize.

If the contest ended to-day the following list would represent the winners:

TRIP TO EUROPE
Miss Maude Adams.
FIRSTS
Miss Rose P. Moore.
Miss Birdie Dawson.
Herb. McMillan.
P. G. Towns.
SECONDS
Miss Maude Perry.
Miss Lila Finlay.
W. G. Rundle.
Sidney A. Smithson.

But it does not close until March 22, and there is plenty of time for any one to forge to the front.

No one up to this time, has a sufficient number of votes to justify them in packing their trunk for the trip. The new candidates who entered a short time ago and others low down in the list are just as liable to win the great European tour or diamonds or gold watches, as any one of the leaders. It is still anybody's race.

Goose Quill Pens Still In Use.

Every great work of literature before the middle of the 19th century was written with a goose quill. The poetry of Spenser, Chaucer and Milton, the plays of Shakespeare, the philosophy of Bacon—in fact, all the literature of every country in modern times, all the music of Handel and Bach, Mozart and Haydn and Beethoven, owes its existence to the goose quill.

How the geniuses could express their thoughts with such pens seems inconceivable to anyone who has ever tried to write with a quill. One would suppose that the writer's attention would be so much taken up with the pen that he would not have room in his mind for anything but objurgations at the necessity of writing with such a miserable implement, for it drops the ink in great daubs, catches in the paper and splatters, and on the slightest provocation splits up the back and becomes useless. So that mending a quill pen is about as important and essential as the making of them.

It seems queer therefore, that, considering the abundance, excellence, and especially the cheapness, of steel pens, anybody should prefer the old goose quills, but there are some who do. They are mostly foreigners, Bohemians, Hungarians and Russians, generally men well along in years, who have been using quills all their lives and have an idea that writing can hardly be done at all except with a goose quill.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

To Prevent Coal Strike.

Ottawa, March 6.—Steps are now being taken by the Department of Labor looking to the appointment of a board of investigation to enquire into the difference between the Dominion Coal Co. and those of its employes who have lately withdrawn from the Provincial Workmen's Association to ally themselves with the United Mine Workers of America. The company, it seems, has threatened the dismissal of the employes concerned.

Farm Hand Denied Entry.

Berlin, Ont., March 6.—Andrew Distner, a young farmer who lived about two miles from here, desiring to go to Nebraska, where he had been engaged by a farmer, bought a ticket here, but was turned back at Detroit, indicating that the United States Government is observing the same restriction on farm laborers as in the case of trade workers attempting to go from Canada to work in the United States.

In turning Distner back the Detroit official said it meant that he would not be permitted to cross the line for one year and stated at the same time that this was the thirteenth Canadian who had been turned back at Detroit this week.

Saving Daylight Bill.

London, March 6.—The Daylight Savings Bill passed its second reading in the House of Commons yesterday by 150 votes to 94.

This bill was drafted to promote the earlier use of daylight in certain months yearly, by putting forward the clock 20 minutes on four successive Sundays in April and by reversing the process on the four Sundays in September. The bill, it has been argued, would be of great benefit to all classes by giving the people just so much more sunlight in which to have recreation, while the wage-earners would retire earlier and thereby save the expense of light.

Sugar Trust Fined.

New York, March 6.—A verdict awarding the United States Government $134,116 damages in unpaid customs duties from the American Sugar Refining Co. was rendered yesterday by a jury which heard charges of mis-weighing sugar imports.

Testimony was adduced to show that fraudulent devices had been attached to the scales there, causing them to register less than the true weight. The motion for a new trial was denied.

POLICE HAVE CLUE TO THE ASSAILANT OF THE OFFICER

Believe Chicken Thief Shot P.C. Smith.

Bag Picked up at Scene of Shooting Furnishes Clue---The Kinrade Case.

Hamilton, March 8.—The first threads of a web of evidence which the Hamilton and provincial detectives have been trying to gather up against the man who fired upon and perhaps fatally wounded Constable Smith of Hamilton last Thursday night have been obtained by the authorities, who are now satisfied that the shooting of the policeman and the murder of Miss Kinrade were not done by one and the same person. The theory that the man who shot the policeman was the one who murdered Miss Kinrade, which met with much favor at first because so many of the circumstances of the case supported it, has been completely abandoned by both the city of Hamilton and provincial detectives.

The investigation of the shooting of the policeman is being left solely in the hands of the Hamilton police officers, who are looking for a man now believed to be in or near Hamilton, and whose principal occupation of late has been the systematic stealing of chickens. The connection of the man with the shooting of the policeman has been established by a bag picked up after the constable was shot. The bag, the police assert, was a short time before in the possession of a man seen loitering around the home of Bishop Dowling, which is just in the rear of the dwelling where Police Constable Smith was shot. The man who had the bag under his arm was spoken to by Joseph Lynch, coachman for Bishop Dowling. The man was about 5 feet 8 inches in height, and spoke with a decided English accent. He is also described as having rosy cheeks, with a two-weeks' growth of a moustache. His clothing consisted of a light brown or grey suit and peak cap. He wore no overcoat, and had every appearance of having just come a short distance when he met the bishop's coachman. That the man was an ordinary chicken-thief is evident, the police say, from the number of feathers found inside the bag which was carried by the man, and afterwards picked up at the scene of the shooting.

With this evidence in the possession of the authorities it is believed the mystery attending the shooting of the constable will be cleared away as well as some of the dread and uncertainty which have been abroad in Hamilton since the murder of Miss Kinrade and increased when the policeman was fired upon. The man who shot Constable Smith was discovered in the home of Mr. E. W. Kappele, southeast corner of Ray and Market streets, about 9 o'clock on Thursday night, by the constable, who at once asked several neighbors to assist him in surrounding the house. They were passing through a side alley to enter the house from the rear when they were fired upon from the rear of the house. One bullet struck Constable Smith on the side of the head, and the second hit Mr. James Hanley on the temple. Both men fell to the ground, but did not lose consciousness. When they were picked up they were able to walk to the street, and the ambulance being called, they were taken to the city hospital. An X-ray operation performed on Friday showed that Constable Smith was very seriously injured, half of a bullet having penetrated the brain. The weapon used was a 38-calibre revolver.

Constable Smith's condition last night is not as favorable as the doctors had hoped for. He is suffering much pain and has to be given opiates.

With the definite statement of the police that the shooting of the constable and the murder of Miss Kinrade were not the work of the same party interest centres about the story Miss Flossie Kinrade will have to tell on Wednesday night, when the inquest will be proceeded with. Mr. and Mrs. Kinrade and the other members of the family, now at the Arlington Hotel, Toronto, have also been notified to attend and throw what light they can on the mystery which is hanging over the tragedy. That confident manner which has been noticeable with the detectives ever since the murder is now even more marked, and it was said in police circles last night that there will be developments of more than passing interest at the sitting on Wednesday nigh. For the instruction of the jurors Provincial Detective Mills on Saturday had plans made and photographs taken of the Kinrade house.

A Doctor's Statement.

Toronto, March 8.—The Mail and Empire this morning in a despatch from Hamilton quotes Dr. Evans, who assisted at the Kinrade autopsy, as saying that the four bullets in the head of the dead girl had been there fifteen minutes before the fatal shot was fired through her heart. This he says is proven by the blood clots about the bullets. An eighth shot he also said was fired, passing through the victim's hair pad.

CONDUCTORS ARE GUILTY

But Recommendations to Mercy Are Made---Cases Are Tried at Toronto.

Toronto, March 8.—A verdict of guilty with a recommendation to mercy was returned at 9.15 Saturday night against former G.T.R. Conductors Dan Corrigan and Frank McCallum, and Harry Rosenbes and Joseph Woods. They will not be sentenced until the end of the sessions, and will in the meantime remain in the jail, bail being absolutely refused.

The quartette were arrested in a round-up planned to take effect simultaneously in Montreal and Toronto. Rosenbes and Woods were suspected of having manufactured bogus tickets good for passage between Toronto and Montreal, which were sold at about $4 each, and which the two conductors, by special arrangement, accepted in lieu of the regular tickets.

The verdict was returned on the first count of "conspiracy to defraud the Grand Trunk Railway" in accordance with Judge Winchester's instructions that if from the evidence the jury were convinced that there was common design they could not bring in a verdict against one and allow the others to go free.

The jury were out two hours and fifteen minutes. As they retired to consider the evidence, Messrs. Robinette, Curry and Geary, counsel for the defence, jumped to their feet with a host of objections to the manner in which his honor had charged, and they argued so a good half hour. The jury were then recalled and the judge carefully went over the points raised. Some of his statements he admitted might be unprivileged.

The witnesses on Saturday were detectives employed by the Thiel Agency and who testified to having purchased and used bogus tickets, involving the men on trial. The defence sprang a surprise by calling no witnesses, and counsel for the defence thus had the privilege of last addressing the jury.

A CLERGYMAN IS EXPELLED

London, March 8.—With impressive rites the decree deposing from holy orders the Rev. J. Hugh Smyth-Pigott, the Church of England clergyman who has been posing as the Messiah, was pronounced by the Bishop of Bath and Wells in Wells Cathedral Saturday. Smyth-Pigott was not present.

Smyth-Pigott has been for years the head of a notorious religious community that occupies an establishment known as Agapemone, or the Abode of Love, in Somersetshire, England. His followers worship him, and he teaches that the ordinary rules of morality are not binding upon those to whom spiritual light has been given. He was tried last January before an ecclesiastic court at Wells' Cathedral and found guilty of immorality. His expulsion from the church was decreed.

ARE SHOWING A TENDENCY TO REVISION OF TARIFF

Strong Movement in Mother Country Against Free Trade is in Evidence—Preference for Colonies and Duty on Foreign Goods is Part of Program.

New York, March 8.—The Tribune's London correspondent cables: There is the strongest prima facie evidence that the English people are ripe for a general revolt against free trade. Tariff reform has made continuous progress since the last general election, and the struggle is likely to culminate in the establishment of a revenue tariff, with preference for the colonies and maximum and minimum schedules for foreign countries. The trend of the bye-elections is in the direction of tariffs of this nature, and Mr. Balfour's return to power is confidently expected this year or the year after.

British Conservatives, having committed themselves to a definite policy, have their own work cut out for them, and it cannot be neglected when they return to power.

The moral drawn from the elections in Scotland by The Manchester Guardian, the most consistent organ of Liberalism, is that protection is commanding the support of an increasing proportion of the rising generation of voters, whose sympathy is excited by the idea of self-sacrifice for the cause of imperial unity and whose blood is stirred by the cry, "Let us tax the foreigner." This is followed by the confession that the Liberals must labor sleeplessly for the defence of free trade by scattering tracts among the masses and by ceaseless platform activity, since the tariff reform candidates are already talking themselves hoarse in a systematic campaign of education. The country is likely to have as much economic discussion as it can stomach.

While there is nothing in the bye-elections to encourage the Ministers to appeal to the country, many Unionists assert that a general election will come in the course of a few months, either from the rejection of the budget by the House of Lords or from the Prime Minister's deliberate act in riding for a fall when he has forced the privileged House to challenge the taxing powers of the Commons. This opinion is not shared by those in Mr. Asquith's confidence. They are emphatic in declaring that there will not be a general election this year, accidents being barred. An accident has been possible over the naval estimates, but the risk has been minimized by the specious compromise arranged by the Admiralty, with the help of Sir John Fisher, by which the two-nation standard is nominally preserved and the Radical economist is dexterously played with.

Winston Churchill remains the most pushful and restless member of the Cabinet. His veiled threat of retaliation against France has brought upon him the sarcastic comment that he has left a bridge behind him for a retreat to the Unionist party.

Baltimore Was Isolated.

Baltimore, Md., March 8.—The isolation from the outside world, of which this city has been a complete victim practically since early Thursday morning, was broken, and the city began to see the end of the difficulty yesterday. The Associated Press office here has managed to secure direct wire communication with the New York headquarters by the co-operation of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

An Attempt to Assassinate.

Havana, March 8.—An attempt was made to kill Gen. Amelio Nunez, ex-governor of the Province of Havana, while he was passing through San Miguel street. Jose Cisneros, a merchant who has had a personal grudge of long standing against Gen. Nunez, fired two shots at him, but neither took effect.

Cisneros was arrested and said that he had selected the day to kill Gen. Nunez because the latter's daughter Maria was to be married at night to Edgar Raviel, son of a millionaire sugar planter.

MADMAN AND GUN

Welland Youth Holds up Three Men in Hardware Store.

Welland, March 8.—Harvey Jones, aged 19 years, came near adding a further shooting tragedy to those reported within the last fortnight.

He went into Booth's hardware store at 10.30 Saturday night and asked to see a revolver. He then enquired about the ammunition, and loaded the weapon. He began measuring the barrel with a plug of chewing tobacco, and it was seen that he was deranged.

J. W. Lamoureaux of Hamilton, who was standing nearby, asked him to unload the weapon. This he refused to do. Lamoureaux and Booth grabbed him to get the revolver and Jones shot his free hand to his hip pocket and declared that he would shoot both of them if they did not let go. As soon as he was free he drove both of them and George Boyd, who had entered the store, to the rear and announced that he was going to kill the three of them. Boyd made a desperate jump and grabbed the weapon just as he was taking aim at Lamoureaux.

The bullet grazed the latter's leg and went through the counter. He fired two more shots before the revolver was taken from him. He was at once placed under arrest. He had been drinking, but it is thought he is insane.

Tried to Beat Hotel.

Deseronto, March 8.—George Johnson of Napanee was committed to trial by Magistrate Bedford on a charge of defrauding D. McVicar, proprietor of the Deseronto Hotel. Johnson came to Deseronto on Thursday, stopping at McVicar's Hotel. He told the proprietor he was hauling timber for the Hepburn Bros. of Picton, and after stopping at the hotel a day and a night, ran away without paying for his keep.

LITTLE GIRL HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Anna Williamson Fell into Water at West Side of London Street Bridge on Saturday Afternoon---Companion Assisted in the Rescue.

Were it not for the presence of mind of two little girls Anna Williamson and Sadie Gamble, aged respectively thirteen and ten years a double drowning might have resulted in Peterborough on Saturday night.

Anna Williamson who is the daughter of Mr. J. A. Williamson, 334 1-2 George street, had gone to Mrs. Gamble's, on Ross street, Ashburnham, Saturday afternoon, and was returning home by way of the London street bridge about four o'clock in the afternoon, accompanied by Sadie Gamble. At the west end of the bridge across the river at London street the Williamson girl went down towards the water to rub the mud off her shoes in the snow. She must have got on the ice, however, for she lost her footing and slid into the water, which at this point is about ten feet deep. She called to her little companion for help and the latter hurried to her assistance. The heavy coat worn by Anna Williamson spread out when she fell in the water and kept her afloat. With the aid of her companion she managed to pull herself out, although is almost miraculous that the both girls were not drowned.

There was no person near at the time the girl fell into the water and had the children been drowned nothing would have been known as to their fate.

The two girls hurried back to Mrs. Gamble's and Anna Williamson had her wet clothing removed and her parents were notified.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Bargains For Foreigners.

Washington, March 8.—The alleged practice of foreign manufacturers selling goods in the country at a price lower than that obtained at home, was he subject of a resolution of enquiry introduced Saturday by Mr. Gallinger. The resolution which was agreed to directs the Secretary of State to "procure through consular and other representatives abroad all available information relating to the practice of foreigners selling goods in the country at a price lower than the domesic price set."

Old-Time Actor Dead.

New York, March 8.—Wm. H. Bishop, well-known in theatrical circles as manager or owner of such old time stage successes as "The Black Creek," "What Happened to Jones," and "The Country Fair," died here yesterday at his home from internal injuries sustained three weeks ago, when he was struck by a heavy automobile truck. Mr. Bishop was 64 years old.

Thousands of Delegates.

Toronto, March 8.—Secretary H. K. Caskey of the Laymen's movement for missions has received up to date the names of 873 delegated commissioners to the national congress to be held in Massey Hall from March 31 to April 4.

A special train will bring the western commissioners from Winnipeg. Montreal will send 200 delegates.

Chooses Death by Jumping.

New York, March 8.—Choosing between death by fire, which had driven him out of his blazing room and on the narrow ledge of his window, and a jump of three storeys to the sidewalk below, Dennis Redmond jumped and was almost instantly killed yesterday by striking head first on an iron railing.

To Try 384 Russian Looters.

St. Petersburg, March 8.—Proceedings have just been begun in the high court of Moscow which involve the largest conspiracy trial on record. Three hundred and eighty-four persons are charged with belonging to a criminal organization, the object of which was the stealing of merchandise on Russian railroads.

Between 1905 and 1907, during the worst period of the revolutionary disorders, over $17,000,000 worth of property was stolen on two railroads alone.

PLENARY COUNCIL

His Holiness the Pope Will Call First One in Canada Soon.

Ottawa, March 8.—The Catholic Register Extension, the organ of the Catholic Church Extension Society in Canada, will announce on Tuesday that His Holiness the Pope has resolved to call the first plenary council in Canada, through his representative, Mgr. Sbarretti, apostolic delegate. The council will be held in the early summer at Quebec, and to it will be invited all the bishops of the Dominion, superiors of religious institutions, and a full body of theologians.

This council will mark an epoch in Catholic Church in Canada, and cannot be regarded by the faithful otherwise than as a signal favor by His Holiness. His Excellency, Mgr. Sbarretti, will preside over the gathering, and while the doctrine will not be a subject of discussion, a restatement of it may be made, and disciplinary laws laid down to govern the changing conditions of the church in Canada.

The United States has had three plenary councils, one in 1852, one in 1866, and the last in 1884. The South American republics had one in 1899, so that with the holding of the proposed great gathering in Canada the entire continent of America will be covered by plenary council legislation.

HAD EYE BURNED

Accidents to Havelock Man While Firing Sawing Machine Engine

Havelock, March 8.—Mr. W. Davidson of town, suffered a very painful accident while engaged in firing on a sawing machine engine on the farm of Mr. Thos. Clarke, near Preneveau. He was putting in a fire when a redhot cinder flew out, lighting on his eye ball, as a result his eyebrows were scorched off and his eyeball very badly burnt. The services of a doctor were at once got, but the eye up to the present is very badly inflamed, and is also very painful. Mr. Davidson resides on Ontario street.

HIS HOLINESS REPORTED ILL

Is Pope Ill?

Rome, March 8.—The Pope's indisposition has taken on the character of influenza and his condition inspires apprehension.

Notwithstanding his ill-health his holiness took the keenest interest in the electoral struggle yesterday, insisting upon seeing the despatches giving the returns.

The Pope is ordered to spend a week in bed. People are asking why there is such mystery about the holy father's illnesses if he is simply suffering from a slight cold. They suspect that Pius X. is really suffering from some serious disease which the doctors are striving to conceal; something, for instance, like heart trouble, which in an aged gouty person is dangerous.

Teacher Burned at North Bay.

North Bay, March 8.—Miss Beanlands, directress of the kindergarten department of the public schools here, met with an unfortunate accident Saturday night while preparing to make tea on a spirit lamp in her boarding house. The alcohol blazed up suddenly from an overflow in filling and the young lady tried to smother the flames with her skirts. Her clothing took fire. A gentleman boarder took her in his arms and ran out of the house, where he smothered the flames in the snow, but not before Miss Beanlands was seriously burned from the waist down. Her condition is critical, and her father, Rev. Canon Cody of Vancouver, has been notified.

Murdered His Sweetheart.

Medina, Ohio, March 8.—Guy Rasor was found guilty of manslaughter late Saturday by the jury trying him for the murder of his sweetheart, Orie Lee, Oct. 8. The penalty is a sentence of one to twenty years in the penitentiary. He and the young girl were friends from childhood and were engaged to be married. The wedding had been postponed several times. When Miss Lee's body was found it was found that she was in a delicate condition.

Blinds Husband For Life.

Norwich, N.Y., March 8.—Mrs. H. C. Jacobs shot her husband in the head yesterday, inflicting serious injury, and then shot and fatally wounded herself. She survived her injuries only a few hours, but her husband will probably live, though he will be blind for life.

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS

Will be Taken up at Annual Meeting of Board of Trade To-morrow Night.

Important questions will be discussed at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade, which will be held in the City Council Chamber to-morrow night at eight o'clock. The waterworks dam by-law and the power question will be be taken up and arrangements have been made to have the by-law fully outlined in order that the ratepayers may be able to vote intelligently. The power question is also a subject of much interest at the present time.

Election of officers will also take place and other important business will be transacted. There should be a large attendance. The public is invited.

Indictment Against C.P.R.

Detroit, Mich., March 8.—A Washington despatch says the division of prosecutions of the interstate commerce commission was notified yesterday that an indictment containing 21 counts had been found in the District of Vermont against the Canadian Pacific Railway and an indictment containing the same number of counts against the Quaker Oats Co. The Canadian Pacific is charge with giving transportation of certain stocks, food and other grain products from Richmond, Vt., to Boston, Mass., and nearby points free of charge. The recipient of these favors is alleged to have been the Quaker Oats Co.

Ottawa Scouts.

Ottawa, March 8.—The winter scouting competition between an Ottawa team and the 41st Regiment of Brockville, which started at 7 o'clock Saturday morning, concluded near Kemptville at 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

They had got about midway between Prescott and Ottawa when the Ottawa scouts, on their snowshoes, sighted the enemy first and shot them up.

In the matter of points Ottawa got 69 and Brockville 33. Both sides enjoyed the novel feature and the night bivouac in winter. In the autumn the experiment will be repeated upon a much larger scale.

Three-Year Agreement With Miners.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 8.—There is a distinctly better feeling in the hard coal fields regarding the outcome of the negotiations for the new agreement. This is no doubt due to the cordial manner in which Mr. Lewis says he was received by the presidents of the coal-carrying roads when he met them individually in New York and Philadelphia to arrange a conference. Business men say that they feel that there will be no trouble and that they look for only a short suspension of work, if indeed there is any stoppage in the mining of coal.

The business interests of the entire region are almost unanimous for a three-year agreement in order to avoid an annual disturbance in business.

It Would Save [illegible]illions of Dollars.

Would Dam up [illegible] River and Make it [illegible] the System.

Niagara Falls, [illegible] 8.—As an alternate route [illegible] of the proposed new Welland [illegible] suggested by Hon. G. P. Graham, on Friday, J. C. Gardner, B.A., Sc.A.M.C., Soc. C.E., formerly engineer to the Government of Chili, consulting engineer to several large American companies, has outlined a scheme which, if adopted by the Government, will save millions of dollars.

It is to build a dam in the Welland river near its mouth, [illegible] Lyon's Creek, just outside Chippawa, and to construct a canal three miles long from the dam to Slater's Point, the dam to raise water in the Welland river ten feet to the level of the Welland Canal, making the Wellnad river part of the canal system.

Mr. Gardner has spent several months creating the project and a wealth of data and details of his plans testify to both thoroughness and extent of work.

The Welland Canal intersects the Welland river at Welland and there is carried across the river by a stone aqueduct.

The level of the water in the canal down to the first lock at Thorold is at the same elevation as the water in Lake Erie.

The Welland Canal has cost twenty-eight and a half millions, and the enlargement proposed by the Government will cost thirty millions.

The section between Port Robinson and Port Colborne is one of the hardest parts of the work, including heavy earth cuts and three million yards of rock to be excavated. The cost of this section would probably be three millions.

Gardner says that by making the Welland river part of the canal system, vessels drawing over fourteen feet will leave the proposed new canal at or near Port Robinson and entering the Welland river, proceed to a point near the proposed dam and be lowered by lock into the new canal leading to Slater's Point on the Niagara river. The new canal would pass through land, the average elevation of which is twelve feet above the face of the water in the Niagara and the enormous expense of [illegible] ing the present Welland [illegible] tween Port Robinson and [illegible] would be avoided, while [illegible] ing under fourteen feet [illegible] pass to and from Lake [illegible] present canal.

Of course, all the low [illegible] the Welland river would be [illegible] raising the water ten feet [illegible] the only great object [illegible] scheme. A generous [illegible] the value of this land [illegible] dollars, and this [illegible] more than neutralized by [illegible] ed value of adjoining [illegible] ping facilities, which [illegible] ated along the banks of [illegible] river for twenty miles [illegible] the proposed dam, [illegible] ing of millions of [illegible] would be expended by [illegible] ment on their scheme [illegible]

Gardener estimates [illegible] his plan at two million [illegible]

GRAIN THIEVES ARE BUSY OFFICIALS MAKE DISCOV[illegible]

Toronto, March 8.—Systematic fraud in short-weight delivery of oats is alleged against two men for whom the police are now searching. It is said that several local firms have "suffered rather heavy losses."

The operators have been a former traveler for a flour and feed firm, and a small grain dealer from an outside town. The modus operandi has been simple, but successful. After having had a load weighed, and the certificate issued, the wagon has been driven to the car and several hundred pounds removed. The balance was delivered as the original load.

The bait by which custom has been secured was an extremely low price, 43 to 48 cents a bushel being [illegible] while the price by carload [illegible] cents and on the market [illegible]

[illegible] had been secured by one of [illegible] telling the stableman he would [illegible] ply all oats wanted at 46 [illegible]

One small load netted a profit of $10.

Loan to G.T.P.

Montreal, March 8.—The rumor is freely circulated here that the Government will loan $10,000,000 to the G.T.P. in order to tide them over their present financial difficulties. Reports to this effect have been circulated by a number of M.P.'s from the city who are home for the weekend. They state that the G.T.P. will borrow this amount from the Dominion Government, giving ample security for its payment. It is said that the G.T.P. will seek their precedent for this in the action of the Macdonald Government in loaning thirty millions to the C.P.R. on the personal guarantee of Lords Strathcona and Mountstephen and Mr. R. B. Angus. This amount was repaid long before it was due, and it is said that the G.T.P. could do the same

Hurls Herself From Bridge.

Hamilton, March 8.—A woman who flung herself from the high level bridge, Saturday morning has been identified as Miss Annie Kobidqvska, a Polish woman, 22 years of age, who has been employed at the Tackett company since she came to this country about a year ago.

She lived with her brother, who says that she has been acting strangely for the past few days, refusing to leave her room. It is thought that her mind was deranged.

THE WEST

Middle Canada is more or less a a state of unsettledness, due to the lax administration of law and the apparent determination of Grit office-holders to miss no chance of strengthening themselves in office. Government is becoming a pretty expensive luxury in Canada. In the west public lands are owned by the Ottawa Government and are sold in immense areas to companies of eastern or American speculators who acquire them at wholesale prices and dispose of them at strictly retail rates. Great damage is being done to the settlers and to the country by this misuse of the resources of the province for the benefit of political heelers and grafters. This procedure, however, is not confined to the west. Germans, Poles, Slavs, etc., know nothing of Canadian institutions, and care less. They are taught to look to the government for everything and vote for it without regard to provincial or municipal rights. There will be a day or reckoning in the west as elsewhere, and when it comes order and honesty will be evolved out of chaos and cynicism it is to be hoped.

LT. GOVERNOR FRASER

Mr. Fraser who accompanied the Canadian curlers to Scotland has done much to strengthen imperial sentiment. His addresses are plain commonsense statements of fact ungarnished by flapdoodle, introduced for purposes of advertising. The Scotch people, like old country people generally want facts and those who seek to deceive them by high sounding descriptions of conditions that do not exist are weakening, not strengthening the imperial tie. However, although young and a bit wild, Canada is a country of the future if she is not dismantled and despoiled at home. The immigrant with a little capitol enabling him to get a start may look forward to a successful future for his sons and daughters and for himself.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"The conflict between Christianity and paganism will probably take place on this continent in the next generation," said Rev. Principal Gandier, of Knox College, in an address to the Students' Volunteer Union in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon. "The whole character of North America will be made by its Christian churches and by its character North America will mould that of the whole world. It therefore behooves us to plan for our churches now. If they are weak and sickly and our preachers lack the power of the Holy Spirit then Christianity will go down before paganism. But if they be filled with believers in the New Testament and led by strong men, paganism shall be utterly vanquished. Why should not our leaders come from our universities? It is to them the call comes from broad, deep-thinking men."

Although Mr. R. M. Waddell has not yet returned the Review has had an interview with one of the returned curlers. The Canadians nave nothing but the highest praise of the Scotchmen—in Scotland. At London they say they were not treated as they expected. In the first place they allege that the match with the London Scotchmen was on extra played at the request of the Londoners. To play at all it was necessary for the Canadians to leave their "stanes" behind them and "borrow" from the Londoners who, as agreed, loaned them what they themselves did not want, but refused to allow them to put them on the ice to Scot off, and as a consequence, the Canadians were greatly annoyed as well as handicapped. One Canadian-Scotchman says also that the Canadians were banquetted before the game only a few of the banquetters turning up, and that they were compelled to pay the usual admission fee of 1 shilling to enter the rink to play! As a consequence the tension between the teams was high. Our informant being a Scotchman himself was for attributing it to the changed environment of the London players.

"It is astonishing how many powerful minds have taken this attitude to the Church, and continue to take it. The idea of a "minister of religion" came to be an absolutely incredible idea to Milton, and he never went to church. Neither did Carlyle, for the same reason. We all know his attitude to Hebrew old clothes. Like Schiller, because he was religious he was of no denomination; he could only be religious in the freedom of the spirit, by renouncing all the religions. In the same spirit there is a whole school of German writers, whose influence is beginning to appear in our own country, and who are never weary of repeating that Jesus was a layman whose great achievement was to redeem men from the Church. It is not in loyalty to the Church but in independence of it that we prove our fidelity to Him. Discounting the juvenile petulance of some of the writers referred to, there is a self-complacency even about the greatest which does not commend itself as peculiarly Christian. Whatever high and fierce spirits like Milton and Carlyle may think the world did not begin with them; there is such a thing as history and all our possessions are inherited; it is in the life of a society they are transmitted and the common mother can say to the proudest of her children, What hast thou that thou didst not receive? A nation can say this and the Christian Church can say it."—James Denny in British Weekly

SAMSON'S STRENGTH
Will Not Resist the Pulling Down Influence of a Kidney Aching Back.

The strongest man or woman with a back constantly aching find daily existance a struggle. It is the same way with urinary troubles. Booth's Kidney Pills cure these ailments. Peterborough people prove this statement.

W Worthington, No 121 Brock St. Peterborough, Ont., says:

"I had suffered with rheumatism for over three years. I had found little or no relief in any of the remedies I had tried. I became so stiff and sore that I could scarcely turn in my bed and had to lay off from my work. The urine was highly colored and filled with a heavy sand-like sediment which plainly told the disordered state of the kidneys. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at McDermid & Jury's pharmacy. I was surprised to see how quickly the urine cleared. The kidneys were soon active and the uric acid went from my system. The rheumatism gradually became less severe and finally left me. I am better than in years previous and could not hesitate to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R T Booth Co. Ltd, Fort Erie Ont. sole Canadian agents.

WERE TOLD TO LEAVE THE CITY

John McCormick and Thomas Maguire pleaded not guilty to a charge of vagrancy at the police court this morning. Both stated they had been working at construction work on the railway until lately, and had come here to look for another job. They will only enjoy a short stay here, as the magistrate gave them both orders to get out of town as quickly as possible.

THE YOUNG NEN LEAD SINGING

Solo and Male Quartette at St. Andrew's — Rev. Wm. Fee, M. A., Special Preacher

The musical service at St. Andrew's last night was very interesting. It was taken by the young men of the congregation.

Rev. Mr. Potter sang "Come Unto Me," and a quartette "The Wayside Cross" (Palmer) was given by Messrs. Wright, Brown, Johnston and Gerrard.

The special preacher was Rev. Wm. Fee, of Wyoming, who delivered a very able sermon. A large congregation was present.

SOME LONG BANQUETS.

Feasts That Have Included Over One Hundred Courses.

Speaking at a dinner in London recently Sir Robert Hart, the veteran inspector-general of the Chinese customs, said the longest banquet he ever sat at was one in Pekin, which lasted for 17 consecutive hours. There were 125 courses, and he tasted them all. Mr. Ward, an American envoy to China, who tried to secure the interview with Emperor Hieng-Fung in 1859, tells how he was entertained at a dinner that lasted from noon one day until six o'clock on the evening of the day following. The total number of courses is not given, but Ward mentions that he had to give in after partaking of 138 different dishes, "whereupon his hosts wondered greatly"—presumably at his abstemiousness.

Probably, however, the Eskimo banquests last longer than any others, and the quantity of food swallowed is also proportionately greater. Ross records that seven of his party of natives once ate continuously for 33 hours, during which time they consumed 200 pounds of seal meat. Europeans, exposed to the same climatic conditions, act in much the same way. Capt. Scott, of the Discovery, on his return from his long sledge journey over the inland ice of the Antarctic Continent, did nothing but eat and sleep for the space of three days and nights, and even then he was still hungry.

Commander Peary and his party, returned famished from their futile dash for the pole in 1906, slaughtered a herd of seven musk oxen on Hazen Island, off the extreme north of Greenland. For two days and nights thereafter they crouched inside their snow huts, eating continuously, and when they had finished, the pile of bones outside was "as high as a tall man's chin."

EXTREMELY ANCIENT RACE.

Skeletons Which Have Particular Interest to European Anthropologists.

The name Neanderthaloid has been used to denote an extremely ancient race of men, of which remains were last found in 1856 in the Neander valley (Germany). Since then, says The Scientific American, an entire skeleton of an adult woman of the same type was found in Dordogne (France), in 1905, and only a few months ago, near the same place, Mr. O. Hanser unearthed the skeleton of a youth showing the typical characters of the race—strongly developed supraorbital ridges, powerful maxilla, large teeth, etc. The wisdom teeth were still in their alveoli. The lower jaw was prognathous to an extent almost calling to mind the muzzle of the animal. The canine teeth were not very highly developed, as in anthropoid apes. The bones of the limbs were entirely in accord with the type known to us in paleolithic man, the femur massive and stubby; the radius curved. Near the human remains were found those of Bos primigenius. The attitude in which the body was placed seemed to indicate that it had been placed there for burial. This is of special interest, as it has hitherto been somewhat generally held that primitive man did not bury their dead, and this was an indication of his entire lack of all religion.

Booking Seats For Uncle Tom.

Here is a charming little story told by Mr. Arthur Collins, the London actor. "Recently," he says, "three tiny little mites, each holding a fist tightly clenched, came into the hall at Drury Lane Theatre, one asked an attendant to show them the box-office, towards which the three advanced. The box-office counter was far above their heads, so the attendant lifted one of the trio to a level with the counter, and he asked in a very tiny voice for 'a seat where I can see everything,' and put down a little pile of silver. He was duly given a ticket for a stall seat, and then the next was lifted up in the same way and asked for 'a seat next to Jimmy,' which he got. Finally, the third, a girl, was lifted up and demanded two seats—one for herself 'on the other side of Jimmy,' and one for Uncle Tom—and added the information that 'Uncle Tom was coming from Australia and had not seen a pantomime for twenty years.' Then the little trio walked off, after thanking the attendant."

The First Peer of the Realm.

Dr. Davidson, Archbishop of Canterbury and first peer of the realm, who had such a large hand in killing the Education Bill, was confidential friend and adviser to Queen Victoria for twenty years. The very fact that he was honored with such a confidence, and kept it so long, is an open proof of his tact, shrewdness, and common sense. Indeed, it would be no compliment to say that he has never made a mistake. He has certainly a marvellous gift of "not putting his foot into it." Owing to the effects of gun accident in his youth, the archbishop has to be content with the very simplest of diets. He touches scarcely any meat, and frequently subsists for months on nothing but milk foods. Like the Bishop of Ripon, Dr. Davidson has never taken kindly to gaiters. He is a man of inexpensive tastes, and when the head of the diocese of Rochester was a constant patron of omnibuses and tramcars.

What the Subalterns Knew.

Gen. Sir E. Locke Elliott, who is retiring from the command at Lucknow, has long enjoyed the reputation of being the most sarcastic soldier in the army, and it must be admitted he does his best to live up to it. A lady was talking to him a short time ago of his length of service in India, and opined that he must know a lot about it. "Not a bit, madam; not a bit. The longer you serve in India the less you know about it. I have subalterns who could put me right upon every subject under the sun," he replied, "and if you doubt my statement, just ask them. They will confirm every word of it."

Miss Alice Blech, an attache of the Bureau of American Republics, has been selected by Mrs Taft to become her secretary.

Contagion and Infection.

A contagious disease is one in which the disease producing organism goes direct from the person having the disease to a person who has not the disease without passing through an intermediary medium, as in tuberculosis, for example. Malaria, on the other hand, is an infectious disease, because the organism which produces it is taken from a person by a mosquito, reproduces itself in the mosquito and is transmitted by the mosquito which may never have been in contact with the person by whom the original organism was given off.

The Bab.

The East Indian teacher who founded the cult known as "Babism" was "the Bab"—Mirza Ali Mohammed. He was born in Shiraz, Persia, in the year 1838. He was trained at first to commercial life, but a pilgrimage to Mecca awakened in his heart the religious zeal which made him devote his life henceforth to developing the faith which he held. Upon his return to his native city in 1844 he assumed the title of Bab, or "Gate" leading to the truth. In the eyes of the orthodox Mohammedans the tenets of the Bab were rank heresy, and he was taken to Tabriz and shot.

The Anchor.

"Captain," remarked the nuisance on shipboard who always asks foolish questions, "what is the object in throwing the anchor overboard?"

"Young man," replied the old salt, "do you understand the theory of seismic disturbances? Well, we throw the anchor overboard to keep the ocean from slipping away in the fog. See?"

Overdoing It a Little.

"Speaking of economy," says a character in one of Life's stories, "Gillett says that he is saving up for a rainy day."

"H'm!" came the response. "His wife thinks he must be saving up for another flood."

Leading Up to It.

A young man married against the wishes of his parents and in telling a friend how to break the news to them said:

"Tell them first that I am dead, and gently work up to the climax."—London Tit-Bits.

Telepathy.

"So you believe in telepathy?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "My wife knows what I am going to think about some time before I have made my mind up on the subject myself."—Washington Star.

A CAREFUL JUDGE.

The Way the Law Is Administered in Merrie England.

A friend of mine, wishing to make a present of a ring to an acquaintance who was on the eve of being married, bought the article and handed it to the jeweler, with instructions to have a suitable inscription engraved upon it, making a stipulation that it should be finished and returned by a certain date, otherwise it would be useless. Months elapsed before the ring was delivered. It was sent back to the jeweler. The tradesman took out a summons, and my friend had to come back to town and sit in a stuffy court all day without the case being called. Next morning he bribed the usher to let him know when the case was called. He was sent for at lunchtime and sat till a quarter past 4 listening to anything but edifying matters which had to be disposed of first. By this time the old gentleman on the bench was fast asleep. The jeweler's case was called, and my friend's solicitor stated the defense. At its close the legal functionary slowly disentangled himself from the embrace of Morpheus, opened one eye, grunted, "Verdict for plaintiff," and lumbered heavily out of court. My friend was furious and addressed the judge in terms the reverse of polite. The usher endeavored to pacify him and eventually led him out of court, and after pocketing another half sovereign he remarked: "Yes, sir; it's very 'ard, I know. But, you know, sir, he allers gives a verdict for the plaintiff after 4 o'clock!"—London Strand Magazine.

THE CHYSANTHEMUM.

Japanese Legend of the Origin of the Many Petaled Flower.

The Japanese have an interesting legend in connection with the origin of the chrysanthemum. In a garden bathed in the soft moonlight a young girl plucked a flower and commenced to strip the petals to see if her fiance loved her truly. Of a sudden a little god appeared before her and assured her that her fiance loved her passionately. Your husband will live, he added, as many years as the flower which I will let you choose has petals. With these words he disappeared. The young girl hastened to search the garden for a flower which should have an abundance of petals, but each one appeared to promise but a brief future for her beloved.

At length she picked up a Persian carnation, and, with the aid of a gold pin taken from her hair, she separated each of the petals of the flower so as to increase the number of folioles and of the number of years accorded by the god to her fiance. Soon under her deft fingers one, two, three hundred petals, thin, pliant and beautifully curved, had been evolved, and the young girl cried for joy to think of the happy future which her ruse had assured her fiance. So, runs the legend, was the chrysanthemum created one moonlight night in a Japanese garden where silvery brooks murmured softly as they ran beneath the little bamboo bridges.—London Globe.

Could Do It.

It was a mean trick, but, then, that is the kind that's usually successful.

"That dog," said the owner, "will bring me anything I send him for, and I am willing to bet on it."

Straightway a bet was arranged, and then the manager of the billiard hall suggested that he would like to have the pool table brought to him.

"Certainly," answered the owner of the dog, and he pointed to the table and said, "Fetch it!"

The dog raced around it once or twice and then grabbed a pocket and tore it off.

"Hold on!" cried the billiard man. "He'll ruin the table."

"Of course," answered the owner of the dog, "but if you give him time he'll get it all over here. You didn't suppose he could bring it in one trip, did you?"

But the billiard man paid the bet.

Christening the Baby.

A north country parson thought it absurd that a working class woman should wish to christen her child "Laura Winifred Gwendolyn Genevieve."

"My good woman, what a ridiculously long and fanciful name!" he protested. "Why not choose something simpler—Sarah, for instance? That is my own wife's name."

"Ah, yes, Sarah's all very well for a parson's wife, but I hope my little gal will look a bit higher than that," answered the woman readily.

The astonished parson thereupon performed the ceremony without further comment.—London Telegraph.

The Retort Courteous.

Professor Bates was quizzing a student named Pond, who seemed to know nothing of the subject in hand. "Are there no fish in this pond this morning?" he exclaimed at length.

"Yes, professor," replied the student, "but the Bates no good."

Not Quite.

"I sleep with your letters under my pillow," the modern lover wrote.

Then he yawned and muttered to himself:

"At least I go to sleep over the letters. I suppose it's the same thing."

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON'S MEETING

The gospel temperance meeting at the Crystal yesterday afternoon was again well attended. The speaker was Rev W M Fee, BA, of Wyoming, Ont, who is on a visit to his brother the pastor of Bethany church in this city. The orchestra of the George street church and the Ark quartette under the leadership of Mr W H Cunningham took charge of the musical part of the programme and added very much to the success of the meeting.

Mr Fee, in starting his address, said that when a boy, he used to think, that on every social and moral question, we in Ontario were far ahead of all the rest of the world. He had been compelled to change his mind and to admit that the people of the United States were away ahead of us on the temperance question. They have now 38 million people living in "dry" territory and the number is rapidly increasing. The statement is often made by those opposed, that prohibition does not prohibit. It was quite evident that the people of Maine and other States were well pleased with it even if it did not absolutely prohibit. The fight is not against the hotel nor the hotel-keeper, but against the bar-room with its open door and invitation to every boy and young man to become a drunkard. The boy or the man that drinks is handicapped. To succeed one must be at his best, and even the then moderate drinker is not in the best condition for efficient work. Then there is the risk of the moderate drinker becoming something worse. Corporations and large employers of labor will not employ even moderate drinkers.

What License Has Done

There are many persons who desire to sell liquor. License restricts this privilege to a few and so tends to lessen the evil effects of the traffic. It places restrictions around the trade as to time and place and also the persons to whom liquor may be sold. These tend to decrease the evils and would do so to a much greater extent if the law were strictly observed. By putting the traffic into the hands of a few, these men are enabled to make large profits and places where liquor is sold acquire an inflated value. Now, whom does this enhanced value belong? To the man who sells and makes the profit or to those who grant the license and create the inflation? The argument is freely used that when bar room licenses are removed the hotels either close up or deteriorate in character. In reply to this the speaker quoted the opinion of a young commercial man in Western Ontario to the effect that in local option territory in that region the hotel accommodation is better than it was under license. It is the bar room that has given hotel property a false value and it is only the false value that falls when the bar room is closed.

Liquor and Crime

A noted criminal when on his way to penitentiary the other day, said, "Drink brought me to this." Indeed, drink is said to be responsible directly or indirectly for ninety-five per cent of all murders, and ninety per cent of all crime. Can those of us who have never felt the blight of drink, think without great misgiving of the possibility of our boys and girls getting through? Will they be as fortunate as we have been? Those who have not the right to vote may have no responsibility in this matter, but those who have must be prepared to bear the responsibility if after January next this great evil still exists in our midst. If we permit the business to go on we are in partnership with it, till the gains will go to the dealer and all the losses to us. There is not room in any town for consecrated Christian citizenship and for the saloon. If the law does not pass, and if prohibition does not prohibit the church and those that belong to it are not where they should be.

GOVERNOR OF BENGAL COMING

Will Attend the National Missionary Congress at Toronto

Sir Andrew Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, is coming to Canada to attend the National Missionary Congress, March 31st, to April 4th upon the invitation of the Canadian Council, ably seconded by Mr John R. Mott, who is in England doing special work in connection with the colleges. Sir Andrew was Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly in India last year and is one of the most zealous workers in that country. His son-in-law, Rev J H. Oldham, of Edinburgh, is the Secretary of the Committee in charge of the World's Conference of Missions to be held in Edinburgh, June 1910.

PRIMARY CLASS ENTERTAINED

The little ones, numbering about sixty, in all, participated in games and singing and afterwards sat down to a dainty [illegible] of the school.

POLICE CHAUFFEURS.

King Edward Is Well Guarded Wherever He May Travel.

If there is any man in the United Kingdom concerning whose personal health and safety there should be no anxiety, that man is King Edward VII. This is no disloyal statement; it is merely a tribute to the marvellous skill of the physicians attendant on His Majesty, and the remarkable precautions taken by authorities wherever he goes.

When King Edward travels on his royal yacht, a crew of specially selected men from the Royal Navy carry on the ordinary operations of the ship. In the case of a royal special train, the most experienced engine-driver is selected to handle the regulator. Again, when he travels by motor-car—he is, by the way, the only person within these realms who is legally entitled to exceed the speed-limit—his chauffeur is always a policeman, trained at Scotland Yard. With the chauffeur, however, is an expert mechanic, whose duty it is to attend to all breakdowns.

In case of accidents, a handsome "first-aid" case, specially made for His Majesty by a well-known firm of surgical intrument manufacturers, is carried in the royal motor-car. "A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed," surmounted by a crown, is inscribed upon the front of the silver box which holds the outfit and this box, which contains eight numbered compartments, is carried in a case of royal-blue morocco, and on the lid detailed directions, corresponding with the numbers, are fixed.

Although the whole outfit weighs only 5 3-4 pounds, the contents include an indiarubber tourniquet to stop bleeding, several pairs of forceps and scissors, a variety of pastes and powders for dressing, and a bottle for brandy.—London Answers.

THRIFTY HINDUS.

They Are Prosperous In Guiana Says Agent-General.

The Immigration Agent-General for British Guiana (Hon. R. Duff) points out in his annual report that the East Indians, originally introduced into British Guiana to satisfy the requirements of the sugar planters, have, with their descendants, gradually spread themselves over the country, reclaiming places formerly lying waste and opening new tracts of land on the creeks and rivers.

"With their thrifty habits and unfaltering perseverance in the face of loss by drought and flood," he states, "they form the ideal settlers for a tropical country like this." Numbering over 132,000 souls, they form a larger proportion of the population than any other race. They have, however, left politics severely alone, and are content, so long as they are not overburdened with direct taxation, to plod on in their rice fields and provision farms and to bring their children up to follow in their footsteps.

Under the terms of their indentures they are entitled to be sent back to India at the end of ten years, but of late years there seems to have been a growing disinclination to return, and many have preferred to acquire property and settle down in the colony. Thus at the present time East Indians in British Guiana possess property assessed for local taxation to the value of $340,000. Last year grants of crown land aggregating 1,376 acres were issued to them as compared with 453 acres in 1906-7. The chief occupation among the unindentured immigrants is rice cultivation, and it is principally to their efforts that the cultivation of the cereal has grown from 16,670 acres in 1903-4 to 29,715 acres in 1907-8.

The King and His Clothes.

Despite his age, King Edward is always recognised as the first gentleman in Europe in matters of fashion, and when he pays his annual visit to Marienbad, the leading tailors of London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, St. Petersburg, Budapest, etc., carry out a systematic observation of his sartorial proclivities. Hatters, hosiers, shirt-makers, shoemakers, collar-makers and cuff manufacturers, glovemakers and jewellers—all are there.

The King takes with him more than one hundred large trunks, so that he has a liberal choice of clothes from which to make his selection. It has been noticed that he has an especial liking for red, for on nine days out of ten he wears a red tie and red socks.

Many of the King's colored shirts are made with the collars affixed to them, and the collar is made of the same material and is the same color as the shirt itself. Sometimes the King wears a white collar on a colored shirt; but the cuffs are always of the same color as the material of the shirt. The King's handkerchief also corresponds to the color of the shirt which he is wearing.

The Kaiser's Joke.

It is not often that the Emperor William makes a joke, but it is recorded that on one of his visits to England he greatly amused King Edward with a very clever pun. The two monarchs were driving along the streets and the Kaiser was accorded a tremendous ovation. "Why," said King Edward, laughingly, "you are more popular even than Mr. Chamberlain or myself." "Yes," answered the Kaiser, without a moment's hesitation; "but you see I am greater than either Your Majesty or Mr. Chamberlain, for he is 'Joe,' Your Majesty is 'King,' and I—I am 'Joe King'!"

Plenty of Clasps.

It is Lady Roberts who tells this story. She was once visiting the hospitals at the base of operations in India, and was so pleased with the nurses' work and their devotion to the sick that she exclaimed, "Really, I think the sisters deserve a medal for this campaign as much as anyone, and I hope they will get one." "I don't know about a medal," said a gallant colonel who was in attendance, "but they are sure, at all events, to get plenty of clasps."

Fiction

For the Honor of a Princess

By F. K. SCRIBNER.

The Duke de Biart, a nobleman of ancient ancestry and a young man of great accomplishments, had disappeared from the court and with him the Princess Alice. It was known to the king that the duke had sought to be a churchman, being of gloomy mind and much given to moodiness. But Henry, having small desire to see so great a nobleman turn monk, had played right skillfully the dark eyes of his royal kinswoman against the church.

Strange it was that the duke had not bided his time until the king was ready for a royal wedding. As for me, humble lieutenant of the musketeers that I am, I knew that the princess loved him not, for I had been chosen by his majesty to guard her person and saw her daily. Right well I knew—but that belongs not in this story.

The most important thing was that my king had bidden me in great secrecy to choose but one follower and with him to ride to the duke's chateau at M.

The honor of the princess rested in my hand, of which fact Paris must not know.

It was an hour past midnight when I, with the Chevalier de Rossel at my side, rode forth from Paris. De Rossel was in cheerful mood.

"Zounds!" said he, snapping his fingers briskly, "Methinks this Duke de Biart hath o'ershot the mark. Plotting was bad enough, yet he must need, having ridden with his princess beyond the walls, lay violent hands upon her person. Had he but waited, the king's desire had given her to him."

To my mind also came the thought the man must be truly mad; but, despite the weight of the occasion, something within me rejoiced that it lay within my power to undo the duke and return the princess to the king, her uncle.

The duke's dwelling lay some leagues from Paris, so the first dawn overtook us as we rode from the forest which surrounded the chateau on three sides. The place was of some strength, built in the days of the king's grandfather, so perchance some obstacle might lie between us and an entrance.

But upon our reaching the entrance to the dwelling we found it indeed most poorly guarded in that the guard had unbarred the door, the day being full upon us. Moreover, I perceived he was no other than one who had served the king, an ex-musketeer of mine own company.

Seeing me, he stood open mouthed, saluting with much ceremony, nor showed he any disposition to bar our progress.

"Faith," replied he to my greeting, "thou art come from Paris at a most early hour. The duke is yet abed, having come hither but yesterday in company with his cousin, who suffers from a malady."

"What now!" cried De Rossel. "Is the lady stricken?"

"That she is," replied the witless fellow, "for the duke bore her before him on the saddle and hath given her in charge of the women, bidding them look to it she commit no injury upon her person."

"Came they alone?" asked I.

"Only the two," replied he. "Art from the king?"

De Rossel plucked my sleeve. "'Twas told in Paris," said he, "the duke's kinswoman had lost her wits, and 'tis the royal pleasure we learn concerning her condition. It is the purpose of his majesty to send his leech to cure her if occasion warrants it."

The fellow nodded. "The duke is much in favor with the king," said he. "Would see the woman who guards the maid?"

De Rossel cast upon me a look of triumph. "'Twere most fitting," replied he, "for, the hour being early, 'twere an ill thing to arouse the duke, thy master."

"'Tis a most strange thing," muttered De Rossel as we followed the servant through the long and dimly lighted corridor, "beyond comprehension, and methinks there comes a queer twist to our errand. Either this duke be drunk or truly mad; therefore look to it, M. de Marc, that no trap be set for us."

Presently we came unto the door of a chamber, and the servant drew back, signifying 'twas the room wherein was confined the princess.

"Go thou," said De Rossel gruffly. "Thou hast done thine errand." And he put in the fellow's palm a silver piece.

"I will remain here," said he, the man being gone, "and if any come to know our business I will deal with him." So saying, he unsheathed his sword and took his stand before the door, upon which I knocked softly.

A voice from within demanded who sought admittance at so early an hour, when 'twas small courtesy to disturb a lady's quiet.

I replied that I bore a message from the duke which brooked of no delay, whereupon a bolt was withdrawn, the door partly opened, and the face of a woman appeared.

In the dim light she noted not my person, but demanded irritably that I deliver the message quickly and begone, but I, placing my knee against the half closed door, thrust it back with such force that the woman was thrown to the floor, where she lay stunned.

"'Tis the antechamber to the inner room," said De Rossel, peering over my shoulder. "Go in. I will look to the wench that she make no outcry."

Pushing the heavy draperies guarding the entrance to the inner chamber aside, I entered without ceremony, then paused, for the princess was before me.

Aroused by the sound of voices in the antechamber, she had risen from a couch and confronted me. The half light touched her with a glow soft as moonlight, revealing the whiteness of her skin, the gentle curve of her throat and neck and the veiled splendor of the soft, dark eyes.

"My lord," said she, "what means this intrusion? 'Tis but poor courtesy which sends thee hither when I would be alone."

She took me for the Duke de Biart. The shadow of the draperies concealed my features, and, I being somewhat the size of the nobleman, the mistake was easy. I took a step toward her, the gleam of my hilt flashing in the light. She started, her hand going to a little toy dagger which lay upon the table at her side. Suddenly the color which had risen to her cheeks died away, her lips parted and her hand went to her heart.

"M. de Marc," she cried, "M. de Marc, 'tis thou! Thou wilt save me from this madman!"

"Princess," I replied, "none shall harm thee. The king hath sent me to take thee back to Paris."

She smiled softly, laying her hand upon my arm. "Brave M. de Marc!" cried she. "Would I might"—

The voice of De Rossel checked her words, his face appearing between the curtains.

"Look to thyself, De Marc!" he cried.

A cry from the princess made me turn sharply. Beyond the circle of light where the dark canopy of the bed met the wall I saw an evil figure, cloaked and booted, plumed hat upon head and naked blade in hand. 'Twas the Duke de Biart, who had entered noiselessly through a secret passage in the wall.

His eyes were fixed upon me in more astonishment, nor methinks he recognised in the intruder of the princess' chamber the king's musketeer.

As I wavered, my hand upon the hilt, he advanced slowly, his eyes still fixed upon my face.

"Sir," said he very softly, "what would you with this lady?"

The princess crept to my side. "Brave M. de Marc," she whispered, "trust him not. A sudden thrust"—

"Sir," cried the duke a second time, "what is thy business?"

"At the king's command," replied I shortly.

"Aye, the good king," he muttered. "We were to dine together. What of the king?"

De Rossel stepped across the threshold. "The man is mad," he whispered, "mad as a hare. Beware, De Marc."

The sight of him changed the duke's mood.

"Begone!" he cried; then of a sudden he lunged at me with his sword.

As the blood drawn from the prick he gave me in the shoulder appeared upon the lace of my collar the princess cried out, and De Rossel pressed forward.

Angered by the wound, I made to thrust my opponent through the body, but de Rossel thrust my point aside.

"Wouldst slay a madman?" he cried. "There is another way."

Even as he spoke my point, being turned from its true aim, pierced the duke's shoulder. He started back, a wondrous change coming over him. The mad light in his eyes died out, the letting forth of blood o'ercoming the malady. With a bewildered gesture he passed his hand across his eyes.

"O God," he muttered, "what thing be this?"

Suddenly, before I could intervene, he threw himself upon his knees before the princess.

"Madame," cried he, "'tis the curse upon my race. 'Twas for that I sought to be a churchman."

A look of great pity came to the lady's eyes. "My lord," said she, "thou art forgiven. The king"—

"The king!" cried he. "I cannot meet the king!"

With a cry of terror he gained his feet and sought blindly for his sword. I thought he would have set upon us and stood on guard, but 'twas against himself he turned the blade.

Quicker than thought he set the hilt against the wall, pressing the point upon his heart so the steel pierced through ere any could raise a hand.

De Rossel bent over the quivering body. "Death!" he muttered. "'Tis a sorry thing. The madness of the Duke de Biart hath slain him." Then, turning to the princess, who leaned half fainting against my shoulder, spoke he:

"Madam, the horses await below and the king in Paris. Let us ride thither quickly. I warrant M. de Marc will soon become a nobleman."

But what care I for what the king might offer me? In the eyes of the princess I had read that which is not in the gift of kings.

Nautical Ignorance.

The captain of an ocean liner was talking about the ignorance of the sea and of nautical terms that is sometimes displayed by lady passengers.

"Last summer," he said, "there was a young lady on board whom I showed over the steerage. As we were making our tour the steerage people were eating their dinner, and I couldn't help remarking the tremendous appetite of a red haired man.

"I said, 'Just look at the amount of food that fellow consumes!'

"'I suppose, captain,' said the young lady, 'that he is what you sailors call a stowaway?'"

IMPROVING JAMES' ENGLISH.

Exquisite Divine Once Undertook to Improve on the Authorized Bible.

The King James version of the Bible is a classic of classics; but there have not been wanting men who fancied that it needed retouching and refining. Dr. Harwood, an English divine, once went so far as to make a new and "elegant" translation. His purpose, as he modestly expressed it, was to "clothe the genuine ideas and doctrines of the Apostles with that propriety and perspicuity in which they themselves, I apprehend, would have exhibited them, had they now lived and written in our language."

Some of his attempts to avoid "the bald and barbarous language of the old vulgar version" are worth quoting as terrible examples of what elegant writing is not.

The plain spoken warning to the Laodicean Church is improved thus: "Since, therefore, you are now in a state of lukewarmness, a disagreeable medium between the two extremes, I will, in no long time, eject you from my heart with fastidious contempt."

The translator is especially happy in what may be called his personal euphemisms. Nicodemus is "this gentleman"; one of the apostle's Athenian converts is "a lady of distinction"; and the daughter of Herodias is "a young lady who danced with inimitable grace and elegance." The father of the Prodigal is "a gentleman of splendid family"; and St. Paul no longer leaves a "cloak" at Troas, but a "portmanteau," as was certainly more becoming to a dignified ecclesiastic.

On the Mount of Transfiguration, St. Peter no longer says in vulgar, every-day language, "Lord, it is good for us to be here"; but, "Sir, what a delectable residence we might fix here."

The apostle's saying, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed," becomes "We shall not all pay the common debt of nature; but we shall, by a soft transition, be changed from mortality to immortality."

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION SPENT BUT LITTLE MORE THAN HALF INCOME IN 1908

New York, March 6.—The third annual report of the president and treasurer of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, made public here to-day, shows steady progress in the work of that institution for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1908. During the year seventy-eight names were added to the retiring allowance roll, at a total cost of $113,765. This included pensions to fifteen widows of professors. The geographical distributions of these allowances was general in institutions from Maine to California. They are made on one of three bases; age, service or disability.

Two important changes were made in the rules of the Foundation during the year. The maximum amount of a retiring allowance was increased from $3,000 to $4,000, and the pension will be granted to the widow of a professor in an accepted institution who has for ten years been married to the professor, the pension to be one-half of what the husband would have been entitled to receive.

President Harry Smith Pritchet, of the Foundation, says that much has been done during the past year to do away with political interference in state colleges and universities, and to assure academic freedom and the elimination of politics from education.

He cites the trying experiences at the University of Wyoming and the university of the new state of Oklahoma during the past year, where, in the former case, the president and several professors were expelled because of political agitation.

Speaking of the progress toward unity in college requirements for admission, Mr. Pritchet said:

"The time has come now, I believe, when the efforts which have been made independently in various parts of the country may be crystalized into one standard which shall be national in scope."

The report of Treasurer Thomas Morrisson Carnegie shows the present assets of the Foundation to be $10,769,733. The total income for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1908, was $530,305, and total expenditures $287,072, leaving an accumulation of $243,233.

CHARGE AGAINST A NORWOOD MAN

Accused of Getting House Under False Pretences—Was Remanded

Ernest Buck, of Norwood, was up before magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with obtaining a horse from Allan McCarthy, of Ashburnham, under false pretences. PRESENTATION AT SOUTH DUMMER

Mr. W. J. Howson and Family Pleasantly Surprised by Their Neighbors on March 2nd

At South Dummer, March 2, Mr. W J Howson and family were pleasantly surprised when some one hundred and fifty of their friends and neighbors gathered at their home to bid them farewell and extend their good wishes. A very bright social evening was spent in games, songs, recitations and speeches, refreshments being abundantly supplied by the ladies.

During the evening Mr Howson was presented with a beautiful oak rocker, Mr Christopher, with a very handsome secretary and picture and Miss Gertrude with a very useful and handsome music cabinet and bracket.

Though much touched by these unexpected tokens of kindly feeling, each made a suitable reply and thanked the friends for their thoughtful generosity.

Mr. Howson and family will carry with them to their new home near Peterborough only the warmest feeling and best wishes for their old neighbors who have for so long shown them such unfailing kindness.

Dear Friends:

We, your friends and neighbors, having learned with deep regret of your intended departure from our midst, have gathered here tonight, that we may express to you something of the high esteem with which we have regarded you.

We have heard your remark "this is a good neighborhood to live in," but we would remind you that "a man's neighbors are largely what he makes them." You as a family by your ready and willing hands have during the past twenty-five years proven yourselves worthy of our greatest confidence. Not only in our neighborly relations you have been willing to take your place and many an evening has been made a real success by your willing contributions. In times of trouble no hand was more welcomed no words more sympathetic than yours. Thus we can speak of your friendship in the words of Phillip Brooks:

> Friendship, mysterious cement of the soul,
> Sweetness of life, and solder of society,
> We owe thee much.

On Washington's monument is engraved this sentence;

"There is as much greatness of mind in owning a good turn as in the doing of it."

Thus that we seem not ungrateful we would have you accept these articles, not so much for their real value but as a continuous evidence of the high esteem in which we hold you. May they, as you use them in your new home, bring back to your memories only the most pleasant memories of your years in South Dummer.

We trust that a similar Providence will long look down upon you and grant to you all many, many years of health, happiness and prosperity in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors,—

Geo A. Elliott,
Wilbert H. Bell,
George Humphries,
Benj C. Parker.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. McWilliams' Protest

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I would like to call the attention of your readers to the latest piece of financing on the part of the city council, a transaction of which so little has been said that few have even heard of it. It is proposed to deduct from the amount due this year for interest and sinking funds on our debentures the sum of $8500, and to use the money in paying up the deficit on last year's current account. In other words the city of Peterborough is to be guilty of the financial trickery of paying a dividend out of capital. The ratepayers are bound by law to pay the whole amount due for interest and sinking funds each year and the Commissioners of the City Trust are bound to compel the full payment and have in fact made a lawful demand for the proper amount. It is nothing short of a breach of faith with the purchasers of our debentures as well as a direct violation of the law.

Under what pretence is this scheme devised. It is said that we have a large surplus to the credit of our sinking fund accounts. That is quite true—but to whom does it belong. This surplus in each account belongs to that account and cannot be applied to any other purpose except by a special act of the Legislature. To apply it to the payment of a deficit in current account is to divert money paid by the taxpayers for one purpose to another and a totally different purpose. I can understand the Mayor and some of his supporters in the council proposing such a scheme but I am utterly unable to understand how the chairman of the Commission can permit himself to be a party to such a scandalous transaction.

What is the purpose of this scheme. Simply to hide from the electors the fact that the financial administration of last year was so bad that it would require an additional two mills on the taxes to pay up for its extravagance. To meet the ordinary expenditures—not those of last year—and put the city back where it was financially when Mayor Rush took office would require a rate not of 19 or 20 or 19 1-2 mills but of between 22 and 23 mills.

The revised act of 1908 relating to the City Trust Commission make applicable to both the city council and the Commission and the members of each, the provisions of the Municipal Act sec. 418, relating to the management of sinking funds. This section expressly provides that a surplus to the credit of any sinking fund account shall be applied to that account and it expressly prohibits the payment of any monies collected for the purpose of a sinking fund to the current expenditures of the municipality. Further it provides that any members of the council—or of the Commission—who vote for any such diversion of sinking funds into current expenditures shall be personally liable for the amount so diverted and the members who have voted for the same shall be disqualified from holding any municipal office for the period of two years.

Do the members of the Council or of the Commission think that such a transaction will be allowed to pass unchallenged in the courts? I can assure them it will not go unchallenged but I hope that there will not be the necessity for dragging such financing before the whole Province and ruining the high reputation which this city has deservedly enjoyed.

I appeal to the Trust Commissioners to be true to the high trust reposed in them as the guardians of the city's financial honor. I appeal to the Mayor and his majority in the council to be honest and frank with the people, to admit the gross extravagance of last year and to adopt a policy which will restore the finances to the condition in which the present Mayor found them.

Yours sincerely,
R. F. McWILLIAMS.

INTHON BIBLE CLASS

The attendance still continues to climb. Ninety-seven were present yesterday and eleven new members were added to the roll.

The Reds, with ex-Ald. W. S. Johnston as captain, still continue to lead the Whites and Blues with a good majority. Mr. Johnston, who went to the Dominion Alliance Temperance Workers' Convention, held in Toronto last Wednesday, was on hand with a report that was both big and interesting.

The lesson was very helpful and interesting to all, in fact the lessons can't be otherwise with such an able teacher as the Rev. Mr. Pearson.

After the lesson came the reports of the various officers and then a surprise was given the class in the announcement of two of the best workers in the class, Messrs. W. S. Turner and Geo. Deeprose, leaving for the west on Tuesday. They expect to come back again in the fall, so we won't leave them for good.

The class rallied sufficiently to be able to sing a verse of "God be with you till we meet again," and to wish them God-speed.

The members then went home after the Inthon friendly hand shake was passed around.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

INTEREST IN THE REVIEW CONTEST

Havelock's Candidate Making Creditable Showing — News From Railway Town

Special to the Review.

Havelock, March 6—The seven year old child of Mr. Steve Clark of Preneveau passed from this life very early on Saturday morning after a short illness from quinsey. The funeral took place from the family residence on Saturday afternoon. The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr and Mrs Clark and family in the loss of their child.

Mr. Frank Coon, who some time ago was injured in a runaway accident and had his eye badly hurt, has returned to town where he will reside in the future. He will take up his residence in the house adjoining the Presbyterian church.

A great deal of interest is being taken in the Peterborough Review's European contest, in which Miss Ada Holcombe of this town is one of the contestants and who is making a most creditable showing and her many friends in town hope that she may be successful in carrying off one of the valuable prizes offered by that newspaper. Miss Holcombe now has a total of over 33,0000 votes and many of her friends are working hard to put her on the top of the list.

Miss Florence Hawe visited friends in Peterborough on Friday.

Mr W J. Wright is laid up at the present with blood poisoning in his hand which started from a small piece of skin being accidentally knocked off the back of his hand, but complications set in and that member is very sore at the present time.

Mr. Geo. Cochrane, Peterborough agent for the Children's Aid Society was in town on Thursday and took a little girl of six years of age whose name is Mary Rosebush, to the Children's home. The family home is three miles east of Havelock and was not regarded as a fit place for her to remain. The last statement is disputed and the case will come up before County Police Magistrate Edmison.

Mr. Cochrane was in town on Saturday, also on police business.

Brock Lodge, I. O. O. F., Brockville, held its annual "at home" Tuesday evening. Several presentations were made.

ITALIAN OPERA CO.

Peterboro' is Honored—Musical Event of the Year.

A musical event of unusual importance and one that should arouse great interest in Peterborough will be the engagement here of the celebrated Italian Grand Opera Company, which comes to the Grand on Thursday, March 18th. This notable organization carries a company of 1150 and created a furore in Montreal last week where they appeared at His Majesty's theatre to capacity audiences. The Montreal press speaks in glowing terms of the splendid work of the principals and assisting artists, and refer to the company as the most excellent and satisfactory one of its kind that ever appeared in Montreal.

A feature of its performance is the beautiful and effective playing of the augmented orchestra of thirty-five musicians. The orchestra is probably the strongest one that ever toured Canada, and is especially qualified for the demands upon it as accompanists. The brilliant manner in which they also play the operatic scores and overtures has won them the heartiest approval in the principal musical and theatrical centres of America.

So great is the impression that the company made in Montreal last week that by popular demand it has been engaged to re-appear at His Majesty's all this week. The engagement of the Italian Grand Opera Company here will be the most noteworthy musical event in Peterborough for some seasons.

INDUCTION OF REV. C. B. KENRICK

Hamilton, March 7.—This morning at St. Philip's Church, Rev. C B. Kenrick was inducted by Bishop DuMoulin. Rev. Mr. Kenrick has been in charge of St. Philip's for several months, and his Lordship spoke in a congratulatory way of the church's affairs. In an address before the induction ceremony he spoke on the holy office of the ministry, and said the people should receive the sermons of their ministers as the direct messages from God, as this was His appointed way of bringing to them His truth. Besides having this confidence in the minister, the people should fulfill their obligation to worship regularly. The Roman Catholic Church held it a mortal sin to neglect worship in the church, and he thought it might be as well if the Anglicans held that belief also.

THE YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

The bill introduced by the Prime Minister—Mr Mowry—to levy a tax on bachelors came on for a second reading on Saturday night. There was a crowded house and the debate on the measure was warm.

The orders of the day were suspended in order that the debate on the bill might be proceeded with — the Government stating that the measure was an urgent one.

The Minister of Public Works opened the debate and supported the measure in a most effective speech. He was followed by the leader of the opposition—Mr Peter Gardner — who strongly opposed the measure and appealed to the House to reject it. The Attorney General, —Mr Fred Ray—followed for the Government and the member for Parry Sound replied for the Opposition.

It was evidently the intention of the Minister to speak against time, but his powers of endurance were not strong enough and he collapsed about ten minutes before the hour of adjournment.

The Government feared that they would suffer a defeat on this measure and the result of the division on the amendment was awaited with great interest. At first the vote showed a majority of 2 for the opposition but on a roll call the division was a majority of 1 for the Government.

The result was received amid great excitement. It was expected in well informed circles that the Government would meet defeat.

The Bachelors' Bill will be the first order of business next Thursday night and a lively time is expected.

The House will in future meet on Thursday evenings at eight o'clock promptly.

The whips deserve great credit for their work. Every available member was on hand when the division was taken.

Beautiful New Spring Suits FOR WOMEN

Style is a something not charged for here, but which is a priceless feature of Women's Dress —A high priced garment is not always a stylish garment. Style may be lacking in even the most expensive suits.

Style Shines Forth in Every Fold of Every Garment In Our Showing of Women's Suits For Spring

Every suit in our collection is right, not only in style—but right in material, right in workmanship, right in price. You'll find our prices far lower than you could get anywhere else. Our policy this season will be to sell more suits at smaller profits. That, evidently was the maker's policy, too, for we got better values from him, than we ever had before.

PRESS ASSOCIATION WILL PAY VISIT TO PETERBORO'

Coming by Special Train From Toronto on March 27th—Will Inspect Local Industries—Arranging for Reception to the Visitors.

Peterborough will be honored on Saturday, March 27th by a visit from the Canadian Press Association. The annual convention of the association is being held in Toronto on March 25th, 26th and 27th and on the last day the newspaper men will have their annual outing. This year they have accepted an invitation to come to Peterborough. There will be about a hundred and fifty in the party, including representative publishers and newspapermen from all the provinces of the Dominion.

The party will come from Toronto on a special train on the CPR. and will arrive here about noon. They will visit and be shown through the Canadian General Electric works, the Cordage Company's plant and the Quaker Oats Company's plant. Invitations have been extended the press representatives by the companies mentioned.

The visitors will be entertained at luncheon at the Oriental and National hotels and will be shown around the city in the afternoon, the lift lock being included in the itinerary. The special train will leave for Toronto about five o'clock.

Peterborough is fortunate in having the Press Association come here as it will mean a lot of advertising for the city. Arrangements are being made to give the visitors a warm welcome.

SLIGHT DAMAGE BY FIRE AT THE BANK OF OTTAWA

At twenty minutes to one yesterday afternoon a couple of clerks of the Bank of Ottawa staff were passing the bank and discovered a fire in the basement of the building. They went in and investigated and one telephoned an alarm to the fire station while the other to make the call sure sent in another alarm from box 23 at the corner of George and Hunter streets.

It was found that a quantity of waste papers caught fire and were burning briskly when the brigade arrived. The blaze spread to the stairway. The insulation was burned off electric light wires and a joist took fire but the blaze amounted to nothing. The entire damage was slight. It took about twelve gallons of chemicals to extinguish the blaze.

MANAGER OF COMPANY REFUSED TO CONTINUE PERFORMANCE

The management of the Grand Opera House regret very much that the performance of "Come Back to Erin" which held the boards on Saturday night was discontinued after the second act. The company are indebted to Mr A. J. Small, of Toronto, who books all the shows on this circuit, to the extent of $165 for a printing bill, it is claimed. Mr Small telephoned to the local theatre that that sum had to be retained out of the proceeds of the matinee and night presentations.

The manager of the show refused to consent to the arrangement and said that rather than agree to it he would discontinue the show.

The patrons were given their money back at the box office.

WILL BE A BANNER YEAR FOR BUILDING IN WINNIPEG

Contractors Believe That Twelve or Fifteen Million Dollars Will be Spent on Construction in 1909.

Special to the Review.

Winnipeg, March 6th.—The offices of all the city architects are hives of industry these days for all are crowded to the limit with work preparatory for one of the busiest building seasons in Winnipeg's history. It is doubtful if ever before as much work was in sight at this period of the year and the majority of the buildings are of a costly and substantial type. There is also an abundance of labor in sight for all the building trades and everything points to a year of the full dinner pail.

Two of the biggest contracts will be the G.T.P. shops, tenders for which close on the 10th inst., and the Great West Life office building. All of the large contracting firms are making a keen bid for the former of these, which may be regarded as the contracting plum.

J. H. Russell, the architect, who has prepared the plans for the new office building, which J. D. McArthur will erect between the Queen's hotel and the Nanton building on Portage avenue, is calling for tenders for the removal of the old structures on the site and for the excavation work so that an early start may be made in the spring. The building is estimated to cost in the neighborhood of $250 000.

There is also a company being formed here with the purpose of erecting a mammoth hotel which will contain 400 rooms. It will be thoroughly modern and fire-proof and will likely cost in the neighborhood of half a million.

Another large hotel which will be erected this season is the Princess, which will be located south of the Empire on Main street, and which will cost $150 000. Plans have been prepared for it and tenders are being called for.

The Eastern Townships bank building which it was proposed to erect on Main street will not be proceeded with this year as the bank has been unable to make satisfactory terms with the firm of T. D. Robinson & Sons for the surrender of their lease of the premises on the site.

Many residences will also be built, some of which will be of an exceptionally fine character, though the majority will be of the moderate class, running from $3,000 to $5 000 in cost.

Other large buildings are the Canada Permanent head offices on Garry street, a new auto garage which will be erected by Waugh & Brydges, the horse show pavilion which will cost $40 000, the Granite Curling Club headquarters, the Roslyn Court and a number of similar beautiful apartment blocks.

Competent authorities believe that $12 000,000 will be a conservative estimate of the building for the year, and it may even run several millions over that. If no labor trouble develops it is sure to be Winnipeg's banner year for progress.

WHY DID DAVE HARTLEY ENTER SIX DAY GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE

David Hartley will heel and toe, dog trot, and any other way he can get along at the big international six-day go-as-you-please contest at Madison Square Gardens next week. Dave deserves every credit for his big walk from here to Toronto and back, but it seems absurd that he should go to New York in view of his showing here in the last six-day walk, and on account of his general athletic deterioration.

The painter ped will be up against a field of the world's cream, among them some Iggorotis, the diminutive aborigines of the Philippines.

It doesn't seem that Dave will have much of a chance with the head hunters or the rest of the go-as-you-please artists. He is a pretty old man to pick up his condition now, and will be arraigned against a fast lot of perfectly trained and clever athletes. Who ever advised him to take part, if anybody did, made a mistake, for the Peterborough man has a remarkably small chance of winning, or of even staying half the distance.

STRATHS ACCEPT CHALLENGE OF THE ST. ANDREW'S SEVEN

Sporting Editor of The Review—

Dear Sir,—The Strathcona Hockey Club wishes to announce through your valuable paper, that it has decided to accept the challenge of the St. Andrew's team, champions of the Church League, to a game of hockey. The Strathconas, however, wish to make it clear that the game is not for the city championship, feeling it would be a rather nervy proposition on their part to play St. Andrew's for the championship, when, as a matter of fact, Lakefield, who are the champions of the City League, and who have beaten the Strathconas are entitled to the honor of playing the Church League winners.

If St. Andrew's wish to claim the city championship their course is to challenge Lakefield, who are champions of the City League. If, on the other hand, they want an exhibition game with the Strathconas, the latter will only be too willing to give them a chance, and will play them at Brock street rink between 8 and 9 o'clock on Friday night of this week, and expect to hear from St. Andrew's in regard to officials, etc.

Thanking you for the space,

STRATHCONA HOCKEY CLUB.

TOM SLATER THINKS HE CAN MAKE GOOD AT RUNNING GAME

In writing to the Review for copies of the local papers containing the account of the Blake-Harrison walk, clippings of which he wants he wants for his scrap book. Our old friend Tom Slater grows quite enthusiastic over the running game, in which he has recently embarked.

"I think there is more money to-day in running than in walking," he says, "and don't see why I can't make good at it. It is coming to the front, especially distance running, as no other sport has lately. I see Simpson, the man from your town, is getting to be a star performer."

Slater says he notices by the "New York Telegraph" that Hartley is one of Canada's representatives in the six go-as-you-please contest at Madison Square Gardens. He thinks Dave is taking the trip for nothing and will have to do Dorando's stop-up stunt before the contest becomes very old.

ANDERSON THINKS HE CAN TRIM ROGERS OR YOUNG HACK

Sam Anderson, from whom the sporting editor has had several letters lately, wants to know how the wrestling game is in Peterborough. Anderson claims the world's middleweight wrestling championship, and his permanent address is box 426, Canton, Mass.

For his benefit it might be said that things in the wrestling line are pretty quiet just now, but that erstwhile manager and promoter, W. B. Nayler, who is at present playing at Riverdale Rink, Toronto, might be able to accommodate the American middleweight.

The latter is just dying for a match with Yankee Rogers or Young Hackenschmidt. As Naylor is Rogers' manager, he should be able to arrange a match between Yankee and Anderson. Anderson claims Yankee and Young Hack have avoided him with great system, and is inclined to think he can beat either one of them, in spite of the fact that he is ligher than either of the pair. Anderson stayed with Hack for 20 minutes in a fast bout at the Royal Theatre, Montreal, a few weeks ago. He simply went on to last the limit, and did it.

ECK WANTS TO RUN SIMPSON 15 MILES AGAINST SHRUBB

Fred Simpson, the Ojibway thunderbolt, and Tom Eck came back from New York to-day, Simpson went on to his home in Hiawatha, while Eck remained in Toronto.

"Simpson has been matched to run a Marathon race in Newark's ball park on Sunday, March 21st," said Tom Eck to-day. "We are at last getting a chance at the big ones. The New York managers refuse to give Simpson a match with Dorando, Hayes or Longboat."

Eck wants to put Simpson against Shrubb at 15 miles next week at Riverdale, or he will run a relay race, consisting of Henry Jackson, the Midland Indian, and W. F. Cumming.—Toronto Star.

TWO BOUTS YET TO DECIDE TRENT VALLEY CHAMPIONSHIP

Special to the Review.

Havelock, March 8.—The great fight for supremacy in the Trent Valley Hockey League is about to end, but there is yet two great battles which will decide whether Norwood, of Division No. 1, or Stirling of Division No. 2, shall win the silver trophy donated by Mr. J. W. Pearce, M.P.P., of Marmora, this year.

On account of a very late start, the games for the championship have been greatly delayed.

Norwood were the easy victors in Division No. 1, while it was a very close run between Madoc and Stirling in Division No. 2. These last two teams decided which were the stronger on Marmora ice on Friday night when the Stirling bunch got it over the Madoc team to the extent of 7 to 3. Madoc, the pennant-winners of last season, worked hard, but luck seemed to be against them.

Warkworth defeated Keene at Warkworth.

Norwood defeated Warkworth at Warkworth.

Norwood defeated Warkworth at Norwood.

Keene defeated Norwood at Keene.

Norwood defeated Keene at Norwood.

Norwood defeated Hastings at Hastings.

Warkworth defaulted game with Keene.

Hastings defaulted game with Norwood.

Hastings defaulted both games with Keene.

Hastings defaulted both games with Warkworth.

Norwood won with following standing;

	Won.	Lost.
Norwood	5	1
Keene	4	2
Warkworth	3	3
Hastings	0	6

Summary of Division No. 2, is as follows;

Madoc defeated Havelock at Madoc.

Madoc defeated Havelock at Havelock.

Stirling defeated Havelock at Havelock.

Stirling defeated Madoc at Stirling.

Madoc defeated Stirling at Madoc.

Marmora defeated Stirling at Marmora.

Stirling defeated Marmora at Stirling.

Madoc defeated Marmora at Madoc.

Marmora defeated Madoc at Marmora.

Havelock defaulted both games with Marmora.

Havelock defaulted one game with Stirling.

This resulted in a three cornered tie as follows;

	Won.	Lost.
Stirling	4	2
Madoc	4	2
Marmora	4	2
Havelock	0	6

Stirling won out in the play off of the three cornered tie.

The first of the home and home games will be played at Norwood on Monday, March 8th, when one of the best Trent Valley League games is expected. Both teams are strong and confident of winning. The game at Stirling has not as yet been arranged.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE TANGLE

Sporting Editor Review.

Kindly solve this mystery for district No. 1, Trent Valley League;

Warkworth defeat Keene at Warkworth, Norwood defeat Warkworth at Warkworth, Norwood defeat Warkworth at Norwood, Keene defeat Norwood at Keene, Norwood defeat Keene at Norwood, Norwood defeat Hastings at Hastings. After these games have been played Warkworth and Hastings default the rest of their games. Kindly let me know who would win this district. Norwood claims the championship of this district. Keene claims they are tied with Norwood on the ground that when Warkworth defaulted that all games Warkworth had played were void.

Havelock Enquirer.

Answer; Norwood wins the district with the following standing;

	Won	Lost
Norwood	5	1
Keene	4	2
Warkworth	3	3
Hastings	0	6

Under the rules all scheduled matches played by the defaulting clubs count as they were played, and all unplayed matches count as wins to the teams scheduled against the clubs defaulting.

HOCKEY

A hockey team composed of young players of Lakefield, came down Saturday to play a friendly game with the Petes at Brock street rink. Both teams put up a fast exhibition, and the outcome was always in doubt as the sevens were pretty evenly matched. Lakefield played combination and were always dangerous, but the Petes checked back well, and with the good work of the defence, many counters were avoided. Quinlan at rover, was the best for Lakefield, although he was out of place amongst the young players on account of his weight and size. The Petes relied more on individual work at which they got away with a number of good rushes that generally resulted in a score. Halpany at rover was conspicuous for his good work, but all the team worked hard, and with a little combination should have got away with the game. The score at half-time was 3—3, and at full time 5—5. Ten minutes overtime was played, but neither team could find the nets.

Mr. M. Sabitino, of the City League champions, gave good satisfaction with the bell.

The teams were as follows;

LAKEFIELD.		PETES.
Graham	Goal	Pearson
Hill	Point	Smith
Keneally	Cover	Halpany
Quinlan	Rover	Morrow
Pammett	Centre	Herd
Young	Right Wing	Phelan
L. Sabinito	Left Wing	Halpany.

PINKERTON'S CHARITY.

Why He Gave the Fellow Who Lost His Leg a Dollar.

It was a raw, stormy night. Mr. Pinkerton was walking home from the club, after a fine dinner that put him on good terms with himself and with the world, when he was accosted by a big, burly chap, who requested financial assistance.

"Say, mister, can't ye help a pore feller what's lost his leg?" the beggar whined as Pinkerton passed along.

"Lost a leg?" retorted Pinkerton, eying the man suspiciously. "Why, you have two legs, haven't you?"

To all appearances the man certainly had.

"Yes, sir," returned the beggar, with a mournful smile that stirred Pinkerton's heart. "I've got two of 'em left, sir, but my best one—ah, that is gone forever! I lost it in a railway accident, sir."

"For heaven's sake, what were you before this catastrophe happened," cried Pinkerton—"a centipede?"

"No, sir; just a plain, ordinary human bein', sir. The leg I lost, sir, was a wooden one, sir, and it used to excite a lot of sympathy when I got it strapped on. It was worth $4 a day to me, that leg was, but, now it's gone, I'm the dead brokest beggar in ninety-seven counties," explained the beggar.

Whereupon Pinkerton gave the fellow a dollar. This at first seems an extravagant sum to give to a man like that, but in this case it was not so, for Pinkerton is a writer by trade, and he knew he could put the incident into words and sell it to some editor for $10 or $11.—Judge.

A Wife to Be Pitied.

"I don't believe in early shopping," said the short man in the corner of the car.

"Why not?" the man with the dark green hat asked him.

"For a very good reason," replied the short man. "If I don't give my wife her Christmas spending money until the day before Christmas, she can't come back at me for more, can she?"

And he grinned atrociously.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Misunderstood.

When Mark Twain was a young and struggling newspaper writer in San Francisco a lady of his acquaintance saw him one day with a cigar box under his arm looking in a shop window.

"Mr. Clemens," she said, "I always see you with a cigar box under your arm. I am afraid you are smoking too much."

"It isn't that," said Mark. "I'm moving again."—Success Magazine.

THE KANGAROO GIRL.

Her features are peachy, her eyes are bright,
Her lips are for kisses that clasp and woo,
Her neck is a carving of creamy white,
But
Why
Does
She Walk

Kangaroo?

Her hair is a midnight of maddening joy,
Her form is a Psyche's, and swains would sue,
And Cupid would capture, the wise young boy,
Except That
She Walks
Like A
Kangaroo!

Her mother, I think, doesn't know she's out,
For mothers are wise and discreet and true,
And if they but knew what their girls are about
Not

Plymouth as a Terminal Port.

The ports on the English Channel are all feeling the pressure of these days of competition. It is announced that Plymouth proposes to increase its facilities as a terminal for ocean liners by constructing new docks, which are to be the largest in the United Kingdom. The proposal is to make a large harbor at Wembury Bay, between Plymouth breakwater and the river Yealm, to enclose an area of one thousand acres of water by means of four breakwaters to be built out from the land. The estimated cost of this undertaking amounts to a sum of between two and three millions. It is understood that Parliamentary powers are to be applied for next session. The Admiralty has so far monopolized the harbor to an extent which has interfered with the ambitions of the town. If the suggested scheme is successfully carried out, Plymouth will come to the front at once as a terminal port of the first importance for ocean traffic.

SATURDAY GREAT DAY WITH CONTESTANTS

(AND TO-DAY WILL BE ANOTHER)

A Very Large Number of Subscribers Were Obtained and Many Old Subscribers Favored Their Favorite With Payments on Their Subscription Accounts—As a Result the Candidates all Wore the "Smile That Won't Come Off."

14 MORE DAYS, THEN THE COUNT

The Contest Closes for all Candidates, City and County, at 8 O'clock on Monday Evening, March 22—Contestants Living in District No. 2 May Telephone Subscriptions Secured After Last Mail Until the Closing Hour—The Final Count Starts at 8.

As the day for the closing of the contest approaches the candidates are making every effort to increase their scores, and it may be well in order that all may understand, to repeat the conditions under which the contest closes. It is plain that candidates in the city have the facility of handing in subscriptions up to the minute of closing – eight o'clock Monday evening, March 22. It is also plain that candidates working in the country should have the same opportunity, that is to file subscriptions up to the hour of closing. The candidate in the county may mail subscriptions up to the hour of closing, from any point, being careful to see that the postmaster at the point of mailing stamps on the letter the hour and minute of receiving the same. The contents of the letter, or the list, must be telephoned in to the Review before eight o'clock, and the phone message will be received and counted, to be afterward verified by the mail received the next day. Should the phone and mail not correspond the list will be thrown out.

Who will lead tomorrow? The high vote and firsts and seconds follow:—

TRIP TO EUROPE

Miss Rose P. Moore.

FIRSTS

Miss Maude Adams.
Miss Murtin Colin.
Herb. McMillan.
P. G. Towns.

SECONDS

Miss Birdie Dawson.
Miss Lila Finlay.
W. G. Rundle.
Sidney A. Smithson.

The above candidates would be the winners if—.

Another change in the leader of the contest today. Miss Moore again takes the place of honor from the city. It is a merry chase between the city and county. Miss Murtin Colin is the bright particular star in the voting arena today. Although this contestant is the youngest contender, the fact that she voted 21,000 of the precious pinks shows that strength and youth go hand in hand. Every candidate who means business—and there are almost a score who do—is hustling all day, every day, and far into the night to prove to their friends and supporters that they merit support. The published score must not be taken too seriously, for many candidates are satisfied with a low position as long as they "come easy" and only vote enough to keep on a steady move. Watch out for the "dark horse." Every contest harbors one or two, and this one is certain not to be an exception.

IS NOT TOO LATE

"Oh, it is too late for me to do anything now," said a disheartened candidate on Saturday. "I am going to try to win a gold watch, but, goodness gracious, I never could overtake any of those people who have over 50,000 votes."

Well, this was a sort of poser for the contest man, and so he "guessed so, too." It was plain to him that a contestant who would give up the fight because someone else had 50,000 or 60,000 votes was not the candidate for this race. Fifty thousand votes means less than fourteen new yearly subscriptions for the Daily Review and surely no contestant expects to win a trip abroad or $400 piano for $40 or $50 worth of business.

The majority of men and women make their opportunities, but there is one ready to your hand. It requires nothing more than a little concentrated, conscientious, honest, earnest effort. There are always more people who see opportunities than people who both see and seize them. They never seem to have the courage or confidence in their own power to take advantage of them. They do not form a purpose until another has grabbed and improved the opportunity.

Get busy and win a trip to Europe or a magnificent piano — take your choice if you have the high vote.

GRAND PRIZE

EUROPEAN TOUR

or $400 Gerhard-Heintzman Piano

FIRST PRIZE

4 DIAMOND RINGS

or 6 Months' Course in Peterborough Business College

SECOND PRIZE

4 BEAUTIFUL GOLD WATCHES

Candidates who have taken short time subcriptions for three months or six months may secure credit for a full year's vote by getting the subscriber to increase the length of his subscription to one year. The contestant will be given credit for the difference between the number of votes issued on the short time subcription and the full number chedaled for a year.

Where contestants can increase the time of a subcription for Daily or Weekly from one year to two or more years this same rule will apply.

Jane Cable

...By...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"Cable? Then his wife has told him everything. Well, I've something to tell too. By the Lord Harry, Elias, there will be several sensations in high life."

"You don't mean that you'll tell all there is to tell about the girl?"

"No, that's just it! That is one thing I won't tell. If you tell whose blood she has in her veins, I'll kill you like a dog. But I'll see that Miss Cable is dropped by Chicago society inside of a week. I'm mad, Droom—do you understand?"

"But Graydon loves her."

"He won't love her long. I was a fool to let him go this far—a blind, loving fool. But I'll end it now. He shan't marry her. He has no"—

"I haven't much of a heart to boast of, Bansemer, but I beg of you not to do this thing. I love Graydon. He doesn't deserve any pain or disgrace. Take my advice and leave the city. Let me call Herbert back."

"No! They can't drive me out! Telephone over and ask Graydon to stop here on his way up this afternoon."

The opening and closing of the outer door attracted their attention. Droom peeped forth. In spite of himself, Bansemer started and his eyes widened with sudden alarm. A glance of apprehension passed between the two men.

"It's that Deever boy from Judge Smith's," reported Droom.

"Tell him to get out," said Bansemer, with a breath of relief.

"I thought it might have been"— began Droom with awry grin.

"Nonsense!"

"It is a bit too soon. They haven't had time."

As Droom left the room Bansemer crossed to the window and looked down into the seething street far below. He saw that his hand trembled, and he tried to laugh at his weakness. For a long time he stood there, his unseeing eyes focused on the hurrying masses, his ears alert for unusual sounds from the outer office.

"If it were not for Graydon," he was muttering between set teeth. "God, how I hate to have him know!"

Droom had told Eddie Deever to "get out," but Eddie was there to talk and be talked to, so he failed to take the hint.

"Say, I haven't seen you since you played the hero up in the fashionable part of town. Gee, that was a startler! I'll bet old man Cable rewards you in some way. What's your theory about the holdup?"

Droom looked up sharply. For the first time there shot into his mind the thought that the breezy boy might be a spy.

"I haven't any," he replied shortly. He was trying to remember if he had ever said anything incriminating to the boy.

"How'd you happen to be over there just at that time?"

"I haven't time to talk about it. Please don't bother me. It happened three days ago, and I've really forgotten about it. Don't throw that cigarette into the wastebasket. Haven't you any sense?"

"Gee! You don't suppose I'm going to throw it away, do you? There's half an inch of it left. Not me! Say, I've heard your boss has quite a case on Mrs. Cable. How about it?" He almost whispered this.

"You shouldn't talk like that."

"Oh, you mean that gag about people living in glass houses? Gee! Don't worry about that. Chicago is a city of glass houses. A blind man could throw rocks all day and smash a hole in somebody's house every crack. I believe the holdup man was one of those strikers who have been out of jobs all winter. Smith thinks so."

"Who?"

"Judge Smith."

"That's better."

"Did you see his face?"

"What are you, bub—a detective?"

"Rosie Keating says I'd make a better policeman than lawyer. She's sore at me for taking Miss Throckmorton to Mam' Galli's the other night. Fellow stood on the piano and sang the derndest song I've ever heard. But gee! I don't think Miss Throck was on. She didn't seem to notice, I mean. Say, on the dead, do you think you could identify that fellow?"

"Look here, boy; if any one ever asks you whether I'd know that man's face if I saw it again you just say that I'd know it in a thousand. I saw it plainly."

Eddie gulped suddenly and looked more interested than ever.

"Do you think they'll get him?"

"They will if he talks too much."

"I hope so. Say, how's that new patent coming on?"

"I'm not making a patent. I'm making a model. It's nearly completed."

The outer door opened suddenly, and an old gentleman entered.

"Is Mr. Bansemer here?" he asked, removing his silk hat nervously.

"Yes, Mr. Watts. I'll tell him you are here."

Watts, the banker, confronted Bansemer a moment later, an anxious, hunted look in his eyes. John Watts was known as one of the meanest men in the city. No one had bested him in a transaction of any kind. As hard as nails and as treacherous as a dog, he was feared alike by man and woman.

Watts, perhaps for the first time in his self satisfied life, was ready to bow knee to a fellow man. A certain young woman had fallen into the skillful hands of Counselor James Bansemer, and Mr. Watts was jerked up with a firmness that staggered him.

"Mr. Bansemer, I have come in to see if this thing can't be settled between us. I don't want to go into court. My wife and daughters won't understand that it's a case of blackmail on the part of this woman. Let's come to terms."

Bansemer smiled coolly. It was impossible to resist the temptation to toy with him for awhile, to humble and humiliate this man who had destroyed hundreds in his juggernaut ride to riches. Skillfully he drew the old man out. He saw the beads of perspiration on his brow and heard the whine come from his voice. Then in the end he sharply changed his tactics.

"See here, Watts, you've got a wrong impression of this affair. I don't like your inferences. I am not asking you for a cent. I wouldn't take it. You have just offered me $25,000 to drop the affair. That's an insult to my integrity. I've investigated this girl's claim pretty thoroughly, and I believe she is trying to fleece you. I have given up the case. None of that sort of thing for me. She'll go to some unscrupulous lawyer, no doubt, but I am out of it. I don't handle that kind of business. You have insulted me. Get out of my office, sir, and never enter it again."

"Give me that in writing," began the wily banker, but Bansemer had called to Droom. Eddie Deever was standing near the door, almost doggedly curious.

"Show Mr. Watts the door, and if he ever comes here again call the police. He has tried to bribe me."

Watts departed in a dazed sort of way, and Droom closed the door.

"Are you still here?" he demanded of Eddie Deever in such a manner that the young man lost no time in leaving.

"There goes $25,000," said Bansemer, with a cold grin.

"I guess you can afford to lose it," muttered Droom. "It was slick, I suppose, but it's probably too late to help."

"Have you telephoned to Graydon?"

"Not yet."

"Don't."

"Change of heart?"

"Change of mind."

"That's so. You haven't any heart."

CHAPTER XIX.

BANSEMER was not losing his courage; it was only the dread of having Graydon find out. He stuck close to his office, seeing but few people. However, he did saunter into Rigby's office for a friendly chat, but learned nothing from the manner of that astute young man. With a boldness that astonished himself—and he was at no time timid—he asked if Harbert intended to remain in Chicago for any length of time. After he had gone away Rigby rubbed his forehead in a bewildered sort of way and marveled at the nerve of the man.

The day passed slowly, but late in the afternoon the suspense became so keen that he found it difficult to keep himself from making inquiries of the proper officials as to whether affidavits had been filed by Harbert or any other person. His hand did not shake now, but there was a steady pain at the back of his head.

"Droom, I think I'll go home. If I don't appear in the morning you'll know I'm at some police station. Good day!"

"Goodby," said Elias, with correcting emphasis. Bansemer laughed heartily.

"I believe you'd like to see me jugged."

"Not unless you could be convicted. I'll have to remain in your employ until then, I suppose."

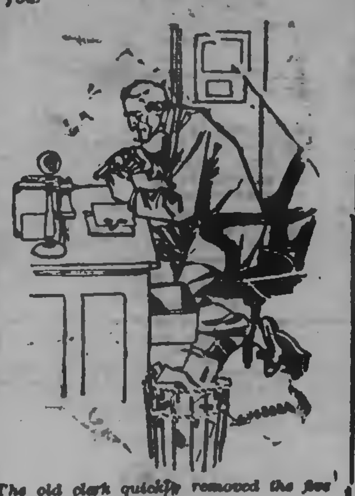
"I've often wondered why you don't quit of your own accord—it seems so distasteful to you."

"I'm working for you from force of habit."

"You'll turn state's evidence if I'm arrested, no doubt."

"If my word counted for anything," and he raised his hand, "I'd say, 'So help me—I shan't.'"

"I've never been able to understand you."



The old clerk quickly removed the five cartridges.

"I guess you've always understood my feelings toward you."

"You hate me?"

"I'm no exception to the rule."

"But hang you, you're faithful."

"Oh, I'll pay for it, never fear. You won't hesitate to sacrifice me if it will help you in any way. But let me tell you something. Elias Droom has been smart enough to cover every one of his tracks, even if he hasn't been able to cover yours. I can't perform miracles. You don't seem [illegible] keen to bring about the family explosion as you were, I observe."

"By heavens, I can't bear the thought of that boy—oh, well, close up the office as soon as you like."

After he was safely out of the office Elias Droom glided into the private office, drew forth his bunch of keys and opened his employer's desk. A big revolver lay in the top drawer. The old clerk quickly removed the five cartridges and as deftly substituted a new set of them in their stead. The new ones were minus the explosive power. He grinned as he replaced the weapon and closed the desk. Dropping the cartridges into his coat pocket, he returned to his own desk, chuckling as he set to work on his papers.

"I won't betray him to the law, but I've fixed it so that he can't escape it in that way."

Bansemer's man informed him upon his arrival home that Mr. Graydon would not be in for dinner. He had left word that Mrs. Cable was very much improved and that he and Miss Cable were going out for a long drive—in a hansom. It was his intention to dine with Mr. and Miss Cable very informally.

Bansemer sat in surly silence for a long time trying to read. A fierce new jealousy was growing in his heart. It was gradually dawning upon him that the Cables had alienated his son's affections to no small degree. The fear grew upon him that Graydon ultimately would go over to them, forgetting his father in the love for the girl. Resentment, strong and savage, flooded his heart. He could eat no dinner. He was full of curses for the fate which forced him to dine alone while his son was off rejoicing with people whom he was beginning to hate with a fervor that pained him. Jealousy, envy, malice, fired his blood.
